NEW YORK FASHIONS

April 29.—The greatest novelty of the day in the dress line is the little black coat blouse which is worn with light skirts. Of all the quaint revivals from historic days, this is the quaintest. The little coat is made of cloth or silk, according to fancy, and at its best has an open front filled in with a cascade of lace. Such obsolete fashions revived as a modern whim call for artistic workmanship. The women who depend on the little dressmaker of unskillful hand will do well to avoid all of them and confine herself to conservative styles.

The newest and smartest sleeves are far from bouffant, and if the present tendency continues we shall see the tight arm covering back, which necessitates the services of a maid or the putting on of the hat before the bodice is put on. But summer gowns have puffed and frilled sleeves. Sleeves of gowns which are to be worn after-noon are almost to a one of elbow length, and pretty ribbon or velvet bows set them off.

Regarding early summer blouses, the "Coming Mode" says: The always fascinating topic of blouses possesses especial interest at the beginning of a season, and just now it is discussed with keen appreciation, seeing that everything in the shops is quite new, and that fashions for the spring and summer are more interesting than those for later on.

A favorite morning shirt is of V-yells or delaine—one of those pretty flowered, checked or striped varieties, with cream grounds, that are cool looking and yet safeguards against treacherous, chilly breezes that intercept the flow of the mild days of early spring. At the neck the shirt is either provided with a turnover collar of its own material, piped or hemmed with silk, or finished with a smart little turnover of embroidered lawn, and, of course, a bow-tie of silk is added.

Yoked and yokeless shirts are equally fashionable, and into the yoke the shirt is often set in a series of small box plaits. Other patterns show a center box plait, frilled with a tiny kiting of silk, and on either side are smaller box plaits or knife plaits also edged with kittings. Very pretty, too, is the delaine shirt with an American yoke apparently buttoned onto the lower part, the buttons being either very small or very large, and the yoke collar, the shoulders just standing out a wee bit beyond the sleeves (to emphasize the fact that the yoke is independent of the shirt) and the front continuing as straps to the waist, is a new and smart style—used with success on shirts and blouse of white delaine, the yoke collar being of embroidered flannel of flowered delaine.

Shirts fall to the figure very much more closely than of yore—in fact, the smartest of the new models are cut with fitted sides, where a slight fullness is kept quite to the center front and center back, where a slight pouch is admitted—for the shirt in front, is fixed down very straight and severely.

Embroidered linen and canvas shirts are going to be very fashionable as the season advances, and girls with leisure and inclination are already busy in working designs on linen destined for their own personal wear. The embroidery is sometimes confined to the center boxplaits and cuffs, while on other models it is spread all over the front of the shirt, which in this case is quite simple, without plaits of any sort.

A fashionable style for the linen shirts unworn by embroidery is the introduction of a center plait panelled with tulle or Cluny lace, which either runs straight up to the neck or deviates into a small yoke. The cuffs are also panelled with lace. The more severe shirts, of striped linen or galathea, have very stiff cuffs, about three inches deep and wide, like a man's; and the yokes, which slant off, American fashion, are also stiffened. Batiste fashions some charming little blouses with round yokes composed of narrow bands of their own material joined by a jour stitching. The design is not new, but it takes its place among the simpler spring fashions, and blouses so made demonstrate the fact that although high, full shoulders are the dernier cri, the sloping shoulder is not altogether elbowed out of fashion, but remains "in" for use with soft, limp materials.

Open fronts of bodices to admit waistcoats or lingerie vests are very conspicuous among new spring models. This style allows of any amount of front finishes such as collars, revers and the like. Irish lace collars for coats and bodices are the first preference just now. In the hand-made mesh they are prohibitive for short pocket-books, costing not less than $15. But here is a word of warning. Just at this season or a little later bargains are often to be found in soiled and leftover laces which, although a trip to the cleaner may be needed before they are used, will cost only a moiety of their first price. The imitation Irish lace so nicely copies the original that it is seen with handsome costumes. In both this and the real there are some narrow tab-shaped neck finishes or collars which are useful for little jackets and for bodice finishes.

Collars of velvet edged with wide rills of lace or with silk ruffles are used to finish open fronts. There is another popular collar effect made of lace or mull, which is folded around the collarless neck fashu fashion and which ends at each side of the front with a flat rosette and frilled ends of lace. Surplice and open front waists are sometimes hardened by a shaped band of horizontally plaited silk, which is allowed to frill at both edges.

McGovern Picks Winners.

Terry McGovern, the prize fighter, who has been in the public eye of late because of his alleged mental troubles and his desire to mix up things with "Young Corbett" in a hotel a few nights ago, was at the Aqueduct track the other day. He paraded around the lawn and the betting ring in a conspicuous manner. Except for a nervous manner his presence would not have attracted attention, for he was apparently as strong and robust as at any period in his life.

When Terry was asked why he had taken French leave of the sanitarium in Connecticut, where he had stopped for a brief period, he said:

"I didn't like it. It was too quiet up there. Besides I'd rather be with the boys at the race tracks. I like to see the horses race and put down a bet occasionally. I'm just as well off in old New York as I am in Connecticut."

The "Terrible One" can certainly pick winners. He won $1,080 on a $60 investment last Saturday. He took a fancy to Bantam in the fifth race on that day. Walking into the ring he said to a bookmaker:

"What are the odds against Bantam?"

