Second Annual Assembly of the Northwest

Held at Newport, the Peerless Gem of All Pacific Coast Summer Resorts

Newport, Aug. 23.—The crowds continue to pour into Newport, and it is evident that warm weather and smoke in the valleys will keep up the season far into September. Saturday night there was a larger arrival than usual, nearly 200 coming over on the train, mostly three-day visitors, but not a few campers. The first rains will bring in the salmon, and then the greatest sport of the year begins, as trolling from a boat for the royal fish in salt water is the kingliest of sports. It is enjoyed by ladies and children, as well as by gentlemen. The tomcod and hallocks are swarming in the bay, with the first schools of herring putting in an appearance, while hake can be caught on the sandy beaches with your hands. The rock-cod and channel cod are numerous, and the steamer Roscoe takes great fishing parties out over the bar. The beautiful launch Eagle, built by Capt. Holland, of Coos Bay, is carrying excursions daily up the Yaquina river, while Capt. Evans has his hands full carrying parties to South Beach, and by his hack lines down the fishing streams south.

Only a hairpin.

The following composition is from the pen of a beach-comber and confirmed picnicker, who picked up a lady's hairpin on the sands by the ocean, and broke out in Browlie rymes in honor of the occasion. There is no telling what he would have written if he had found the wearer herself:
Adorned this the brow of a blushing bride
With rice-bombarded hubby by her side?
Or did mischievous Cupid pull this pin
And loosen a witch-lock to help him win?
Or held it a charming twist or braid
On the classical brow of an Eugene maid?
Or fastened a fascinating pomadour
Built around a yard of rat or more?
Fell this token from an angel's hands
On Nye Creek's wind-swept glittering sands?
Or from towering pyramid of nut-brown hair
As worn by Salem belles so fair?
Did it hold a wreath of tropical curls
That adorn the heads of Albany girls?
Or a touzinet of ebony locks
Waving like sea weeds on the rocks?
Held it the strands that never fade.
The jet black tressure of Indian maid?
Or sweetest of all the silvery hair
Billowing over a complexion fair?
Indian Teachers' Institute.

The annual institute of the Northwest for teachers and officers of Indian schools was opened Tuesday evening at the opera house. Assistant Superintendent Campbell, of Chemawa, in charge, and Supt. John McQuoin, of Siletz, secretary. Miss Estelle Reel, of Wyoming, national head of Indian schools, is present, and has for her stenographer Miss Jennette Booth, of Salem. There are good crowds at the day and night sessions, the Indian band furnishing the music, and nearly every session winding up with a program of music and dancing. At the opening session speeches of welcome were made by Prof. Horner, of Corvallis; Supt. Jones, of the blind school at Salem; ex-Governor Geer, and E. Hofer, of The Journal. The responses by Supt. McQuoin and Miss Reel were very happy, and all were put in the best of humor. A moonlight excursion on the bay with the band in attendance will be the happy conclusion of the institute Wednesday evening.

Colony of Poles. A party of Poles headed by Mr. Wojciech Posinozny, of 99 Dearborn street, Chicago, went through Salem yesterday on their way home. They had been out to explore some lands in Lincoln county, held by the W. D. Mixer real estate company at Blodgett. They represent 300 families whom they expect to land in Oregon, as they are very much pleased with western Oregon. These Polish people speak German and represent a very desirable class of immigrants, hard working people who will convert the forests and hill lands of our state into farms and homes for a thrifty and prosperous population.

GOOD PRICES PREVAIL

The Waterville (N. Y.) Times reports the following Eastern hop conditions:
The weather is still favorable for a fine quality of hops, and there will be many fine growths.
Buyers are very anxious that the growers do not get in a hurry to pick their hops. They say it is a splendid crop, and should not be picked when green, and thus a good quality turned into a medium, if not a lower grade output. Growers are emphatically warned against committing the folly of too early picking.

The market here continues quiet, brewers not buying much, as they are awaiting the advent of the new crop. Stocks of '03 here, however, are so small that prices are holding firm. Reports from England indicate no improvement in the conditions, and some authorities now claim that 380,000 cwts. may be the outside figure. On the continent, however, conditions are much better, especially in Austria and Belgium, and it is now estimated that the continent will have between 150,000 and 200,000 cwts. more than last year. Picking of the early varieties has already commenced on the continent. In New York state crop continues as well as before and picking of seedlings will begin about the 16th inst. In the Sacramento valley, California, picking is now in full blast, and some new hops have already been shipped East from there. The rest of California continues doing well.
