MANY MEN BURIED

By a Mine Explosion Near Birmingham

Strong Rescuing Party Labored All Night and Some Succumbed

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 21.—Rescuers are at work in the Virginia mine, where the explosion, late yesterday afternoon, imprisoned 150 miners. They labored all night, digging through tons of debris in an effort to reach the entombed miners. It was reported early this morning that 60 bodies had been found, but it was not confirmed. It is known that the rescuers are nearing the spot where the men are imprisoned. Practically all hopes of finding the men alive are abandoned, as the mine is filled with after-damp. Many of the rescuers were overcome and had had to be taken to the surface to be revived.

The number of men in the mine at the time of the explosion is now placed at 116, including the bodies already recovered. It is definitely known that the cause of the explosion was the action of the day shift, just before they left the mines at 4 o'clock, in overcharging one of the shots. When the night shift came on and a "dry shot" was fired it sent a fire gas sheet of flame 100 feet high. It shot upward from the mouth of the flame. A great fall of timber and earth followed, completely closing the mouth of the mine.
