VISITED HIS OLD HOME

Chas. H. Burgraf, the architect, formerly of this city, but now a resident of Albany, writes the Herald of that city, from the East, where he is visiting, as follows:

"We are in Omaha, a real city, and this morning it is raining a regular Oregon mist, consequently we feel natural, our webs are softening and the scales on our backs loosening. We stopped off in Hastings, our old home and school town. What a difference in 15 years. It is just as Longfellow said, 'All scattered, all have fled, some are married, some are dead.' When we got off the train and started up Main street, we felt the same as old Rip Van Winkle, after 15 years of peaceful sleep in the 'Williamette valley,' we awoke in the 'Queen City of the Plains.' Everything changed—new places and new faces. I suggested we visit the cemetery, perhaps we would find some one there we once knew. After a while I ran into an old resident who knew me, and the first thing was, 'Oh, yes, this is Charlie Burgraf. It was you and 'Doc' Alexander that stole Deacon Ringland's turkey the night before Thanksgiving, and put it in the preacher's coal shed. The preacher thought some one had made him a present, and killed the turkey, and Ringland found it out, and could not be convinced that the preacher did not steal it, and caused a big church row. Say, the lawyers used that incident in the Harlocker poisoning case to illustrate circumstantial evidence."

"I met a lady who was a classmate, and the first thing was, 'Remember when you and Will Jones (a preacher's son) one night crawled in a window of the new dormitory when the nigger janitor was sleeping there alone, and connected all the electric bells, and scared the coon white?' Pleasant memories? Well, yes."

"We left on next train for fear some lawed. No more visits to the 'old home town.' The next trip I make will be west or 'straight up.' We leave tomorrow morning for Chicago. Yours truly, C. H. BURGRAF."

Choyanski and O'Brien.
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 20.—Joe Choyanski, the veteran heavy-weight, and "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien are scheduled to come together in a 20-round fight tonight at the West End Athletic Club and the local ring followers, together with numerous visitors with sporting proclivities are looking forward to seeing a rattling good go. Notwithstanding the fact that he is one of the oldest fighters still in the ring, Choyanski has retained his pugilistic prowess to a marvelous degree and is counted upon to give the Philadelphian an interesting argument even if he does not succeed in winning the decision.

Weak, Nervous People.

We have received letters from all parts of the U. S. highly recommending Dr. Cass's Blood & Nerve Tonic, until the faith we had in the remedy has been fully sustained. We had confidence from the very beginning that this medicine should make cures, but lacked that assurance that comes after many successful trials. Now that we have been upheld in our belief we want to impart to others our confidence. Nervous and unstable people, weak, fleshless people, pimply, pale, or sallow people, are all victims of weak, watery blood. Make new, rich blood, to be forced through the system by the way of the arteries, and disease cannot remain. This Tonic cures disease by giving you strength to resist it. All druggists sell it for 75c per box, or 3 boxes for $2. The tablets are to be taken after each meal. They turn the food you eat into rich red blood. Persons who take this Tonic gain in good solid flesh from 1 to 2 lbs. per week.

For sale by Dr. C. S. Stone, druggist.

Reply to Prof. Drew.

