WRECKED FARMERS STABLE

The barn on the place of T. J. Brackett, about four miles below Eugene, near the river road, was badly wrecked by a charge of dynamite or other explosives Sunday morning about 4 o'clock. The charge was placed under a buggy in a shed adjoining the barn, and the vehicle and shed were literally blown to pieces. The barn was pretty badly demolished also, but not completely. There is no clue to the perpetrators of this dastardly deed. The officers are now working on the case.

The detonation of the explosion was terrific. It was heard by many people in Eugene, and everyone thought it was in the city. The police officers were almost certain that some safe was being blown up, but, after examining all the bank buildings, and looking around for an hour or two, could find nothing. They did not know where the explosion was until well along in the day on Sunday.

 An exciting runaway occurred on High and Court streets for a short time today, and, but for the presence of mind of J. E. Shields, would have resulted in a several had mixups. The horse started near the Salem Hotel, and turned from High into Court street. Several other vehicles were directly in the path of the dashing steed, when Mr. Shields jumped in front of it and grabbed the bit. VETERANS HOLD MEETING

Ed. Journal: At a meeting of the Indian War Veterans today, we find the statements made in the papers in regard to T. A. Wood being the only grand commander that the India war veterans ever had, to be a mistake, for Thomas B. Waite was organizer, followed by Col. Kelsay, Colonel Cornelius, Captain John F. Miller, T. C. Shaw and T. A. Wood. Now, while we regret the death of Mr. Wood, we regret that such men as composed our rank file, who were real and worthy veterans, to be erroneously ignored. A movement was also put on foot to erect a monument of the four-days' battle ground on the Walla Walla, near the Whitman mission, besides suitable marks for other battle grounds, for which all Indian War Veterans will freely contribute. J. H. ELGIN.

Got Everything But Birds.
 Two popular young men of this city, who have boasted long and loud of their prowess as pheasant shooters, and who even went so far as to invite their friends to a pheasant feast, to occur on their return, started for the scene of action Saturday at 4 o'clock, armed with young cannons and equipped with a pack of dogs, and the necessary amount of snake bite. Upon reaching their destination they were joined by two men who have lived in the midst of the pheasant country all their lives, and whose accuracy at pheasant hunting is only eclipsed by the two Salem young men. After hunting all day the four returned with the biggest bag of the season, one bird. The boys say that it was not their fault that they did not get more, for they had a bad accident during the day. One of them had his foot run over by the buggy wheel, and, of course, the sympathy of the other three impaired their marksmanship. If you don't believe it ask "Doc" or "Brigham."

The Wearin' of the Brown
 A Color Hint to the Wide-Awake

In cities and towns they're wearin' the browns. You've had blue serges dinned into your ears for a life-time; and now comes the brown serge; as pretty a piece of goods as you wish to see; in as pleasing a style as any one could wish to have made.

Brown is the rage. A sensible color for fall or winter. Looks warm and comfortable. But more than that, they look the essence of "swellness," and they are. There are no end of brown patterns to select from; and brown shades of different hues. If you like other colors better, it's up to you. From $15 to $25 takes the choicest fall suits. They have the Salem Woolen Mill Store label on them, and that is an additional good word for them, and means much more in the matter of quality than you are aware of.

You will find your choice in the swell new brown effects, in both solid colors, plaids and other fancy effects. From
