

DAILY CAPITAL JOURNAL

BY HOFER BROS.

OFFICIAL CENSUS SALEM, MAY, 1904, 13,287.

DEVELOP, DEVELOP, DEVELOP.

Doubtless many of our readers grew tired of these headlines that appeared so conspicuously in the Salem newspapers the past two weeks.

But as a result our city has been widely advertised, and the Willamette valley has been given a shove into prominence that it never had before.

The development convention held in this city was also a great advertisement for our city. The newspapers of the state gave us unnumbered columns of space, and it was all favorable.

It would have cost thousands of dollars to have got the space in the press that was given this city and county and this whole valley free of expense and in the most hearty manner.

It took work to make the convention a success, but all the workers of the Commercial Club were out with their coats off from start to finish, and loyalty sustained the enterprise.

The business men of the city sustained the work of the general committee, so that when the bills were paid Friday there was a handsome balance of cash on hand.

When Thursday came with a cold, bracing rain, the signs of success were not very favorable. The great armory was cheerless and cold. Captain Murphy had it beautifully prepared and decorated, and it was not his fault that the wonderful architecture of the building made it impossible to continue the meetings there.

But men of enterprise and resource never stop at small obstacles. A committee of P. N. Derby, Alex. LaFollette and W. L. Tooze were sent out to find a more comfortable place, and found it.

Like men of true grit they did not ask help, and pass the hat, but put up their own good gold pieces to pay the rent. Then the sessions were more comfortable. Thanks are due these gentlemen.

Mr. Barr, of the firm of jewelers, had put up a beautiful exhibit of the grandest scenery in the world at the armory. The Listerine photos, and deserves thanks for his enterprise, although it did not do him much good in a business way.

All the public spirited citizens of Salem who assisted in making this development convention a success deserve the most hearty thanks and the good will of the community.

The city of Salem should go on and make complete arrangements to meet the incoming tourists and visitors during the great world's fair year—meet them with an exhibit of fruits and flowers in due season when they arrive on the trains, meet them with carriages and meet them with a band.

Let us be up and doing, and not sit back and suck our thumbs and growl at one another. That is the baby act. The time is here for work, and not for grumbling. Let us fight for what we believe rightly belongs to us, but also let us be bright and cheerful about it, and we will win great results for this city, county and state.

MORE THAN INSTINCT.

Those theorists who stubbornly contend that the lower animals must not be credited with reasoning power, that all acts of the brute creation are directed by instinct, which they hold to be something greatly inferior to intelligence, might find it difficult to uphold their contention against the evidence to refute it which is presented in a news story in New York papers, of what a dog did.

Fire broke out in a tenement in Brooklyn, in rooms occupied by a family consisting of mother and father and six children. The father was away when the danger came. The flames spread so rapidly that the mother had hardly time to get the youngsters to safety. She had hustled five of them out, and was rushing back to take the youngest from its crib when the family pet, a bulldog, came to meet her, carrying the infant. The animal had fixed its teeth firmly in the child's clothes, dragged it from the crib, and would have had it safely out of the house in a few moments more.

No doubt the theorists who are so absurdly jealous of their claim that the human animal alone possesses that superior thing, intelligence, would present an argument in support of their "instinct" theory, even against such evidence of brute intelligence; but they would be unable to convince any but others of their kind.

PUBLIC PLEASE NOTICE.

How the speeches made at the great Willamette Valley Development convention by men like Killingsworth, Hingham, and Hurley and others were minimized.

Please notice how these large met ropolitan papers absolutely fail to give the people a true report of this great gathering of the people.

The enthusiasm, the earnestness and the truthfulness of the statements of the speakers, telling why Oregon does not develop, are nearly all suppressed. Men spoke at that meeting who have seen their industries ruined, their communities languish, and the state left undeveloped, but they are not permitted to have their remarks go to the people of Oregon.

The people will find a way to get hold of the facts and the policy of strangulation will not prevail much longer in Oregon. The Salem convention lifted the lid and let out a little of the suppressed steam that has long been threatening to rend the kettle. Men who gain facts by the dear school of experience become eloquent when they talk to the people.

