THE BOY AND THE GRASS.

When we have a dry spell and for several days rain does not fall, the lawns begin to suffer. We get out our garden hose and morning and night give the lawn a liberal supply of water, from the city reservoir.

The grass seems to be dying and it is yellow and seared in places. Our neighbor philosopher says that the grass is not dead and will not die unless we get too much water on it, but that the brown spots of this year will be the healthiest and strongest next year.

Said he: "The reason for this is this: while you keep the grass furnished with all the nutriment it needs, it will not rustle for itself, and the roots will take no hold, but if you let it alone the roots will extend deeper to where they can find nourishment, and a better crop will be the result. If the grass had not been so much watered in the past, it would not now show signs of decay so soon after a short drought."

We have pondered considerably over what that man said, and think that the valuable suggestion might well be applied to other things than lawn making.

Take the average boy, for instance: Just so long as his every want is supplied for him, without any exertion on his part, just so long will he refuse to grow from within, but will depend entirely upon outside resources for his sustenance. Take away the artificial support, and the boy will find himself and his manliness, and will do those things that will aid him in the time to come, when the great struggle that comes to every man sooner or later, will have to be fought out to the bitter end.

On many occasions in the past we have set forth the handicap which the son of the rich man works under, and how, in the majority of cases, the beautiful, hopeful, energetic, ambitious, clean-minded and moral son of the poor man outstrips him in the race. Because of the demands made upon him in early life, his roots have taken deeper hold, and he has learned to draw from the source of all supply those things that are necessary to the growth and development of the real man.

The son of the rich man too often depends upon sources entirely outside of himself; the poor are compelled by stern necessity to rely upon themselves, and when, in after life, the struggle for the ascendancy ensues, the fellow who has relied upon himself invariably proves the master.

That is the thought that came to us from the suggestion made by our neighbor that if the grass were let alone it would strike its roots deeper down in the soil in search of nourishment.

TO LIVE IN PEACE.

A woman may accept a man in haste, but a man chooses his wife at leisure. It is to be supposed that when a man asks a woman to marry him he has decided that he cannot live without her. If he can't live without her it is certainly his duty to do his best to live with her. This is not always so easy as it sounds. Here are a few simple rules for the wise husband:

- If your wife smiles at you smile at her.
If she smiles at you laugh with her.
If she is angry soothe her.
If she is gracious thank her.
If she is wise praise her.
If she is economical commend her.
If she is extravagant explain to her.
If she sacrifices her pleasures for you, be generous with her.
If she is beautiful appreciate her.
If she cooks well compliment her.
If she is lonely stay at home with her.
If she is tired tend her.
If she doubts you be frank with her.
If she grieves be tender with her.
If she is hysterical ignore her.
If she is flighty be firm with her.
If she deceives you be harsh with her.
If she is saucy kiss her.
If she is good adore her.

WHAT THE PEOPLE LIKE IN ROOSEVELT.

Privilege has had some fairly hard raps of late, and the American people have a pretty clear idea that Mr. Roosevelt will give it a few more before he lays down his office. Both those who buy what they should not have and those who bulldoze are being taught their place in a democracy where each is as good as his fellow man, but no better. The gentry in the government printing office who had expected to turn the public service into a "closed shop," and to admit and reject whom they chose, were brought up with a round turn in the Miller case. The people liked that tremendously. The greatest magnates in the land, aided by the shrewdest lawyers, organized a huge corporation in violation of law. The supreme court, at the instance of the administration, ordered it to dissolve. The people liked that tremendously too. There is a conviction throughout the country that the interests of the plain people, who ask nothing of the government but ample protection in their right to earn an honest living in their own way, are looked after by Mr. Roosevelt, and that he does not forget them when under pressure from the political and personal representatives of privilege-hunters of all kinds. Different as Mr. Roosevelt is in so many ways from Lincoln and McKinley, he is like those two great men in his intuitive insight into the mind of the plain people. Mr. Roosevelt's scholarship has not blunted his human sympathy, and he has no subtlety of mind behind which to hide his natural simplicity and directness. X-RADIUMS

The Ohio Democrats will probably fall to get Harmon-y.

The Prohibitionists want Miles. The only thing that commends him is his attitude on the canteen question.

Those squadrons have a hard time of it keeping out of one another's way. The war will be ended before they get together.

Frank C. Baker made a record breaking campaign at the late election but he will discount that this fall. It's 30,000 or over without a doubt.

Oregon City is trying the oil experiment on a part of its streets. The attention of the Court street improvement committee is called to this item.

There is far too much needless discussion of our ills and ills—in public and at our home tables. A woman has the faculty of, at least, bearing a headache without a murmur. But preserve us from a man with a headache!

The congress of women at Berlin has been discussing the marriage vow of obedience. How very unnecessary! As though any one ever kept it. What an antiquated ideal! A man would feel not only uncomfortable but very dowdy if his wife were suddenly to begin obeying him.

If Oregon people would put in more time in discussing needed improvements and allow the "old land marks" including "the first school houses, etc." to go their way, the state would be several years forward in the march of progress. A few antediluvian cranks seem to have enthused an overdose of "old" interest into the entire state.

