

KILL THE SERPENT

The worst disease the world has ever known, and the greatest scourge to the human race, is Contagious Blood Poison. One drop of the virus of this loathsome disease will pollute and vitiate the purest and healthiest blood, and within a short time after the first little sore appears the system is filled with the awful poison; the skin breaks out in a red rash, the glands of the groins begin to swell, the throat and mouth become ulcerated, the hair and eyebrows drop out, and often the entire surface of the body is covered with copper-colored splotches, pustular eruptions and sickening-looking sores and abscesses. Many a man has been cut down in the prime of life, or his health so impaired by this vile disease that usefulness is destroyed, and he becomes a burden to himself and an object of pity to the rest of mankind. Contagious Blood Poison is the most annoying, humiliating and degrading of all diseases. It is as treacherous and elusive as the serpent. Under the mercury and potash treatment all external evidences of it may disappear, and the victim misled, be buoyed up by false hopes of a cure, while the disease may even then have fastened its fangs in some vital spot within the system, where it is doing its destructive work—unseen. Mercury has arrayed against it thousands upon thousands of physical wrecks and chronic invalids who have been dosed for years and their systems saturated with these powerful drugs, only to be harassed by constantly returning symptoms and confronted with unmistakable traces of blood poison years after. As long as your blood is tainted with this awful virus you are a source of infection and danger to all who come in contact with you, and your children will carry in their veins the same dreadful contagion. As long as there is life in the serpent there is danger in its fangs, and so long as any signs of Contagious Blood Poison remain there is danger of infection. Safety lies in crushing out the life of this loathsome disease and killing the serpent, and no remedy known does this so thoroughly and permanently as S. S. S. It is an antidote for this peculiar virus that spreads through the system, defiles the blood and contaminates all healthy tissues and threatens every organ and part of the body.

I am compelled by a sense of gratitude to tell you of the great good your remedy has done me. Among other symptoms I was severely afflicted with Rheumatism, and got almost past going. The disease got a firm hold upon my system, my blood was thoroughly poisoned with the virus, as characterized by the usual symptoms. I lost in weight, was a down had sore throat, eruptions, splotches and other evidences of the disease. I was truly in bad shape when I began S. S. S., but the moment I used it I brought me out of my trouble, safe and sound, and I have the courage to publicly testify to the virtues of your great blood remedy, S. S. S., and to recommend it to all Blood Poison sufferers, sincerely believing that if it is taken according to directions and given a fair trial, it will thoroughly eliminate every particle of virus, no matter how severe the case may be.

Greensburg, Pa., June 16, 1903.

JAMES CURRAN.

S. S. S. contains no mineral of any description, but is guaranteed entirely vegetable, and we offer $1,000 for proof that it is not just as we represent it to be. It leaves no bad after-effects, but purifies the blood and at the same time builds up your general health. In chronic or long-standing cases of blood poison, where the stomach and digestion have been damaged by the use of minerals, S. S. S. will prove an excellent tonic and appetizer and helpful in restoring strength and activity to all parts of the system. Kill the serpent, crush out its life, or you are apt to feel the bad effects of the disease all your life. If you will write us fully about your case, our physicians will gladly advise without charge, and mail you a copy of our home-treatment book telling all about Contagious Blood Poison, its different stages and symptoms, and a lot of interesting information about this formidable and much-dreaded disease.

WALNUT GROWING IN OREGON

The Oregon Walnut is Much Better Than Those Grown in California

One by one the products of other states are being discarded by the people of Oregon. Up to this time the market men have been forced to pay tribute to outside nut growers; California secured most of the trade.

When walnuts were wanted, it was always outside growers who reaped the harvest of golden dollars. Now things are going to happen. Oregon is in the walnut raising business herself, and experiments show that she will soon outstrip competitors.

There are growers of almonds in the vicinity of Portland who are coining a few dollars on the side by the growing of these nuts for the market. In the vicinity of Vancouver are several almond growers who have been shipping regularly to the Portland market the past few years, but up to this time the trade has been in the nature of an experiment.

To those who appreciate quality in a nut, the Oregon almond is in great demand. Several small shipments were made from Southern Oregon the past season, but they, too, were in the nature of an experiment. The Oregon almond is not so large as those raised in California, but it is sweeter, and has more of the good nutty taste than those from the south.

As in almonds, the Oregon agriculturists are just beginning to realize that this state can produce just as good, if not better, walnuts of the soft English variety than any imported. The only difficulty in the way of a successful walnut raising business in this state is that it takes several more years for the trees to come into bearing than it does in places farther south. Outside of this, everything is in favor of walnut growing in Oregon.

Climatic conditions, according to experts, are such that a better flavored nut can be raised here, and after the trees once bear they will show a rapid increase. The life of a bearing tree is said to be longer in this state than in the south.

Mr. Prince of Dundee, is the largest walnut grower in Oregon. In all, he has 100 acres planted to walnuts and annually gathers a good paying crop. Among others who raise walnuts in this state is Mrs. B. M. Shannon of Albany. At present she has only a small output, but it is quite likely that the production will be increased.

Made Himself Scarce.

Leon L. Vial, who shot but not fatally wounded Mrs. Louis G. Dumbleton, at her home, at Winchester, on March 21st last, failed to appear Monday afternoon in the circuit court, which convened at Roseburg Monday morning in regular session. An indictment charging Vial with assault with a dangerous weapon, with intent to kill, was returned by the grand jury. Upon Vial's failure to appear for arraignment Judge Hamilton ordered his bail of $3000 forfeited, and a bench warrant issued for his arrest. Judge Hamilton also increased Vial's bail to $4000.

