

BISHOP BECOMES THEATRICAL MANAGER

New York, Dec. 12.—Flushed with his success as a promoter of the "safe and sane" tavern yeelp "The Subway," Bishop Potter is about to try his hand at theatrical management.

On Friday next at the New York Theatre a performance of "The King's Highway," a romantic drama by William Gill will be given for the benefit of the Actor's Church Alliance, of which Bishop Potter is an ardent supporter. He has not only given his sanction to the performance, but is actively interested in its management. If the piece is successful it will be sent on the road, thus forming a combination of the church and stage such as has not been known since the days of the miracle plays.

Of course there are protests from ministers. There were many registered against the good Bishop when the Subway Tavern was opened. But there are just as many praising the ambitious project as there are jeering at it.

Rev. Walter E. Bentley, once an actor, but now national secretary and organizer of the alliance, is looking after the details of the production.

Harry Leighton, actor, stage manager and active Alliance enthusiast, is to rehearse it and take charge of the stage. He will also play the hero.

The income to be derived from the play when it goes on the road will be used to further the growing work of the Alliance. It is a money-making venture simply.

GREENE-GAYNOR CASE IS TO BE REVIVED

Washington, D. C., Dec. 12.—The government has been advised that after repeated delays in the cases of Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor, who were implicated with Oberlin P. Carter in the notorious Savannah river contract scandals, and who fled to Canada to get beyond American jurisdiction, will be taken up by the privy council of England today. This tribunal corresponds in dignity and importance to the supreme court of the United States, and it is hoped by the Washington authorities to obtain from it a decision which will place the exiles under American jurisdiction.

Proceedings for the extradition of Greene and Gaynor were begun as soon as the American authorities received information that they had taken up their residence in Montreal. The fugitives, however, were apprehended in Quebec, to which jurisdiction they had made a sensational escape. They were taken to Montreal, and a Quebec judge immediately issued a writ of habeas corpus, which was served on the Montreal jailer. He brought his prisoners,

Greene and Gaynor, back to Quebec, where a curious legal squabble ensued, which finally resulted in the issuing of another writ of habeas corpus by Judge Caron.

It is from this latter writ, which permits the freedom of Greene and Gaynor within the boundaries of Quebec and exempts them from interference from American authorities, that the United States government appealed to the privy council of England. Officials of this government now believe that every legal obstacle has been removed, and that a final decision will be reached soon.

Several cases involving large property interests are awaiting further action because of the necessity of the presence in the United States of Greene and Gaynor, who are defendants. Should the decision of the privy council be favorable to the contention of the United States, it is believed that little time will elapse before Greene and Gaynor, through extradition proceedings, are again safely under American jurisdiction.

DOCTOR HILL ON DEATH

Dr. J. J. Hill, of the faculty of the Willamette Medical College, of this city, is lying dangerously ill at his home in Albany, but, while at the point of death, the sense of humor for which he is noted has not forsaken him. Last week, when he was at the worst, and was expected to die at any moment, a rumor was circulated on the streets of Albany that he had died. This was untrue, according to the doctor's own statement, and, to avoid any misunderstanding arising, the Albany Democrat received the following letter from the doctor, explaining the origin of the rumor.

"I understand a statement was given out on the street yesterday that I had died during my severe illness. When the report reached me competent persons were detailed to investigate and render an unbiased opinion. They report, after thorough physical and general examination, that I am not dead to any alarming extent, and they find no evidence that I have been very recently. There was reason for the rumor that I had got through with this life, and had applied for my traveling checks and baggage, considering the callers I had during the day. First a doctor called; then a lawyer; followed by a preacher. A barber with the tools of his profession came next. Then a message from an undertaker inquiring about my condition. A man with a pick and shovel on his shoulder called, saying he understood work in his line was needed, and he would do it with neatness and dispatch. A fiddler left his phone number, stating that his bow was always strung up for short calls, and he was universally encored when he played 'There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight.' Everything seemed auspicious for a first-class social event, had I not been derelict in performing my part, but I had never formed the habit of dying, and was too sick to willingly engage in any new and hazardous experiment of that kind.

"The insubriousness of the cold snap of the past few days has flown, and today the healthful Oregon rain is descending in welcome profusion, and I again realize that 'Life is real, life is earnest, life is not an empty dream.' 'If my demise should occur soon I have arranged with others to inform you, if I am not in a mood to do it myself, when I ask as a favor, that you put the notice in the most conspicuous place in your paper, along with notices of marriages, divorce, football and social scandals, where it will not be overlooked.

"Today the doctor has given strict orders that I remain in bed, and the nurses are determined to see the order obeyed, while I am in a state bordering on melancholia in an unappreciated desire to domicile in a pair of trousers that hang on the foot of the bed luring me to their capacious folds.

"Yours above the turf,
"J. L. HILL."

South Commercial Street.
The bad walks on the east side of Commercial street now extend from nearly the top of the hill to the cemetery. There is a very bad place just this side of Mission street. One of the worst places is being improved by Mr. Snook. It is to be hoped the city council will be able to do something with South Commercial street next year. It is as it has been for 40 year—a raging sea of mud.

Hats Off.
It is expected that all the men in town will hereafter attend church services at the 17th street Evangelical church, as a vote of the congregation at last night's services instructed the pastor, T. R. Horschuch, to ask the ladies to remove their hats during the services. This follows closely The Journal's suggestion a few days ago.

An Improvement.
A good street crossing has been put in at Twentieth and Asylum avenue, and ladies can now get on and off the cars there with impunity and not get into the mud over their shoes. It is a great improvement.