MARION COUNTY EXHIBIT.

There is urgent need that something more be done to have Marion county properly represented at the Lewis and Clark fair.

The commission is working hard, and yet there is need that the people be stirred up to raise the products for the exhibit.

County Judge Scott and Commissioner Needham were out Friday getting volunteers to help stir up the fruit growers and farmers.

Very little has been done or said for Marion county or the city of Salem at the fair, except by the county commission and county court.

Judge Scott and Commissioner Needham urge that some meetings be held in various parts of the county, and the people be appealed to for exhibits.

Several gentlemen are public-spirited enough to put their shoulder to the wheel, without hope of honor or reward are going out and urging action.

If this is not done this county will come off poorly at best, and The Journal would suggest that all who can take hold of this matter.

The climate is all right. The soil will produce. The harvest will be ready but the workers are not many in any public cause.

Let our people become aroused to the necessity of doing their part, and let us secure the thousand-dollar prize for Marion county.

Let those who represent our county and city on the Lewis and Clark fair board also encourage proper representation, and the result will be good.

KICKING, STILL KICKING.

There are a few people who are not happy unless they are kicking.

It would be impossible for this paper to do anything that some one would not kick at.

So we have learned to go along, and let those who enjoy that amusement kick away.

The Journal believes in doing things, and in not letting the community die of dry-rot.

Hence there are anonymous kickers who get into the newspapers and howl and groan and kick.

It is their pleasure and diversion, and, like the fleas on the dog, it keeps the dog busy, and keeps him from forgetting that he is alive.

Those who never contribute by their presence or purse to any enterprise might as well occupy the anonymous column.

HINTS ON CLEANLINESS.

Boil three or four onions in a pint of water and apply with a soft brush to gilt frames to keep off flies; or clean gilt frames with a cotton cloth moistened in sweet oil.

Perspiration stains are difficult to remove. Sometimes by rubbing the spots with soap and laying the garment in the hot sun they will disappear.

Spots of paint on colored muslin or cambric dresses should be rubbed thoroughly with good laundry soap, and then put to soak for twelve hours; the paint will come off easily and the dresses be as good as new.

Iron rust spots can be removed by covering the spots with lemon and salt, moistening with a little water; then put in the sun, and redampen the spots until they disappear. This may take several days.

When washing black lawns or calicoes, make the bluing water almost black with bluing, as it renews any of the dye that may have come out in the washing.

Sixty and Six.

Joy of the morning, Darling of dawn, Blithe little, lithe little daughter of mine! While with thee ranging, Sure I'm exchanging Sixty of my years for six years like thine! Wings cannot vie with thee Lightly I fly with thee Gay as the thistle-down over the lea. Life is all magic, Comic or tragic, Played as thou playest it daily with me.

Floating and ringing.

Thy merry singing Comes when the light comes, like that of the birds. List to the play of it! That is the way of it; All's in the music and naught in the words. Glad or grief-laden, Schubert or Hayden, Ballad of Erin, or merry Scotch lay, Like an evangel Some baby angel Brought from sky-nursery stealing away.

Surely I know it.

Artist or poet Guesses my treasures of jubilant hours, Sorrows, what are they? Nearer or far, they Vanish in sunshine, like dew from the flowers.

Years, I am glad of them;

Would that I had of them More and still more, while thus mingled with thine! Age— I made light of it, Fear not the sight of it; Time's but our playmate, whose toys are divine. —Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

AT PARTING.

(Written for The Journal.) The best of friends must part, they say, The fondest hearts must sever, But friendship's bond may last for aye And memory live on forever.

And you will go and I will miss Each word, each look, each smile, Each vanished pressure of your kiss And long for you the while.

Each thing that we have seen and loved, Each flower, each bird, each tree, Each place where we together roved Will hold a charm for me.

Then fare you well this parting sad To them that fate must sever I only say "good-bye," my love, And trust 'tis not forever. Salem, March 25, 1905.
