

GOTHAM LETTER

New York, July 1.—Governor's Island is to have a military chapel, to cost approximately $50,000. It will be erected at the expense of the Trinity Corporation, and will occupy a commanding site overlooking Buttermilk Channel. The United States government is now increasing the area of the island, and the erection of the chapel will be along the line of other improvements. The building will take the place of St. Cornelius' Chapel, a wooden structure erected in 1841.

Trinity Corporation has since 1868 provided the chaplain for the army post in the bay. The clergymen have been nominated by the rector and chosen by the general commanding, with the approval of the war department. This is an unusual arrangement, for at all other army posts in the country the chaplain is a member of the regular army and holds a commission. The corporation pays the salary of the Governor's Island chaplain and the government provides a house for him.

position of the General's daughter, Mrs. Rober, of Washington. The first Mrs. Miles, who was a daughter of Judge Sherman and a niece of the general and senator of that historic name, died in her summer home on the Hudson last summer.

Insurance men of this city have started a vigorous campaign against hired witnesses, "shyster" lawyers, ambulance chasers, and professional accident claimants. A body corresponding to the American Bankers' Association will be formed so that a concerted effort may result in the incarceration of those who get "fake" injuries and then mulet insurance companies and public service corporations. The organization will extend all over the United States.

It seems that Frederick W. Vanderbilt, the least conspicuous member of the family, has a strong liking for Japanese architecture. He followed the lead of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in having his Adirondack camp rebuilt in the style that prevails in the chrysanthemum land. After Mrs. Willie W. had her camp on Blue Lake built over by Japanese architects and workmen at large cost she never used it, but her husband's uncle not only lived in his Oriental camp, but has just had two more buildings of similar character put up on his preserve. Upper St. Regis Lake, on which the Fred Vanderbilt estate is situated, is distinguished this year by an architectural freak at Camp Katia. It consists of three circular buildings of rough stone, connected by passageways. The first circle, which is fifty feet in diameter, contains a boathouse on the lower floor and a ball room above. One of the freaks of this "camp" is that the lamps are set in niches in the three-foot walls, with a chimney for every lamp leading outside. A ballroom in a "camp" is a new phase of the wealthy American's idea of the simple life.

There is at least one smart colony in this part of the country where the automobile is not encouraged by the women who live there. That is Lenox, which has the reputation of standing out longer against the automobile than any one of the fashionable summer resorts. Up to two years ago there was not a single motor car owned by any of the occupants of the hundred cottages that comprise society's idea of Lenox, and up to the present there is not one woman in that colony who drives a car. To the smart women folk who live there the horse is king, and nothing must intrude on his domain.

about to retire. Morrell is one of the old men of the department, having been a policeman for nearly thirty-five years. Prior to his appointment he was a boatman, and is known as an expert in judging the length of time bodies have been in the water. In 1889 he was detailed at the morgue, and has been there since. He has handled thousands of bodies, and, it is related, got so accustomed to the work that he said he "liked it." Morrell distinguished himself in the Slocum disaster. He handled and checked all the nine hundred odd bodies taken to the 26th street docks and morgue, and his records are the most important of those of that disaster in the archives of the department of public charities. He has not been well since.

FAIRY TALES FOR SMART SET.

Little Red Riding Hood Revised for Children of the Rich.

Once upon a time there lived in a certain village on Narragansett bay a little girl who was the prettiest creature ever seen. Her mother was excessively fond of her, and saw her as frequently as possible, sometimes as often as once a month. Her grandmother, who doted on her even more, had made for her in Paris a little red riding hood of velvet embroidered with pearl passementerie, which became her girl so well that everybody called her Little Red Riding Hood.

One day her mother said to her: "Go, my dear, and see how thy grandmother does, for I fear she has been ill with gout and gastritis. Carry her this terrapin and this pot of foi gras."

The grandmother lived in a secluded and exclusive part of the village, in a marble hut situated in the midst of a wooded park. Little Red Riding Hood got out of the carriage when she came to the park, telling the footman she would walk the rest of the way. She had hardly passed the hedge when she met a wolf.

