

WRITES ABOUT OREGON

Southern Editor Gives the West a Fine Send Off

From the editorial pen of Clarence Ousley, of the Fort Worth (Texas) Record of recent date, the following article is significant as regards Oregon, its climate, resources, and its coming exposition. It is written by a man who has seen Oregon and knows whereof he speaks. The article is eloquent in more ways than one. It reflects Mr. Ousley's characteristic fire and poetry, and as all Oregonians can testify, with the writer, is founded upon the truth.

Mr. Ousley, who is a close personal friend of Manager Tom Richardson of the Commercial club of Portland, who will speak in Salem tonight in one of the best known writers in the south, and his paper, the Record, is one of the most widely read. This latter fact redounds to the glory of Portland, and Oregon in connection with the great Lewis and Clark centennial, to be celebrated here in 1905. Under the heading "Portland Exposition" it reads:

"Hardly is the St. Louis exposition well under way, commemorating the centennial of the Louisiana purchase by Mr. Jefferson, when attention is directed to another exposition celebrating another territorial achievement by that many-minded man, author of the Declaration of Independence, founder of the University of Virginia, President of the United States, father of the Democratic party and builder of an empire—viz., an exposition to be held at Portland, Or., next year as the centennial of the Lewis and Clark exploration which President Jefferson inspired and which resulted in the lawful acquisition of the great Northwest territory composing the present states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and parts of Montana and Wyoming.

"We hardly know which to admire the most—the foresight of Jefferson, the courage of the explorers or the enterprise of these far Western people who have undertaken on the other side of the continent a colossal expedition to cost $5,000,000, and to cover 180 acres of ground and 230 acres of lake. They are all—Jefferson, the explorers and the Portland people—parts of the great American nation. They typify and embody the elements that have made it what it is—the greatest achievement of human endeavor since time began—the best government, the highest civilization, the richest possessions, the loftiest ideals—the wonder and the envy of the world.

"The Portland exposition will receive many of the exhibits of the St. Louis fair, and it will be that extent be international. New York and several other states have already made liberal appropriations, and the United States government will make an exhibit to cost half a million. But the chief attraction to visitors from this side will be the products and scenery of the Pacific coast and these are worth a six days' journey to see.

"It is all novel from Los Angeles to Seattle—the tropical climate and fruits in Southern California, the summer chill of the Golden Gate, even the hot blasts of the Mojave desert—the marvelous mountainous coast, the cold Pacific and the warm air; but Oregon is the most fascinating and the sublimest of all, and Portland is the chief jewel of her gorgeous crown.

"To cross the continent by either route is to endure desert and heat uncomfortable to say the least, but at the end of the journey to break upon splendid mountains in velvet green, to wind in and out among their waterfalls and valleys, to scent the odors of a million flowers as rank as the jungles of Africa, but as delicate as the tints of a hothouse, to follow the majestic Columbia with its matchless salmon fishing, to look upon the cloud-kissed peaks, to daily in the meadows of the Willamette valley, rich in grain and fruit, to enjoy daylight far into what elsewhere is nighttime, to feel the tingle of the Arctic zone, which is so near in distance, and yet so far in climatic influence, to dwell in perpetual springtime, dewy and fragrant, to find in this other land a great civilization, monster industries, thriving commerce, and a people as generous as the nature that makes them big and strong and kind—that is to be in Oregon and Portland, to catch a glimpse of a new world, and the thrill of a new life.

"On all the continent there is no more delightful place than this flowering city of the Pacific coast, and exposition or no exposition, a visit there will be an education and a rejuvenation that cannot be found elsewhere in the world."

WOMAN FOUND DEAD

But On Examination She Was Only Sleeping on the Sands

Newport, Or., July 13. (Special).—Great excitement was created at Nye Creek Monday by the report spreading that a woman had been found dead on the sandhills. Merchant Loomis and the young man who runs one of Jack Porter's meat markets headed a party who followed a group of excited white-faced children, and by the time they got out to the sand dunes there were nearly a hundred men, women and children, campers, cripples and even people on crutches. The woman lay stretched out on the bare, white sand, her lower limbs partly covered with sand. Mr. Loomis noticed however that she was breathing, in fact sleeping soundly, and almost audibly snoring. In a moment as the crowd came close around she awoke.

"Why, it is Miss French of Albany!" exclaimed several, and that astonished and popular young society woman rubbed her eyes, and was very much alive.

She had gone to sleep on the warm sand dunes. The young people with her had partially covered her with sand, and left her. Other children found her and she lay so still they thought her dead and thus the report got started.

