It was remarked that Stoessel's hair had turned quite white. The couple were driven to the residence of Lieutenant-General Prince Vlasenky, where they will stay. WANTS OUT ON BAIL

Plea of Nan Patterson's Sharp Young Attorney

Attorney Levy stated that Miss Patterson was suffering from general debility by her long confinement in the Tombs, and should be granted immediate trial or should be admitted to bail. Assistant District Attorney Rand said that Miss Patterson would be given a trial as soon as possible, but it was unfair to other prisoners to give her precedence. He thought likely a trial could be had next month.

MRS. STANFORD'S SUDDEN DEATH

She Was the Victim of an Attempt at Poisoning

Arrived at Hawaiian Island Quite Well but Passes Away in a Hospital

San Francisco, March 1.—A cablegram from Honolulu announces the death there of Mrs. Leland Stanford.

The first information of her death came in a cablegram to C. G. Lathrop, brother of Mrs. Stanford, who is at Palo Alto. It merely stated that Mrs. Stanford had died in a hospital at Honolulu last night. Mrs. Stanford left San Francisco about three weeks ago, intending to visit Japan. Soon after her departure a story was published to the effect that an attempt had been made to poison her, by a former member of her household. Strichnine, according to the story, was placed in mineral water, of which she partook liberally, but the quantity of poison was so great as to act as its own emetic, thereby saving her life. When she left she was a sick woman, but upon her arrival at Honolulu she apparently had recovered.

Honolulu, March 1.—Mrs. Stanford after her arrival here Mrs. Stanford told a friend that she had left San Francisco because of an attempt on her life, and feared another would be made if she returned there. She said a member of her household was trying to kill her. With a dying declaration that she had been poisoned, Mrs. Jane Stanford, one of the wealthiest and most charitable women in the world, and widow of United States Senator Stanford, expired. A post mortem has been ordered. Soon
