ANXIOUS TO GET HOME

Mrs. Maybrick Wants to Rest When She Gets to America

London, Aug. 13.—The London Daily Chronicle this morning prints an interview with Mrs. Florence Maybrick, obtained in Southern France, where the American woman has been spending her time since he release from prison in England. Mrs. Maybrick is described as being clear-witted and outspoken, and is mildly robust, despite the years spent behind prison walls. Her face is somewhat drawn, showing the traces of grief and suffering, while her eyes have the listless appearance customary after the monotonous routine of prison life. The Chronicle, however, declares Mrs. Maybrick has every appearance of confidence in her demeanor and an entire absence of nervousness or embarrassment. Her first remark to the interviewer, according to the Chronicle, was a request that he express her thanks for the congratulations she has received from all parts of the world on her release.

"Please tell every one," she is quoted as saying, "that I am as firm in protesting my innocence of the accusation on which I was imprisoned as the day I was sentenced, and am praying for the time to come when that innocence will be proved to the world."

Speaking of the incidents of her imprisonment, Mrs. Maybrick declared she had been shown nothing but kindness by the officials, and recalled visits by Lord Rothschild, Home Secretary Asquith and Ridley, Lord Russell and others, of whose efforts in her behalf she speaks in the most grateful terms. She said as soon as certain legal matters in which she is interested are disposed of, she will visit friends and then travel.

Asked if she would change her name, Mrs. Maybrick said: "I do not know; I am afraid I shall have little peace while I bear the name of Maybrick. Let me die out of the memory of people on both sides of the Atlantic. I have suffered enough, God knows." Mrs. Maybrick declared she was most anxious to get to the United States, saying: "I shall feel happier there."

About a reconciliation with her children, Mrs. Maybrick said it was too early to say, as there were many things to be considered before that could be decided.

Mrs. Maybrick Sails.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—A report from Antwerp this afternoon says that Mrs. Maybrick embarked at 3 o'clock today for New York under an assumed name.

Next week they will build the Ferry street switch to the new car barn south of the Wilamette hotel and also tear up the narrow gauge line on State street to Winter.

The Yew Park car now only runs to State street, transfer being made there with other lines. The work of widening that branch will be pushed to an early completion.
