BARGAIN BABIES.

If babies were for sale the most inveterate bargain-hunting woman in the world would not look for a bargain baby. She would want the best baby that could be bought, regardless of price.

Every woman naturally craves a healthy, handsome child, and her craving can be gratified if she will but remember that the child's health is her own gift, and to give health she must

"My wife had been sick nearly all her life," says Mr. E. E. Price, of Petersburg, Menard Co., Illinois, Box 37, "and after trying everything I could think of I made up my mind to try 'Favorite Prescription.' I got six bottles, which my wife took, a tablespoonful three times a day, until the baby came. She felt better after taking the first bottle, and when baby was born he weighed nine and a half pounds. Today he is six months old and weighs twenty-two pounds. He is as good a child as any one could wish. The doctor says he is as healthy as any baby could be, and also says the use of your 'Favorite Prescription' was the cause of such a healthy baby."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for the use of delicate women.

THINGS AT THE FAIR

Salmon From Oregon One of the Chief Features

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—Seeing so many New Jersey mosquitoes, lobsters, marine worms, Dungeness crabs from Seattle and pink salmon eggs from the Columbia river has given me a "creepy feeling" and made me so nervous I can't sleep. But John has his mind set on the mosquito exhibit and we had to see it, and as a consequence I am seized with an irresistible impulse to "swat" something every time I hear a buzzing sound.

But the mosquito display was interesting after all. We found it in the forestry and fisheries building and also found much to our surprise that this was one of the most interesting and instructive buildings at the fair. The exhibit is not intended to convey the impression that mosquitoes are New Jersey's only product. If my memory serves me right New Jersey also produces a good brand of lightning, at least I have often heard "New Jersey lightning" referred to as being something awful rapid. But the lightning is not on exhibition here. The mosquito exhibit is the work of the New Jersey experiment station and is intended to show the methods that have been put into operation for exterminating the pest. There are millions of mosquitoes in bottles and pinned to cards, ring-legged salt marsh mosquitoes, dapple-wing mosquitoes, pitcher plant mosquitoes, common house mosquitoes, woodland pool mosquitoes, enough to raise blisters on the face of common humanity. There were large charts showing the mosquito's digestive system, also a cross section of his launcet, or "proboscis," a foot long. There was a large picture of a mosquito "in the act of biting."

"I hope you notice that is a female mosquito," said John. "The male mosquito is as harmless as a Scotch Collie dog. He never bites any one."

By this time I was inspecting the salmon hatching which showed the entire process of hatching the Columbia river Chinook salmon from pink eggs about the size of peas. Steel baskets were sunk in running water showing the stages of development from the larvae to the live minnows. An interesting feature of the salmon exhibit was the miniature canning factory of the Alaska Association. In this building we saw Dungeness crabs and all sorts of marine life from the state of Washington, marine worms and deep sea reptiles by the biological association of the United Kingdom, and all varieties of growing oysters and clams. The oysters in the Virginia exhibit taxed John's credulity so heavily that he pulled a measuring rule from his pocket and asked the privilege of measuring one of the bivalves. Like all men John has the "measuring habit." He wanted to measure the great picture by Rembrandt, "The Night Watch," brought here by Holland and exhibited in the Rembrandt house, and it was with great difficulty that I restrained him.

But permission to measure the oyster was readily granted and we found it measured just eight and one-half inches across the shell. What a glorious boon one of these Virginia oysters would be to a "church sociable." Half the oyster could be used for the soup and the rest served in steaks or cutlets.

Here we saw specimens of animals and woods indigenous to every state as well as exhibits from Japan, Germany and South American countries. Here are Georgia and Oregon white pine, Montana spruce and cottonwood, California redwood, cherry, birch, ash, white cedar, and a thousand other varieties of woods native to American soil.

Saves Two From Death. "Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for Coughs and Colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by J. C. Perry. Trial bottles free.
