

DEFEATED BY LARGE SCORE

Pacific University Football Team Unable to Withstand Rushes

38 to 0 was the final score by which Willamette defeated Pacific on the 'varsity field yesterday afternoon. When the two big elevens lined up opposite each other they looked so formidable that the crowd felt confident that they were in truth going to see a battle of the giants. The first few minutes of play seemed to verify this belief, for although the visitors made a costly fumble on the very kick-off, losing the ball, they immediately pulled themselves together, and brilliantly withstood the terrific line bucking of the heavy Willamette backs. Slowly but surely yardage was made, however, and after five minutes of hard playing Quarterback Beach carried the ball over for the first touchdown. Soon after this three of Pacific's strongest men were compelled to drop out, and from that time on there was nothing to it. The visitors never lost heart, however, and played a plucky defensive game throughout. The work of Captain Philbrook, at fullback, and Spagel at right end was especially worthy of mention. They were never quite able to keep the locals from making their yardage and never succeeded in making it once themselves.

Pollard, Nace, Rader, Long, Beach and Marker might be designated as the Willamette stars, although every man on the team played star ball. Pollard and Rader alternated with Lounsbury at full back and tackle, and bucked the line for big runs every down. Nace played the game of his life yesterday, making long runs time after time, two of which were for 30 and 35 yards each. It was Captain Long who brought the grand stand to their feet and the hats off the rooters on the side lines, by making a run of 55 yards to a touchdown. In this he was ably assisted by Pollard, Beach, the little man of the team, used his "mighty stiff arm" to perfection, and, by the aid of which, made a pretty run of 35 yards. Marker, the quiet man at right guard, never says a word, but quietly does his appointed task at every stage of the game. Every man played his position well, and the team work was by far the best seen in Salem, which speaks well for Coach Bishop. Bishop had instructed his men to play straight football, and these instructions were followed, nearly all the gains being made by line bucks. The touchdowns were made as follows: Beach, Pollard, Long, Lounsbury, and Nace 2.

The time of halves was to have been 25 minutes each, but the last one was cut down five minutes, so many of the visitors were injured.

Fechter, of Salem, and Griffith, of Albany, were the officials.

In the evening a reception was given at the young ladies' hall in honor of the visitors by the Girls' Student Association of the University. Here all disappointments of the game were forgotten and the defeated were as gay as the victors.

palace, surrounded by a wall, and there in solitude, he lives with his family. All that is seen of the house is a tower as one stands on the seaward porch of the home of Peter the Great and looks down the stretch of water. Stationed at the entrance of the road, whose terminus is the Czar's palace, a guard is seen day and night, standing with a drawn sword in his hand and with sheathed swords and other weapons strapped about him. The Czar is, in reality, a prisoner. The peasant woman in the field and the laborer upon the docks know more freedom. He could abdicate and thus be rid of the haunting terror of assassination. Why doesn't he? Well, power is a substance precious to the human heart; besides, the crown has come to him through centuries as a heritage of blood, and, from his standpoint, conscience has a part to play in holding it.

But the difference between the light of a lamp or candle, and that of Gas or Electricity is like unto the Moon compared with the Sun.

Some there are who will always be content with the small things of Life, Others reach out and take advantage of every help that lengthens life and makes lighter the daily routine of duties. Many a man will buy cigars by the box or treat all the fellows in sight when at the bar, but ask him to spend a couple of dollars for a Light Bill and he falls over himself trying to get away.

Would you, Mr. Man, like to wash and trim lamps every day of the week throughout the year? Why ask your wife to do it? Put in ELECTRIC LIGHTS. Do you know Salem has as low a light and heat rate on Gas or Electricity as any of its neighboring cities. Economy does not always stand for a low expenditure. It's what your money brings you, not what you spend, that makes the true economist.