Ed. Journal: The Willamette University pedagogue who is publishing a little campaign sheet for the Prohibition cause, seems to be an unworthy representative of what was once considered a decent institution in this town. We certainly have a right to assume that a teacher in such an institution represents some elements of morality which would command the respect, not only of adults, but of his school as well, yet such is hardly the case, if we are to judge him by his product. In the first place, by implication and by an adroit and deceptive method of quoting our President, he leaves the inference that Theo. Roosevelt is a champion of his cause. Next he approaches the realm of the sporting class by charging everybody with being a liar, and branding every statement with which he does not coincide as a lie. In fact, his little sheet is full of abuse from beginning to end. People who disagree with him are "liars," "cranks," "peevishers," "calamity howlers," and other names that fall far below the vocabulary of an educated gentleman, or a teacher in a moral institution. He attacks the figures given from other sources, and in his desperate effort to prove them lies, he resorts to the cunning methods of a deceiver and hypocrite. He attacks the statement that the saloons of Salem virtually contribute $10,000 per annum to the city's revenues, and to counteract this says there are simply 16 saloons at $400, and hence the revenue cannot be more than $6400. Of course, this dispenser of truth and morality does not recognize the fact that about $2000 is paid by the saloon men alone for slot machine licenses, to say nothing of the other items in this class. He simply assails figures not his own, and sets himself up as "holier than thou" apostle of decency. His figures are flatly deceiving, and yet he appeals to the citizens of Salem to take his word in preference to that of anyone else. By a deceptive combination of figures he attempts to show that, with the saloons abolished, Salem will not be short $10,000 in licenses, but $4900. And then by further line of arguments, tries to show that the growth of the city's valuations will readily make up that insignificant deficit. In the first place, his supposed deficit is a fiction, probably brought about by the juggling arts of his profession. The bold conclusion that valuations will increase enough to make up this amount is a hypothesis unworthy of the merest novice in economics. He knows, if he knows anything on such matters, that as a city increases in size and property valuation, public expenditures increase correspondingly. But let us assume that the property for taxation should increase without a corresponding increase of civic expenditures, as this gentleman seems to anticipate. Then would it not be equivalent to an increased valuation of one million dollars to raise $10,000?

But this sophistry is only on a par with his other lines of argument. If this gentleman will deceive in one respect, will he not deceive his fellow citizens in others? In the eyes of the law, a witness who is false in one instance is considered false in every instance, and it is only reasonable to apply this logic to the effects of this false prophet of morality. He assumes to know more than those who constantly deal with that subject. He arrogates to himself a greater knowledge of our laws than is possessed by any one else. He "knows more" about city finances than those who have been struggling with the problem for years. He is the only person in the community who has a correct idea of public morals, and he would like to have his neighbors and fellow citizens all look to him for direction in their moral and public welfare. He is not satisfied with condemning the saloon business, but must brand every man engaged in it as a "dispenser of insanity." He speaks of their ideas as sapient commentaries, and thus they would be more intelligently received by a "pair of tinging mules" than in the "maudlin audiences" to which they are ordinarily addressed. This so-called professor is a religious man. He takes every opportunity to occupy vacant pulpits. He believes in the book which tells us to hold no man in condemnation, yet rants around and tears down every member of the community with whom he does not agree. He preaches morality, yet perverts facts and the truth, and foments discord. His utterances would set neighbor against neighbor, husband against wife, father against son, and if his advice were heeded he would have chaos reign in the community.

Keysto in More Trouble.

The following was discovered today, on account of a desire to avoid notoriety being kept still for a day. Monday evening Chester Stevenson, of the S. P. force took a ride down the road on the gasoline tricycle. Coming back between 6 and 7 o'clock a man in the eastern part of the city stopped him and asked him for a ride. Just before they reached the depot the fellow, who was sitting behind him, grabbed Stevenson from behind and attempted to throw him off upon the ground, perhaps intending to skip with the tricycle or maybe rob him, but both went off together, and a live struggle ensued, the man, a big fellow, coming out on the bottom and crying enough. A description of him indicates that he is undoubtedly G. W. King, the man put in jail last evening on a 40-days' sentence.—Albany Democrat.

Killed Big Bear.

Caleb Woods killed a 300-pound bear out on the Woods Creek ranch last Saturday. Caleb resides in Big Elk, but went out to Woods Creek last week, and discovered that a bear was using what is known as the Starr place. He started his bear dogs on the track Saturday. In about an hour they raised him. After a chase of some length, the bear took a trail on which Caleb was stationed. By and by there was a rifle shot, and bruin was stretched at full length along the trail. Caleb waited until his bearship was within 15 feet before he fired.—Corvallis Times.

TO KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM.

Is the Only Possible Way of Having An Effective Cure.

If you see a woman or a man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin brittle hair, they owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herculite tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ burrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling and baldness, can only be had by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herculite. "Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 5c. in stamps for sample to The Herculite Co., Detroit, Mich.
