MANLEY PAID HIS FINE

The case of the State of Oregon vs. John Manley was called this morning at 1 o'clock before Police Judge Joshua, and the prisoner was arraigned on the charge of assault and battery, and entered the plea of simple assault. No objection being raised by the state, he was fined $5 and costs, the whole amounting to $8.75.

Last evening, before the papers were made out in the case, the court asked the complainant if it was not so that there had been ill-feeling between them for several months. The court seemed to be in possession of knowledge to that effect, and the man admitted that there had been. Whenupon the judge suggested that it was not a matter which to bring up the record of the court, and in fact would be better settled on the outside. But, on the insistence of Officer Penland, the necessary warrant and charge was made out and served.

Manley, when asked for his side of the story as to the trouble, said that the trouble really started during the week, although there had been ill-feeling between them for the past year, when Penland accused him of saying things detrimental to his character. This ran on until the night of the Republican primaries, when Manley was at a saloon talking to a friend of his who was tending bar, when Penland came through the door and Manley knowing of their past there would be trouble and not wanting to start anything in the room of his friend, stepped into a bar to avoid the officer, but, he says, the officer saw him and began calling him names, and although he was compelled to defend himself he did not in the course of starting a row, but he wanted man yesterday when he met Penland in South Salem and called him to account, which resulted in the encounter.

Candida.

The story of "Candida," which comes to the Grand on Saturday night, November 28, is as simple that it may be contained in a paragraph.

The Rev. Jim Mayer Mervil, an Englishman, becomes lame with lamia, after a three weeks' absence. He is accompanied by Eugene Marlowe, a youthful peer and a son of the peerage. Marlowe, too, is to tell "Candida" that he loves her well but instant, who presents a mirror to him instant, after a day of absence, the instant tells his wife and she goes away between him and the peer, and she chooses the manner—instant—while the peer goes out into the night.

The action leaves because the Rev. Jim, who has disclosed his true story to his wife, has disclosed his own story—trivialities of every-day life, and, indeed, that has been at once his support and strength. Candida's wife comes to him that, in her winking innocence and complicity, she called a young man her husband.

The schoolroom interest caused by Bernard Shaw will be presented by an amateur company largely cast. It is the first time the play has been seen in this city, and many should be engaged early.

There Is No Time Like The Present...
For selecting Christmas presents. Our stock is composed of valuable articles for old or young. Now, for instance, the grandmother, a beautiful pair of gold glasses in a beautiful imitation case, this will also do for the grandmother. A beautiful brooch for mother, a new blouse, hat or cloak, and even a much needed rosary will go fast the factor. A new ring and watch holder and chain, or a nice reversible-pocket umbrella, would fit well, and nothing could put the mother, but don't forget the grandfather, for not a diamond ring would also fit the engagement, and everybody would be happy.
