A Workingman's Celebration.

The action of the Commercial Club in having a celebration of the independence of our country devoted to RECOGNITION OF THE INTERESTS OF THE WORKING MEN will be heartily endorsed by all thinking people. It was the workingman who dug the trenches and built the fortifications and performed the common labor and were the common soldiers in the time of the revolution that made American independence possible.

As for the workingman today who builds our cities, improves property and pays taxes, and without whom the merchant's business and the banker's profits would dwindle mightily small. So to give up the program and the day IN HONOR OF THE COMMON PEOPLE has appropriateness and merit. There is a grand field for the transformation of many of our public functions into something more distinctly American.

Let the workingmen be honored for their industry, their devotion to home and community and country. Let the workers not forget that even property itself would have no value but for the fact that an army of laborers goes on from day to day performing the common rounds of duty WHICH GIVE THE LANDLORD HIS RENT AND THE MILLIONAIRE HIS INCOME.

BEWARE OF THE BREAKERS.

It seems to The Journal that there are large and portentous political clouds in the air, and something of a crisis is at hand.

Regulation of railway corporations is a question that will not be put down by any make-shift legislation.

If the senate should carry out the program, its committee has announced it will advance the cause of government ownership wonderfully. The Journal is not now and never had been in favor of that proposition, but it is heartily IN FAVOR OF CLOTHING THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION WITH POWER TO FIX RATES, AFTER INVESTIGATION. It was not always in favor of some such measure as the house bill should become a law.

The power of the trusts to arbitrarily fix prices at will must be curtailed in some way or the tariff wall will have to be removed.

The writer was a protectionist all his life, but it seems we are coming previously near the line where our tariff ceases to be protection to the labor and capitalist, for a fair return for labor employed and capital invested, and BECOMES THE INSTRUMENT OF EXTORTION AND ROBBERY. The people may look for some startling developments in the next two years along this line.

German Day at the Fair.

July 21 to 23 have been set apart for the observance of German days at the Lewis and Clark fairs.

There will be a saengerfest, in which the singing societies of the Northwest will participate, and the good old songs of the fatherland will be heard once more.

There will also be opportunities for renewing old acquaintances and meeting old friends who have not come together in this country or the old home for many years.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SECURING GERMAN IMMIGRATION FOR OREGON CANNOT BE OVERESTIMATED.

The German-American population will compare favorably with any class of citizens, for thrift, industry and orderly, law-abiding citizens.

The Germans of Salem and surrounding country should turn out a large number on German day. It is the intention to go to Portland from Salem on the local train on the 21st and stay over to see the entire fair.

The West Should Stand Together.

In some localities of the arid West a spirit of envy or jealousy has manifested itself because there are those who feared that certain sections were getting, or might get, the benefit of the reclamation fund to the detriment of another section, or because some have thought that favoritism was shown in the approval of certain irrigation projects prior to another. This feeling has been shown even between communities in the same state, but in no case has it benefited any locality. Now a fair spirit of rivalry may be commendable, but one state or community cannot build itself up by trying to retard the growth of another. Speaking along this line the Inter-Mountain, of Butte, Montana, says with reference to its own state:

"The Montana community which opposes irrigation projects in any section of the state under the apprehension that such improvement will delay enterprise nearer home may learn something to its advantage by careful study of the thrilling fable of the dog which dropped the bone to pursue the shadow thereof."

There is plenty of room in the arid West for growth and expansion along irrigation lines, and every state and territory will no doubt receive a "square deal" in the apportionment of the irrigation fund, and every feasible project be given due attention by the government. The construction of an irrigation system in Arizona or California will not interfere with the commencement of operations on a project in Montana or Washington, so long as Uncle Sam has the money or credit and men can be found to do the work.

What the Inter-Mountain says with reference to Montana localities can be said with equal truth to apply to the several states and territories which come under the operation of the irrigation act. The completion and successful operation of one irrigation system under the reclamation law, will help all other projects in contemplation. The whole arid West should stand together in pushing irrigation development.—Maxwell' Talisman.
