and the people are ready to believe that before calm is restored it will have struck the mystic thirteen, or the present, at least, the Krause case has effectually "quered" the homestead fakir's chances in the neighborhood. Dismay is writ large across the face of things. Not even stimulants would make the commission men talkative here.

At North Platte, the headquarters of some of the largest ranches in Nebraska, the same signs were easily discoverable, though the tone of the talk was rather more optimistic than elsewhere. Upon inquiry the reason for this became obvious. North Platte is something of a political center, and has been there many years. The people have learned to pin their faith to political influence; many of the townsmen are masters of the art of political chicanery; politics are relied upon, to a large extent, as a means of bringing order out of chaos and restoring the land-graft to its old, safe and sound basis. The people of North Platte were rather the most philosophical of all encountered upon this excursion. Not a few of the foremost professional politicians of the town have been receiving a substantial dividend from the homestead thimble-rigging. It is not by virtue of the cattlemen's large "vested interests" that that district hopes to perpetuate present conditions, but rather by virtue of political "pull," pure and simple. Thus far circumstances have seemed to justify their confidence. Some of the most aggravated of the state's thefts have been committed in that region; and there the unlawful fences have thrived like luscious weeds; yet nothing has occurred thereabouts to cause more than a gentle agitation of the sullied surface of things. A few mild and gentlemanly orders have gone forth, relative to the removal of some of the illegal fences, but no drastic measures have been taken, no prosecutions begun, no serious intimation given that the federal land-laws are really superior to private and unlawful interests. A rather hasty and cursory inspection failed to discover any signs that any considerable amount of fencing has been taken down. The North Platte district is standing pat, watchful but undaunted.

There I could get no immediate offer for an assignment of my homestead rights; but it was confidently asserted that two or three months, more or less, will witness the end of the present frenzy of righteousness on the part of the general government, and that thereafter I might, in all probability, "do some business." There, too, fifty dollars and expenses was the price freely named as the basis for a trade. All over the state there is a striking uniformity in that particular of late; it is so noticeable as to suggest a common understanding amongst the grafters that one district shall not outbid another. Perhaps the federal anti-trust law might be invoked here.

To sum up: A halt has been called in the Nebraska homestead-traffic, which seems likely to endure until such time as the interested parties can find out "where they are at" and what the government really intends. There is no armistice, nor anything like it; nobody is talking of peace negotiations. The war is to go on presently, and it promises to be a gorgeous spectacle.

A flying trip into Montana discovered one phase of the land graft that has suffered no abatement of fervor. The Flathead Indian reservation, embracing about 1,500,000 acres of agricultural, grazing and timber lands in the western part of the state, is soon to be thrown open to settlement. Active preparations are going forward for a repetition of the Rosebud farce-comedy when the opening comes. Many land companies of one sort and another have been organized here and there over the state, and all are spending money freely in advertising for "homesteaders." Western Montana is a remote spot, well out of reach of the long arm and the big stick. If present plans do not miscarry, the Flathead opening will be added to the long list of outlaws.

SIX PHYSICIANS

FOUND THIS CASE OF RHEUMATISM BEYOND THEIR SKILL.

Mr. Jones Tells of the Way by Which He Treated Himself Successfully When Doctors Failed.

Six physicians, all of them good, one of them a specialist, had done their best for Mr. Jones at different times during three years, and still he suffered fearfully from the tortures of rheumatism.

He had felt occasional twinges first in January, 1901, and in February of that year he was compelled to give up and to take to his bed for a siege of two weeks. From that time on for a period of more than three years, until the fall of 1904, he was a constant sufferer.

Of his condition during this time, Mr. Jones says: "My rheumatism started in my right thigh, but in time it spread throughout my body. I lost the use of my left arm entirely and nearly lost the use of my right one. My feet were badly affected, especially the bottoms of the heels. When my right side was affected there was swelling, but the left side didn't swell when the disease settled there. The internal organs didn't seem to be involved at all. The trouble was all in the muscles and the nerves."

Among the few who still encouraged Mr. Jones to think that a cure might yet be found in spite of the many disappointments he had suffered was a friend who had reason for great confidence in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and acting on her advice he bought a box of them in September, 1904. The story of what followed is brief but nothing could be more satisfactory, for a perfect cure was at last found.

"When I was on the third box," says Mr. Jones, "I could realize a change for the better. I felt sure then that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were the right medicine for my case. So I kept on and now I am entirely well, and everybody is asking what I took. I wasted a great deal of money on useless treatment, but the little I spent for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was invested right."

