ART AND HEART.

Art is a great thing. Heart is a greater thing. Art without heart is art robbed of its highest power.

For the best of art—pardon the apparent paradox—is artlessness.

A prayer that is a work of art sounds sweetly. It tickles the critical. It ravishes the ears of the groundlings. But it reaches neither the throne of heaven nor the heart of the hearer.

A poem that is a work of art gives pleasure of rhyme and rhythm. But it lacks the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin.

The music that beats and swells in unison and in harmony gives delight for the moment. But if there is in it no heart throb of feeling the memory of it dies away with the measure.

The painting may please by its beauty. It may be true in conception and faultless in execution. But if it does not appeal, if it does not inspire, if there is in it no heart message, it soon fades from the memory.

The orator may amuse or entertain or instruct. But if he would move men to action, if he would sway them and thrill them, his own heart must be aflame.

Art for art's sake may be of use, but the noblest art—the art that does things—is the art with heart in it.

AN IOWA BOY'S CLIMB.

From messenger boy to manager. That is the story of the upward climb of Mr. J. J. Welch, manager at Des Moines, of the Western Union Telegraph company.

It is a story of ideals and effort. Mr. Welch did not at first aspire to be a manager of a big telegraph business. He only hoped to be an operator.

And so in pursuance of his ambition he smuggled an old key sounder into the attic of his village home and began to practice. While other boys of the Iowa village slept, Welch pounded away at the key. He mastered the code and became an adept at sending messages.

Then he applied for a place. The man laughed at him. He was only a messenger boy and he was very young. The man did not know he had a man's ability.

But the eager boy watched for his chance. It came one night when he was left in charge at the station while the night operator went to a dance. A wreck occurred on the road, and the operators at headquarters rather wondered at the sharp, quick touch and snappy style of the sender at the Pella end of the line.

The story leaked out and Welch got a station.

Then his ideal was hoisted a bit. He wanted to be more than an operator at a dinky railroad station. He was soon ready for promotion and got it. He was sent to Chicago and Boston and elsewhere and made good wherever he went. He did more and better work and quicker work than was expected of him.

There was only one thing to do with Welch—promote him.

And there is no doubt this Iowa boy now has his eye on something better. He will get it.

His story is not unusual. It is the common story of well directed ambition and effort.

The only way to win success is to deserve it.

Hair Vigor. Does four things and does them well. Restores color to gray hair, stops falling hair, makes the hair grow, cures dandruff. Isn't this enough for one preparation?

DOWN WITH THE ROLLER TOWEL.

When the Travelers' Protective Association of Iowa met recently, the members in good standing didn't waste any fleeting moments on pass legislation or race suicide. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and then there was organized a crusade for liberty and freedom and better conditions that may go ringing down the channels of history or thereabouts.

Those drummers are going to fight the hotel roller towel with a boycott that has seven rows of teeth and means business.

That same towel is a wonder. Its natural setting is a hostelry where laundry soap is used for shaving purposes and where everybody calls the landlord "Si." The girl who waits on the table has seen better days. If you look sympathetic she will tell you about it. The food is served in those little stone boats that weigh a pound each and the coffee is neither Mocha nor Java, but a liquid inspiration for crime. The hair brush is poverty stricken as to bristles, and there is no comb.

But the towel!

The young fellow who clerks in the One Price Clothing Store gets the first look at it and he is followed by the locomotive engineer who lays over at that town and eats at the hotel. He leaves his mark, all right, all right. A dozen more come in a hurry, and most of them sozzle a bit at the sink, take their turn at the towel, and hustle into the banquet room.

And along about the time when the ax is being applied to the dried apple pie, the member of the Travelers' Protective Association of Iowa, who has been trying to sandbag a bill of goods into the store of the village grocer, arrives on the scene. He has the final wipe on the roller towel. It is wet and clammy and limp. It looks like a war map of Manchuria. A Sherlock Holmes could analyze it and name the vocation of every guest in the hotel. The drummer curses the luck and wonders why the board of health doesn't interfere.