PLENTY OF PROOF

From People You Know—From Salem Citizens.

The greatest skeptic can hardly fail to be convinced in the face of evidence like this. It is impossible to produce better proof of merit than the testimony of residents of Salem, of people who can be seen at the time. Read the following case of it:

G. S. Cooper, farmer, living three miles northeast of Salem, on the Garden road, says: "I was raised in the wheat district and when a good lump of a boy I prided myself as having as much strength as any other boy in the neighborhood, and when a number of us got together we often tested our strength by lifting. I very often lifted two bags of wheat, but have since regretted having done so, as the result was that I strained my back and ever after had more or less trouble from dull aching pains across my loins and other symptoms of kidney complaint. In some way Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice, and the first I went to town I dropped into Dr. Stone's drug store and inquired about them. I was told they were highly recommended and advised to give them a trial. I did so. And while I did not follow the treatment as regularly as I should have done, being a poor hand to take any kind of medicine, the benefit I derived from their use stamps them as a remedy which acts fully up to the representations made for it."

WILL HAVE A LARGE EXHIBIT

Homer Davenport's Bird Collection at the Fair Will Be Interesting

Nearly 18 years ago Homer Davenport, living on an Oregon farm, started out in the world to make his way. He had made some pictures on the old stable door and he had a taste for drawing. Leaving his home on the farm near Silverton, he went to Portland and became associated with a local paper as its artist. Later he went to San Francisco, and in a few years became the leader of newspaper artists there. Later still he was summoned to New York, the Mecca of successful newspaper men. There, in the course of a few years he established himself as the greatest cartoonist of the country, if not of the entire world. His name and fame became known to every person who reads a newspaper, and his cartoons on questions of national importance exerted a strong influence.

During all this time the spirit of the farm was with him. It took the form of a passion for fancy breeds of poultry and animals. Every rare bird he could hear of was purchased by him, and he made many long pilgrimages in quest of rare species of fowl. He was also successful in getting hold of an Arabian horse, a rare avian to the Occident. Gradually his collection increased until it began attracting attention, as wide as his pictures had attracted. It soon reached such dimensions that a large acreage had to be provided for its maintenance. The owner purchased a ranch at Morris Plains, New Jersey. All his spare time was given to studying the habits of his collection, and his observations resulted in many important additions to existing knowledge on the subject. One day he got to figuring up what his collection had cost him. The total was a trifle better than $82,000.

Mr. Davenport is coming back to Oregon. He is going to bring his farm with him. No part of it will be left behind, from the Arabian steed to the Angora goats or from the vulturine guinea fowls of Africa to the Red Dorkings of Sussex.

Recently, the experimental gardens were thrown open to amusement features, and Mr. Davenport was awarded the choicest site of the Exposition grounds, as well as the largest of any individual exhibitor. Mr. Davenport then placed the matter in the hands of his friend, George L. Baker, the well-known theatrical manager, and under Mr. Baker's directions plans were drawn up for the new Davenport farm. He argued that a farm typical of the Western country was preferable to an Eastern farm, and this idea has been worked out into a picturesque farm inclosure and farm buildings.

There is variety enough to the collection to afford interest to all classes. The portion of the exhibit that will probably attract the widest attention is the pheasant section. Mr. Davenport is generally conceded to have the biggest and finest collection of pheasants in the world. He possesses a number of these birds which are the only known members of their species in existence.

Mr. Davenport has 36 varieties of pheasant. Each variety has its peculiarities. There are Impeyan pheasant from the high ranges of the Himalayas; green Java pea fowl from India and Java; Versi-color pheasant, also from Japan; ring-neck pheasant from China; English pheasant, Cheer pheasant from Asia; Bornean Fireback pheasant from Borneo; Siamese Fireback pheasant from Siam, and so on through the whole list, in which every section of the globe is fittingly represented.

However, the pheasant exhibit is only one portion of the farm and by no means the largest. There are all kinds of jungle fowl, from jungles all over the earth. Then there are Tragopans, five species of them, all from the high ranges of Eastern and Central China. These rare birds are, in themselves, a study. Of them all, the Slators variety is the most peculiar.

In a separate part of the farm Mr. Davenport has his water-fowl collection. A great deal of work and no end of pains will be necessary for the installation of a suitable habitation for these birds at the Exposition, but Mr. Baker has set about the task, and he intends to have every provision for the collection, which is the best in America, containing as it does 19 varieties of wild geese out off the 25 species known to ornithologists.

Leaving the aviary and going to the corral, there is an unusually attractive drove of Angora goats. Its foundation stock has been gathered by Mr.

Davenport regardless of price. There are in the herd several imported African bucks. The wool of his Angoras has run as high as nine pounds to the goat, and has brought $1.50 a pound.

What will probably arouse as much curiosity and interest as any other portion of the farm is the Arabian horses. There is an imperial edict in Turkey that none of these horses may be allowed abroad, but the Sultan allowed a number to be taken to the World's Fair, at Chicago, and through the miserable financial management of some of the custodians of the equines, they were sold to pay the debts of the aggregation in charge of them. Mr. Davenport succeeded in buying several of the finest animals, which he yet possesses.