Did it Ever Happen to You.

"I had ridden five blocks, and the conductor was coming, when I discovered that I had an old transfer, a plugged nickel and no more," said the business man. "Funny the thoughts that run through a fellow's head. I began to perspire, and I just knew that the conductor was on to me. I know how a crook feels when he commits his first crime. I wondered if there was a criminal streak in my family anywhere, and if the conductor had conned my history back to some ancestor who was probably hanged for sheep stealing. I remember that when I was a boy I used to steal apples and grapes, and once I got away with a wheelbarrow load of cantaloupes. I perspired some more. A hand stretched out to me. Would I give him the plugged nickel or the bad transfer? And what would the conductor do? And how would it look for a respectable citizen to be put off a car? And would he call a policeman? I had a sinking sensation when I passed over the bad money, and I gave a gasp as the conductor took it without looking, gave the cash register a jolt and passed out that nickel in change to a man who was reading his evening paper, all in three swift moves.

"And then I felt joy in my breast, because I had succeeded in 'doing' the street railroad company. I wonder if other folks ever feel that way, or if I am the only self-respecting citizen with a conscience that contains a streak of yellow?"

BREEZY OCEAN BREEZES

Movements of Salem People at the Popular Summer Resort

(Editorial Correspondence.) Newport, July 6.—Miss Edith Halley, Eugene Halley and Albert Southwick are visiting their homesteads on the Siletz.

Mrs. S. C. Dyer went out to Salem this week to lay in a summer's supply of provisions for her homestead in the mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckner, Miss Nettie Beckner and Mrs. Folsom are late arrivals on these rejuvenating beaches.

N. J. Damon is painting his cottage, and before the summer is over will be running a full-fledged Waldorf-Astoria.

Miss Louise Southwick has gone to her homestead in the Siletz.

Mrs. William Hilleary, of Turner, is among the Newport beach idlers.

Col. J. M. Cooper, of Independence, is visiting his constituents.

The cottages are nearly all full, and the hotels have nearly all their rooms taken. The people come and go, and there is always room for a few hundred more.

A block of 100 feet front has been bought on the main street to erect a lodging house.

The ball Fourth of July evening, given by the Indian School Band, was a great success, and the crowd had to be forced out of the building by police persuasion, as they would not let the boys quit playing.

The band will give three dances a week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening. They go to play at the Oregon City Chautauqua a few days on July 11th, but leave an orchestra for the dancing parties.

Geo. O. Hall has moved his livery down from Toledo again for the summer. He has fine teams and riding horses.

Miss Nachtwey, of Lansing, Iowa, who went into the mountains with Mr. and Mrs. Damon, broke the record by walking in and out 14 miles by the wagon trail.

Do it today.

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'till tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TODAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists. At Dr. Stone's drug stores.

PROPOSALS FOR WOOD, U. S. INDIAN SCHOOL SERVICE, Chemawa, Oregon, July 2, 1904.

Sealed proposals, endorsed "Proposals for Wood," and addressed to the undersigned at Chemawa, Oregon, will be received at this school until 2 p. m. of Wednesday, July 27, 1904, for furnishing and delivering at this school, as required during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, about 2000 cords of wood, as per specifications obtainable at this school. Bidders will state in their bids the kind of wood proposed to be furnished, and the price per cord. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids or any part of any bid if deemed for the best interest of the service. Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or draft upon some United States depository or solvent national bank, made payable to the order of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for at least five per cent of the amount of the proposal, said check to be forfeited to the United States in case any bidder or bidders receiving an award shall fail to execute promptly a satisfactory contract, otherwise to be returned to the bidder. Bids accompanied by cash in lieu of certified check will not be considered. For further information apply to THOS. W. POTTER, Superintendent.

TELLS LEAGUE STORY

Eugene Paper Writes Obituary of the Blues

The Eugene Register says: Midst the boom of noisy celebration guns, the fizz and pop of firecrackers and the wish of illuminating rocket, the Oregon State Baseball League went up and out.

The league was putting up first-class ball, but somehow it has been an off season in the valley for the national pastime. Some attribute the failure of the league to the four-game series, which, it is claimed, no small town can stand, as the interest lags on account of a surfeit. To this condition is coupled the fact that higher salaries than heretofore were paid for talent. On a two-game series last year Salem not only paid her salaries and had money left, but also purchased baseball grounds. The only reason that Sacramento is not in the big league is because that town could not stand the drag of four games per week. The expenses of keeping a team is no more, but in a small town all the fans cannot attend every game, and nothing kills sport quicker than empty benches. We doubt if the Eugene theatre, with a larger clientele to draw from, and offering the variety of a change of attraction each time, could have a corporal's guard attendance toward the flag end of a six-weeks' booking of four shows every other week.

After two experimental seasons of valley baseball it begins to look as though patrons of baseball will not be able to launch the pastime on a permanent basis until a team of resident players is secured. By resident players we mean baseball talent which does not depend entirely on baseball for a livelihood. Local patrons of baseball deplore the fact that the pastime has become a dead letter just at the time our pitching staff is at its best, but such are the fortunes of baseball.