And so the fight goes on. More power to the Travelers' Protective Association. May its Togos and Rojstvenskys keep up the battle until the banner of the country hotel is trailed in the dust or sent to the laundry.

HIGHEST IN 25 YEARS.

Oregon Wool 40 Per Cent Higher Than a Year Ago.

E. Y. Judd, president of the Pendleton Woolen Mills, and a member of the firm of H. C. Judd & Rood, wool dealers of Hartford and Boston, in an interview in Portland, said: "Wool growers will make more money this season than they have in any in the past 25 years. Oregon wool is selling 40 per cent higher than it did a year ago. Then it was worth 13 cents a pound; now it is worth 20."

"The price has gone up," he said, "and may go higher. Many of the growers contracted for their wool too soon to receive the full advantage of the advance, but a majority held long enough to realize the full benefit. The increase is due to the fact that a number of Eastern buyers have purchased all the wool they could get. There has also been a great demand from the foreign market."

Furious Fighting.

"For seven years," writes Geo. W. Hoffman, of Harper, Wash., "I had a bitter battle, with chronic stomach and liver trouble, but at last I won, and cured my diseases by the use of Electric Bitters. I hesitatingly recommend them to all, and don't intend in the future to be without them in the house. They are certainly a wonderful medicine, to have cured such a bad case as mine." Corvallis Times: Speaking of strenuousness, that displayed by two young ladies of Corvallis last Saturday is seldom equaled. They were Misses Josie and Edna Fullerton, both school marms, and their stunt was a trip to Aisea on their wheels. They left Corvallis in the morning and all went well until they struck the mountains and here the recent rains had left the roads in terrible condition for cyclists. The girls had to walk eleven miles of the way

OFFENSIVE CATARRH

I suffered for a long time with a bad case of Catarrh, and took a great deal of medicine without any benefit.

I had a continual headache, my cheeks had grown purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor, and I coughed incessantly. I heard of your S. S. S. and wrote you. I commenced to use it, and after taking several bottles I was cured and have never since had the slightest symptom of the disease. Miss MARY L. STORM, Cor. 7th & Felix Sts., St. Joseph, Mo.

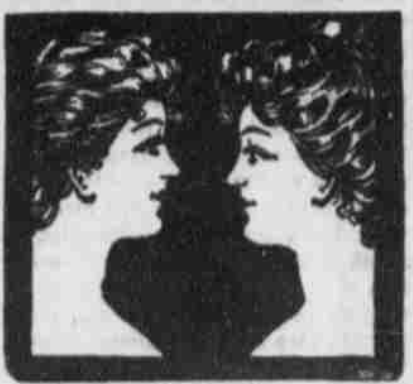

Wheeling, W. Va., May 29, 1903.

I had Nasal Catarrh for years for which I used S. S. S. with very gratifying results. I tried local applications for some time, and getting no permanent relief I came to the conclusion that the seat of the trouble was in the blood. Knowing S. S. S. to be a good blood medicine I began its use, and after using it for some little while it did away entirely with the offensive mucus in the nostrils, and I did not have to hawk and spit, especially in the morning, to dislodge the catarrhal matter. 1627 South St. FRANK H. PRESSY.

The filthy secretions and foul mucus that are continually dropping back into the throat, find their way into the stomach and are absorbed into the blood. Catarrh then becomes constitutional, and the only way to get rid of it is through the blood. Write us if you have Catarrh, and our physicians will advise you without charge.

Will Have Big Crop.

The Journal is the proud recipient of a cluster of peaches from the Jones & Clark peach orchard in Morainingside, which indicate that the crop will be a bumper this year. The cluster has a round dozen of half grown peaches and is only one of hundreds of similar ones taken from the trees yesterday. Judging from appearances, every blossom in that orchard must have produced a peach, and the trees are already literally breaking under their weight. Mr. Clark celebrated Lewis & Clark day by thinning them out with a garden rake, and looks for the biggest peach crop ever known here.

Excursion Rates.

During the Lewis and Clark Exposition the O. C. T. Co. will make a rate of 75 cents to Portland, round trip $1. Tickets good for 10 days. Boats leaving daily.