"Whither are you going?" he asked, looking wistfully at her.
"I am going to see my grandmother, and carry her a terrapin and a little pot of foi gras from my mamma."
"Well," said the wolf, "I'll go and see her too. I'll go this way and you go that, and we shall see who will be there first."

The wolf ran off as fast as he could and was first at the door of the marble hut. The butler informed him that madame was not at home, but he sprang through the door, knocking the butler over, and ran upstairs to madame's boudoir.

"Who's there?" asked the grandmother, when he tapped.
"Your grandchild, Little Red Riding Hood," replied the wolf, counterfeiting her voice, "who has brought you a terrapin and a little pot of foi gras."
The good grandmother, who had eaten nothing for two days but a pressed mallard and a pint of champagne, cried out hungrily, "come in, child!"
The wolf ran in, and falling upon the kind old lady ate her up in a hurry, for he had not tasted food for a whole week.

The wolf then got into the grandmother's bed and presently Little Red Riding Hood tapped at the door. The wolf pitched his voice as high and unpleasant as he could and called out, "Come in child!" And when she entered he said, hiding himself under the bedclothes, "put the terrapin and the little pot of foi gras on the gold taboret, and come and lie down with me."

Little Red Riding Hood did not think it good form to go to bed so very late in the morning, but, as she was an obedient child, she took off her gold-flowered frock and the little diamond stomacher, and got into bed, where, amazed at the change in her grandmother's appearance, she said to her:

"Grandmamma, how thin your arms have got!"
"I have been dieting, my child!"
"Grandmamma, how thin your legs have got!"
"Walking has become a fad, my child!"

"Grandmamma, how quiet you are!"
"This is not the Metropolitan opera house, my child!"

"Grandmamma, what has become of all your gold teeth?"
"These will do, my child!"

And saying these words, the wicked wolf fell upon Little Red Riding Hood and ate her all up.—Bert Leston Taylor, in Puck.

Indians Recognized.

Aberdeen, Wash., June 27.—F. R. Archer, Chehalis county assessor, to whom has been given the task of allotting the lands on the Quinalt Indian reservation, and who has been made disbursing agent for the department of the Interior, says the allotment will be made before fall. Mr. Archer thinks that about 800 Indians will be entitled to receive land, on the basis of 80 acres of agricultural land, or 40 acres of agricultural and 80 acres of grazing land, or 160 acres of grazing land to every man, woman and child. Should an Indian desire but 20 acres of agricultural land, he would be entitled to 120 acres of grazing land.

The reservation contains about 224,000 acres of land which includes some of the finest timber remaining in the state. It is said that most of the Indians have practically made their choice of location, and that they have shown their worldly wisdom in the selection of the finest lands in the reserve. Most of the land along the Quinalt river, with its famous salmon, is already used by them as squatters, and their rights in this respect will probably be scrupulously observed in the allotment, which they are said to be anxious for.

For many years the longing eyes of the white man have been turned toward the reservation as a place of big trees and fine fishing, and not a few have held themselves in readiness to take a homestead or a timber claim there when the land was allotted. But it looks as if all such would be doomed to disappointment, as present indications are that the best of the remaining timber will be returned into the Olympic forest reserve, which it adjoins.

In the event of its being thrown open to settlers, it would first be necessary for congress to pass a special law before it can be taken, which would further delay settlement.—Astoria Budget.

Prevent As Well As Cure Headache

If subject to headache, take Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills when you feel the first indication of an attack, and you will find that they rarely ever fail to stop further progress.

Pain weakens the nerves, and the longer you suffer, the more frequent will be the attacks. On the contrary, if the nerves are relieved of this weakening influence, the attacks will be less frequent, and finally disappear altogether.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills contain no opium, cocaine, morphine or chloral in any form. They are absolutely harmless if taken as directed, and will have no other effect, except to drive out the pain.

"Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are all right, and I can recommend them to any one in need of a remedy for headache, neuralgia, or pain of any kind. My health is not very good, and I am subject to frequent attacks of severe headache, but since I began taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills I do not suffer from that trouble as I used to. They never fail to give relief in a few minutes, and if taken promptly on the approach of headache will prevent an attack from coming on. Pain Pills prevent, as well as cure."
