

SPORT BUYS BOOZE

Every town has a local character, and Salem is no exception to the rule. Salem's all-around fellow is tall, gaunt and not overly handsome, walks with measured tread and has been a sport all his life. He has a big heart and an eye for business.

When the Sunday closing ordinance went into effect, he conceived a plan of action and he has been acting ever since according to reports. We went to a physician and procured a prescription. Armed with the little paper he gave a tip to the thirsty that he could procure liquor at any time of the week or month, day or night, and that it was needless for them to go thirsty.

He has been doing a land office business and if the present rush keeps up he will be able to start a drug store of his own or buy a race horse before fall. Of course he charges a little extra for the red stimulant when he acts as the go-between, but who wouldn't pay a few cents extra for a bottle when he is real good and thirsty?

New Trade Mark Law In Operation.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—The new law authorizing the registration of trade marks and providing for their protection, which went into operation today, marks the consummation of an effort on the part of business men of the United States covering a period of 10 or 15 years. For an even longer period the matter has been agitated in congress. Since 1870 the matter of revising and modifying the laws relating to trademarks has been before the national legislative body in one form or other. Under an act of 1898, President McKinley appointed commissioners to revise and amend the trademark laws. This commission, composed of Francis Forbes, Judge Peter S. Grosscup and Arthur P. Greeley, made an elaborate and exhaustive report on the subject of trademarks.

The measure, before it was submitted to congress at the beginning of the last session, received the approval of practically all the business organizations in this country. From a commercial standpoint the new regulations are of wide interest.

The new law saves all the rights of the trademark owner as they have heretofore existed, and offers additional advantages and means of protection. (1) It permits the registration of all trademarks used in interstate commerce; (2) it puts all controversies growing out of trademarks used in interstate commerce within the jurisdiction of United States courts; (3) it permits the registration of every trademark now in use, whether it complies with the technical rules of the patent office or not, provided the mark has been in use 10 years; (4) it provides a remedy by way of injunction, actual damages, punitive damages and profits derived from infringement as well as the destruction of infringing labels, marks and packages; (5) every unlawful use of the registered trademark, whether on the very goods themselves, or on advertising matter, signs, receptacles or other vessels, will constitute an infringement; (6) the government charges for registration of each trademark is $10.

Parcels Post With Great Britain.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—The parcels post treaty recently concluded between the United States and Great Britain became effective today. The agreement is in nearly all respects similar to the treaties previously arranged with Germany, Denmark and several other countries of Europe. The maximum weight allowed is four pounds in this country and two shillings a pound in England. The movement for a parcels post arrangement with Great Britain began many years ago, and a substantial increase in postal business is expected to follow its operation.