The penciler recognized Terry, and, feeling sorry for him and believing that he would bet his customary amount, $5, across the board, gave him a "hunch" price and replied:

"Forty, ten and four to you."

Scarcely had the words passed his lips when Terry answered:

"I'll bet you $20 all three ways."

The money was accepted and the bet recorded, $800 to $20 straight; $200 to $20 place and $80 to $20 to show. When the fighter was about to depart the bookmaker, who did not believe that Bantam had a chance to win, sarcastically remarked:

"Thanks; come again!"

Terry did. He collected $1,080 belonging to the bookmaker besides the $60 that he had bet.

The Railway Congress.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Secretary Brown and the local committee in charge of the arrangements for the International Railway Congress announced today the completion of all preparations for the gathering, which is to begin its sessions here at noon next Wednesday. The foreign delegates to the congress are due to arrive by special trains from New York and Philadelphia on Tuesday. The next morning they will have a view of the city from the Washington monument, and in the afternoon a trip through the city will be made in automobiles. Stuyvesant Fish, president of the Illinois Central railroad, will receive the delegates at his temporary home here. At midnight the delegates will assemble at the appliance exhibition to see the time signals to be flashed from the naval observatory. Illuminations on a huge map of the world will trace the progress of the signals, which are expected to encircle the globe.

A trip to Mount Vernon by steamer is planned for the afternoon of the first day of the congress, while a special view of the Corcoran Gallery of Art is the evening plan for that day. The afternoon of Friday is to be marked by a reception by Vice-President Fairbanks at the White House. The capitol and the library of congress are to be viewed on Saturday. Other public buildings are to be visited and a minute inspection made of the new union station, now under construction, as well as of the Washington navy yard. Fort Myer is to be visited and a special drill and rough riding exhibition witnessed. The evenings of May 9 and 11 are to be devoted to dinners. The speakers at these dinners, at which 600 covers will be laid, include the French and German ambassadors, the secretary of war and Samuel Spencer, president of the Southern railway.

Full of Tragic Meaning.

are these lines from J. H. Simmons, of Casey, Ia. Think what might have resulted from his terrible cough if he had not taken the medicine about which he writes: "I had a fearful cough that disturbed my night's rest. I tried everything, but nothing would relieve it, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which completely cured me." Instantly relieves and permanently cures all throat and lung diseases; prevents grip and pneumonia. At J. C. Perry's, druggist; guaranteed; 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Exhibit is Ready.

The Linn county exhibit of fruit, vegetables and cereals for the Lewis and Clark fair is now ready for shipment, and will go to Portland today in charge of W. E. Eastburn, who got it together. There are 30 boxes of stuff, besides grain in sacks. In addition to this, fruits and vegetables will be sent down in season as rapidly as they come on.

Don't Borrow Trouble.

It is a bad habit to borrow anything but the worst thing you can possibly borrow, is trouble. When sick, sore, heavy, weary and worn-out by the pains and poisons of dyspepsia, biliousness, Bright's disease, and similar internal disorders, don't sit down and brood over your symptoms, but fly for relief to Electric Bitters. Here you will find sure and permanent forgetfulness of all your troubles, and your body will not be burdened by a load of debt disease. At J. C. Perry's drug store. Price 50c. Guaranteed.

Portland's House in Order.

Portland, Ore., April 29.—The opening of the Lewis and Clark exposition is only one month off and all the builders and exhibitors are on the rush. The work of construction is practically completed and all that remains to be done is to put the finishing touches to the buildings and grounds. Walkways and roadways are being laid, gardens of flowers planted, statuary placed in position and other work of a similar character being pushed to completion. Barring a visitation of Providence the exposition will open on time and in a

When Your Cold Catches You Just There

There is No Time to Wait.

It is not a "little thing." It's a deadly thing. It will not "get well by itself" if you let it alone. Whiskey and quinine and such things brace you up for the time, but they don't cure you.

Ask any intelligent doctor why you catch cold so easily. He will say, "Because you are a bit run down." He means that the force which nature placed in your body to keep out disease germs—the resistive force—is weakened. The door is open a little way toward disease.

There is not a graveyard in any cemetery in the world caused by consumption or pneumonia or any lung trouble whatever, which did not start with what you call "Nothing but a cold."

A cold should not be beaten back or drugged over—it should be cured, and the general health should be built up.

ACKER'S ENGLISH REMEDY

should be taken at the first symptoms of cold. It is a tonic for the whole body, a specific for sudden colds, coughs or sore throats. It doesn't matter where the cold is or how it got there, we know that Acker's English Remedy will reach it and cure it. It is sold on a positive guarantee.

NO CURE NO PAY. If you have a cold—no matter how slight—it means something. Take Acker's English Remedy at once. Keep it in the house. If it does not relieve you almost instantly, we will refund you the price paid.

"Acker's English Remedy saved my life. A cough, slight at first, grew constantly worse and I finally had to give up my work in the Knife Factory at Walden. I had frequent bleeding spells. Was examined by local doctors, prominent physicians in New York and at a Medical College. They all pronounced my case hopeless. I began using Acker's English Remedy and a few bottles cured me. I am today a perfectly well man." (Signed) A. H. SIMPSON, Walden, N. Y.

Acker's English Remedy is sold on a positive guarantee that the purchase money will be refunded in case of failure. 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.
