CITY COUNCIL DECIDES

Will Submit Proposition to Build Bridges to Vote July 24

At the special meeting of the city council held last evening the ordinance calling for a special election for the purpose of submitting to the electors of the city the proposition of bonding the city for $35,000 with which to construct seven concrete bridges within the city, was passed with but one dissenting vote. Alderman Bayne was the lone member voting against it. The election will be held July 24. Alderman Bayne also made an effort to have this part of the ordinance amended and to have the election put off until the next regular municipal election which is December 4. He argued that this would save the city the unnecessary expense of holding a special election. The opposition, however, maintained that the bridges needed to be attended to at once and that if the election was put off until December 4 that it would be necessary to expend much more for repairs than they would save, not to mention the danger of a lawsuit which existed all the time, and might materialize at any moment.

STATE NEWS

The Eugene Stars defeated the Chemawa Indian team the Fourth by a score of 16 to 0.
Charles Grulling, a rancher living near Dallas, was kicked in the face by a horse Wednesday and very seriously injured.

Marshfield was defeated Sunday by North Bend and Monday by Coquille. This puts North Bend at the head of the league, with Coquille a close second.

Mamie Hart, a telephone girl in Haas' drug store in Portland, was found locked in a small closet at the German beer garden and dance hall directly in front of the entrance to the Lewis and Clark fair Wednesday night. She had been robbed of her money and jewelry.

William F. Beckman, who murdered his wife and stepson, Robert Ring, at Oak Creek, near Roseburg, in 1890 and was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for life, and who was pardoned by Governor T. T. Geer in 1892, is to be brought back to Roseburg and tried for the murder of Robert Ring. When Beckman was pardoned, he was told to leave the state and never to return. He did so, but recently returned to Portland, and when this fact became known to the authorities he was arrested.

Eli Miller, a miner of Myrtle creek, aged 70 years, was found dead at his mine 13 miles northeast of Myrtle Creek, Monday. By the side of his body was Miller's sole companion, a hound, that was nearly dead from starvation. Circumstances show that the accident occurred on June 25, and that he died by his own hand. A knife was found in his hand, which was covered with blood. He had been pinioned by one leg by the roots of a huge stump which had fallen in on him while he was digging a ditch, and it is supposed that he despaired of ever getting help in that isolated place and he cut his throat in preference to starvation.

To Gauge the Streams.

State Engineer Lewis yesterday afternoon received word from the secretary of the interior, stating that his plan for the biographic and typographic work to be carried on in Oregon this summer had been adopted, and that the government would expend $2500 for the work of each of these branches. This means that the $500 appropriated by this state for this purpose is now available for use between now and the end of the year. Mr. Lewis will also be appointed by the government hydrographer for the state of Oregon, and will thus have charge of all stream-gauging work in the state, under both state and national appropriations.

Mr. Lewis and assistant, Mr. Allen, who has been in the employ of the Deschutes Irrigation Company for some time, left for the upper branches of the Willamette for the purpose of doing some preliminary work on the proposed gauging stations, which it will be necessary to establish in order to determine the water supply of these streams.

Tearful Milk.
(From the Tatler.)
A lady was complaining to her dairymaid some time ago about the quality of his milk. "Short o' grass feed, mum—short o' grass feed this time o' year," said the jocular milkman. "Bless you, them cows o' mine are just as sorry about it as I am. I often stands and watches 'em cryin'—regular cryin' mum—because they feel as how their milk don't do 'em credit. You don't believe it?" "Oh, yes, I believe it," said the lady; "but I wish in future you'd see that they don't drop their tears into our can."

THE FARMER'S HOME

SHARES IN THE BENEFITS OF SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS.

Mrs. L. O. Law Shows How the Burden of the Farmer's Wife May Be Lightened.

The traveler through fields of corn and grain in such states as Kansas, sees from the car windows numerous applications of modern inventive skill to the production of the farmer's wealth, and in every county seat he finds a large display of machinery for cultivating and harvesting crops. He cannot so readily learn to what extent the farmer's home has shared in the general advance, but he knows how essential to the farmer's happiness must be everything that ministers to the strength and cheerfulness of his partner—the faithful housewife. Thousands of farmer's wives, in the Great West particularly, will read with interest the story of the struggle of one of their number to meet the constant demand upon her strength until she found that she was losing ground in the unequal contest, and must cease to be a helpmate and enter the class of confirmed invalids, if help did not come from some source that would renew her strength.

Mrs. L. O. Law, of No. 324 North Street, Horton, Kansas, says: "In 1897, while we were living on a farm in this neighborhood, I became generally debilitated as the result of overwork. I had serious indigestion, lost my appetite, suffered from a sense of suffocation and from obstruction of the circulation, so that artificial means had to be used to restore it. After suffering for months without finding any relief, I tried a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which I had seen advertised in a newspaper. The first few boxes made me lots better, and after using the third box I felt entirely well. About two years afterward I ran down again and immediately resumed taking the pills. In two months I was fully restored to vigor and have held the gain ever since. I am now in excellent health and am able not only to take care of my house but also able to assist my husband in a store which he has lately taken. Pink Pills have helped me every time I have taken them. They deserve to be recommended. They are so simple, so easily taken and so prompt in their action. I have said this to many already and am glad to say it still more."

This remedy, being in the form of a pill, is manifestly free from alcohol, against which so much has been printed, and it is guaranteed to contain nothing that can injure the most delicate constitution. The pills can be obtained from all druggists and at most general stores.

Refuses Husband's Tainted Money.
(From the New York World.)
Mrs. William Connell in the supreme court, Brooklyn, declared yesterday that she had separated from her husband because he was a gambler. "I would not use any of the money he gave me," said Mrs. Connell, "because it was not honestly earned."

Mrs. Connell, her two children and her parents were before Justice Kelly on the return to a writ of habeas corpus sued out by her husband for possession of the children.

Mrs. Connell said she left her husband a year ago. "He wanted me to lead a dishonest life," she said.

"What is that you say?" Justice Kelly asked.

"Well," replied the woman, "he is a gambler. My parents have supported me since I left him. They give me three meals a day and what pin-money I need. I would not touch a cent of my husband's ill-gotten gains. Last March he met the little ones on the steps of papa's home and gave them some fruit, but my parents would not let the children eat a mouthful of it." Connell said he had endeavored to treat his wife and children well. He had an income of $75 a month and earned money outside of that. He put money in a drawer every week where his wife could get it for the support of the home, he said, but she would not use it.

Justice Kelly decided, in view of the fact that the children are very young, they should remain with their mother. The father, however, will be permitted to see them. He made no order for the payment of any money by Connell to his wife.