Mr. Williams Jones lives at Oxford, Mich, and is well known through Oakland and Lapeer counties. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills effect wonderful cures in rheumatism, because they work directly on the blood, which is the seat of the disease. As soon as that is cleansed and enriched pains and swellings disappear. No other remedy can compare with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and nerve tonic. They are sold by every druggist. The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., will send a valuable booklet on "Diseases of the Blood," to any one who writes for it.

STEALING PUBLIC LANDS

and with no difference save that his vocabulary was of a wider and rather more scholarly range than that of the O'Neill man.

"Are you sure it's Mr. Hitchcock?" I asked. "Down our way people think the President is responsible."

"Then they'd better think again," he told me. "It isn't the President; it's the interior department. We know that, to a dead certainty. The President isn't the man to lay down on his friends—and the cattlemen have been his friends all through. He used to run a ranch, up in Dakota, and he knows the ranchmen's troubles. Besides a lot of the fellows in his Rough Rider regiment were ranchmen who have a good deal at stake in this business. Of course everybody knows that if it was put up to him, nothing like that would stop him from doing what was right, especially with the big ones that have been hogging the lands and keeping the homesteaders out of the country; but, just the same, he wasn't the one that started this thing now. It was Secretary Hitchcock."

"Then I can't sell my homestead rights up here!"

"Not now. We've got to wait and see. This may come to nothing, or it may get serious."

"Maybe I could find some soldiers' widows for you," I suggested. "You have been using a lot of them up here."

He shook his head emphatically. "That's all off," he said. "Hadin't you heard? All those widows' entries have been held for cancellation—all of them. That's what made the Standard people quit. And that was Hitchcock's doing, too."

"But I don't see what you're afraid of in homestead filings like mine," I said. "These indictments have all been found for fencing; there haven't been any for fraud homesteading."

"No," he agreed, "but there will be, likely, in the Bart Richards case, up here in Sheridan county. That's the hunch we've got. They'll be sent soon; we're looking for them any time. You can see that if they begin bringing perjury indictments, it will be simply—"

At Chadron there was only a monotonous repetition of the earlier experiences, with slight variations. There it was not hard to discover real signs of fear; for there some of the shadiest pieces of land buccannery in the state have been perpetrated, both before and since the passage of the notorious Kinkaid and act. Chadron was "laying low." The familiar phrase, "doing a land office business," had become all at once a hollow mockery. During the several hours spent in this town I found only one encouraging symptom, when an agent telephoned his principal (a substantial ranchman in the neighborhood) somewhat in this wise:

"There's another homesteader in the office. I reckon I'd better turn him down, hadn't I?"

The answer he got seemed to confirm his own reckoning; for I was promptly "turned down," and constrained to make further quest for my market.

It was at Alliance, the home town of the Krauses, that this new disquietude seemed to have its vortex. In true craven fashion, the whole community is aquake. Aside from the wandering "hobo" claimants, a good half of the town's population, of legal age and qualifications has implicated itself in the frauds by making perjured filings—railroad men, artisans, doctors, lawyers, teachers, and all the rest. The evidence in the Krause case disclosed that these men had acquired upwards of 10,000 acres of deeded land upon which no shabbiest pretense of improvements had been made—that is to say, nearly a hundred claimants had committed perjury for hire. The Krause transactions represent but an infinitesimal fraction of the frauds practiced in that district. I found the people morbidly skeptical of the truth of the old saw that "lightning does not strike twice in the same place." Lightning has struck once at Alliance,

Letter for the Boys.

Swimming Hole, East State St.

Mister Editor of the Journal:

The Boys who have for many years been in the habit of bathing in Mill creek. Just below the Dam, Desire to return you a vote of thanks for the article published in the Evening Journal in our behalf. We desire to say that we have been always quiet and wore bathing Suits (that is "Breech Cloths") not knowing that we were compelled to wear full suits, and on no occasion were we "Stark naked" only perhaps while we pulled off our "Suits," and those Boys that Marshall Cornelius "pulled" were taken while they were changing their Suits for dry clothing. Judge Moore's is a nice man cause he was once a boy and can swim like a duck. We thank you Mr. Hofer for doing what you did for us, and if Your Carriers ever go on a Strike or get drowned in the River we will see that the Journal gets around to your Subscribers Because we believe you was once a Boy and can Swim.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
