FORMAL OPENING OF WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY

Large Number Attend Exercises at the Chapel and Listen to Addresses

The formal opening of the Willamette University for this school year was held last night in the chapel, which was well filled with students and friends of the University. President Coleman, in the absence of Amedeo M. Smith, who was unable to be present, in words of praise, introduced the first speaker of the evening, Rev. Daniel L. Rader, D. D., editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate, of Portland. Dr. Coleman congratulated the audience upon having the privilege of hearing a man who had filled so many important positions, and who had been pre-eminently successful in all of them.

Dr. Rader's theme was "Higher Education, and Willamette's Relation to it in This State." He spoke at length, and very eloquently, many times being interrupted by applause. He said that "it was an easy thing to talk to an audience of old people, because their ways were already set, and whatever was said to them would not change the course of their lives, but in the case of young people it was very much different, and who ever undertakes to address an audience of young people takes a responsible task; for their lives may be compared to the block of marble which the sculptor must fashion into a complete statue. Higher education should mean a long, continued, persistent effort to get an understanding, not only of the concrete, but also of the practical, common, every day things of life. The students of today are the rulers of tomorrow, and every ruler should be a trained man. Trained not alone in the abstract, that has no application to practical life. The most uncommon thing in the world is the common sense." The world has no place for a girl who understands all about French, German, music, etc., but who does not know how to cook a meal for a hungry man.

"The tasks, problems and responsibilities which were handed down to us by our fathers we must now hand down to you, and, as American citizens you are now about to face the greatest problems that has ever been faced by any nation on earth. It is a responsible thing to take millions of people, throw them together and tell them to rule themselves. That responsibility is yours, and you cannot shirk it. The science of government is the most difficult science in the world, it requires a thorough knowledge of every thing that has ever happened in this world."

"In speaking of Willamette's relation to higher education in this state, he said that 'Willamette is the Jerusalem of Methodism in the Northwest.' No institution in the Northwest has turned out a greater galaxy of noble men and women."

Rev. L. E. Rockwell, the new presiding elder of this district, was next introduced, and in doing so President Coleman referred to him as the father of the greatest quarterback in the world, but that he was greater than his son. Dr. Rockwell said in part that "O'ld Willamette, the school of the fathers, had had a great past, and was sure to have a far more brilliant future. Every institution has had its beginning. What Harvard and Yale have been and are to the Atlantic coast, that has Willamette been and will be to Oregon and the Pacific Northwest. The greatest thing is the spirit, and the college spirit is bound to make the school of the fathers a great institution." Many times in the course of his address he was compelled to pause until the applause had subsided.

The Willamette quartet, consisting of Messrs. Miller, Chapler, Market and Zercher furnished two numbers, which were greatly appreciated by the large audience.

Raised Cotton in Oregon.

Oregon can claim another product, and may, in time, vie with the sunny South in the raising of cotton. Mr. Batty Cooper has raised this summer quite a patch at the residence of J. P. Rogers, on South Commercial street, and the bolls are fully developed and almost ready to burst with their snowy contents. Cotton raising will probably never prove a great industry in Oregon. But the fact that it has matured is proof of the splendid climate of the valley. Mr. Cooper says that it compares favorably with the cotton of his old home down South in size and color.

Aged Woman Dead.

Mrs. Adele Grosjean died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. Aufranc Friday night at 10:15 o'clock of old age. Deceased was born in Switzerland on July 14th, 1812, and aged 92 years, three months and seven days. She was twice married and had three daughters by the first union two of whom survive her, Mrs. Aufranc of this city and Mrs. Anna Hofbeinz of Kyle, Texas. She leaves 17 grandchildren and 38 great grandchildren. She resided with her daughter, near this city, for over 26 years. The funeral will be held at the residence tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the remains will be interred in Lee Mission cemetery.

Notice to the Public.

All persons are warned not to pay any money due to me in matters growing out of the McNary estate to E. M. Croisan, or anyone else, without my authority, nor to allow them to contract any debts in my name nor for anyone to pay them any money for me or on my account. A. A. McNARY. 10-6-dlmo

Spent Pleasant Evening.

The Silver Bell Circle, Women of Woodcraft, had a very pleasant time after the usual session of the lodge last evening. A musical program was given, which was much enjoyed. Piano solos were rendered by Misses Rachel Dove, Alice Warner, Christina Bernhardt and Mabel DeLong. Vocal solo, "Forgotten," by Miss Nina Johnson, accompanied by Miss Mary Davidson. Violin solo, Rachel Dove. Duets and pantomime, "Under the Anhauser Bush," by the little Misses Lahrman and Singleton. The last number was so heartily applauded that they gave another number, "Karama," and acted it out prettily.

CLEANLY WOMAN.

Erroneously Thinks by Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newber's Herpicide. Herpicide by killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Daniel J. Fry, Special Agent.

Believes in Prunes.

C. L. Allen, editor of the Gold Hill News, is in the city with his wife, guests of his uncle, C. O. Constable. Mr. Allen is one of the brightest paragraphers in the West, and owns a prune orchard near Salem. He has such confidence in prunes that he will buy another tract of that noble fruit.