The beautiful sleeper who created this excitement was none other than the locally famous Albany girl, Miss Eva French, the pretty summer girl who adorns the front page of the Southern Pacific and Corvallis and Eastern railroad summer resort advertising folder. Miss French has the reputation of being one of the most charming seaside young women that any of the Pacific coast beaches can boast of possessing, and was the innocent cause of a passing excitement.

A Gamblers' Holdup.
At Newport are several money games running and Saturday night some of the practical jokers among the gambling fraternity put up a hold-up game that came near resulting seriously. They got a well-fixed young man from Dallas to carry a small grip over to Nye Creek into which they counted $600 in silver and then changed it for part of a bag of shot and iron washers, that clinked like dollars, all tied up and sealed in another shot bag. Half way over there leaped out of the greasewood brush, where the trail was darkest, two men with masks and revolvers and it was "stand and deliver."

The young man made some resistance but was overpowered and the robbers got away with the grip sack full of supposed coin. When the story got out the Newport chief of police was aroused and some of the force were out beating the hills nearly all night. Sheriff Jim Ross was down from Toledo but when he learned who the complainants were he walked softly away from the job. A warrant was got out by the gamblers, charging the young man with getting away with the $600, supposed to be in the grip. In the melee he had recognized one of the masked men and it dawned on his mind that he was a pretty close friend of the gamblers. He swore out a warrant for the holdup man charging him with an assault with a dangerous weapon.

Before the cases could be brought before Police Judge Oscar Olsson of Newport the whole matter was pulled off the stocks and the practical jokers had to set up the oysters all around. But the Dallas young man was scared out of a year or two of growth by his experiences.

American Peaches for England.
New York, July 13.—England is in the American market for peaches, and arrangements are under way for the exportation of part of the large crop that has been produced here. The peaches from the Ozark mountains seem to be the most favored for export.

CHICKENS MAKE MONEY

California Town Has Thousands of the Feathered Tribe

"A town of 6000 inhabitants devoted entirely to the poultry business" says a recent visitor to California.

"Between Petaluma and Santa Rosa one will see little else than chickens and chicken-coops along the railroad. But the business is making money for those engaged in it, and the poultry-raisers figure on a net profit of $1 a year on each hen. Some of these ranches have as many as 10,000 hens scattered over them, so the owners must be doing pretty well.

"You will see little coops strung out in all directions for miles, and the poultry seems to run to the White Leghorn variety principally.

"San Francisco which is across the bay from Petaluma, is the great center of the California egg industry, and shipments are made to all parts of the world. Eggs, as a rule, are higher here than in Portland, and in winter 25 cents a dozen is the ruling price. This is in cash, not barter or trade, and there is no quibbling over the price.

"Sonoma county, where these poultry ranches are so numerous, was, 40 years ago, given entirely to wheat and potato raising, but now this industry is only of secondary importance. The chickens have the country, and are likely to retain it so long as the poultry business pays so well."

Decomposed Body Found.
The badly decomposed body of William H. Miller, a bicycle repairer, of Albany was found at his home Monday afternoon, the man having evidently passed away early Sunday morning. Miller has been drinking on the Fourth, and since that time had been rather under the weather. He lived with his parents, and they having gone to the seacoast, he occupied the house alone. He was seen Saturday afternoon, and some parties allege they saw him early Sunday morning.

Since that time no one has seen him, and when found dead the body was in such a bad state as to warrant the belief that he had died not later than Sunday morning. A coroner's jury decided that death had come from natural causes, and owing to the state of the corpse burial was made immediately after the inquest. Deceased leaves a father and mother and three sisters, one of them a resident of Portland to mourn his death. He was unmarried. Mr. Miller was borne in New York state 48 years ago, and came to Albany with his parents in '67.

Save Future Dairy Stock.
A great many fine spring calves are being shipped as veal to the Portland and Puget Sound markets by Steusloff Bros., of this city. It is a pity to sell many of these fine spring calves that inside of two years would make milkers, and would add materially to our dairy interests. All farmers who are situated so as to keep heifer calves should do so, as there will be an enormous demand for milk and cream next year.

Newberg Busy Building.
Last week the Newberg Graphic took a census of the number of houses which have been put up within the last year, finding that, including additions, the number ran above 80. Every man who can wield a hammer is a carpenter in Newberg these days and contractors are growing gray-headed trying to keep up with their work.

THE POWER OF STEAM.
Many May See But It Takes Genius to Realize.
When James Watt saw the steam causing the kettle lid to jump up and down he said "There must be power in that steam that it can lift such a weight."
There was.
Millions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery.
Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandruff, Falling Hair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which eats the roots of human hair.
Newbro's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores the hair to its natural state.
