

Brain Workers.

Brain workers suffer from headache because they over-tax and exhaust the brain nerves. Tired, irritated, turbulent brain nerves throb and ache; this weakens the brain power, and robs the memory.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills bring tranquility to the excited nerves and stop the pain. If not relieved, this nerve disturbance is frequently extended to the stomach, causing nausea, vomiting—sick headache.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are convenient to take—just a little tablet, that in a few moments relieves the pain; they leave no disagreeable after-effects, as they contain no opium, morphine, cocaine or chloral in any form.

"From personal experience I can testify that Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are a most excellent remedy for headache and neuralgia. I have been a great sufferer from both diseases for the past three years. A friend who had also suffered from neuralgia handed me some of the Anti-Pain Pills. I took them and they gave me almost instant relief. Since then I have a package at home, and another at the office, and they never fail to relieve me."

The Diamond Hero, the Fan and the Umpire.

They were seated in the parlor and the lights were burning dim; He was a "diamond" hero—she a "fan" so fair and trim.

But he knew not as he "opened the game" by murmuring "Love" That father was the "umpire," on the stairway, just above.

"I'd like to win this game," he said, "with me you've made a 'hit.'"

"Your curves are good," you have the speed, "and you are looking fit."

"And, if with you my turtle dove, I make a 'hit' likewise, Won't you help me advance a bit" and make a "sacrifice,"

She answered: "How's your salary whip?" I hope it isn't lame; If so, there's nothing left for me—except postpone the game."

The umpire, on the steps above remarked: "It's time that I Called this young man 'out,' 'stealing home' before the 'game's a tie.'"

"I want a 'free pass' to your heart," he kept on with a sigh, And straightway "whipped one round her neck" — the other was "waist high."

Just here the umpire "batted in." She gasped, "Oh, father please, There's nothing wrong, for George is only showing me the 'squeeze.'"

"All right," the irate umpire said, "I'll just keep up the fun By showing George another 'play' that's called the 'hit and run.'" He "swung hard" and George started "home," then came another "clout."

The son of "swat" "slid" down the steps—the umpire said "your out."

Startling Snake Story.

One day last week Aaron Hoffman had an experience with a rattler which he will not soon forget, says the Madras Pioneer. While sprouting potatoes in the bin near the house, he was conscious of something rubbing against his back, and glancing over his shoulders found that an immense rattlesnake had raised its head and was in the act of crawling up on his back. The sight froze the blood in his veins and he was too paralyzed with fear to move, and while he sat there the snake crawled over his shoulder and across his knees and into his hiding place. When young Hoffman did recover his powers of locomotion he ran into the house, but the reaction from the terrible fright completely prostrated him and he was unable for some time to tell his mother the cause of the fright. It is a well known fact that the rattlesnake unless disturbed will not strike, but even this fact does not make him a neighbor to be enjoyed.

Sickening Shivering Fits

of ague and malaria, can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine; of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to quinine, having none of this drug's bad after-effects. E. S. Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Electric Bitters, which saved his life. At J. C. Perry's drug store; price 50c guaranteed."

An Editor's Troubles.

Last week an exchange received the following from one of its late subscribers, which evidently was not intended for publication:

"Dear: I hereby offer my resignation as a subscriber to your paper, it being a pamphlet of such small consequence as not to benefit my family by taking it. What you need in your shete is brances & someone to russel up news and to rite editorials on live topics. No menshun has been made in your shete of me buceherin a polen china pig weighing 369 pounds or the gaps in the chickens out this way. You ignore the fact that i bot a new bobled and that i traded my blind mule and say nothin about Hi Simpkins jersey calf breaking his 2 frunt legs fallin down a well, 2 important chiveres have been utterly ignored by your shete & a 3 column obitueury notice writ by me on the death of Granpa Henry was left out of your shete to say nothin of an alfabetical poem be ginnin 'A' is for And and also for ark," writ by my darter. This is the feason your paper is so unpopolar here, and if you don't want editorials from this place and ain't going to put no news in your shete, We don't want said shete."

"P. S.—If you print obitueury in yure next i may sine again for yure shete."

Unique Bridge.

J. A. Festaband was down from Kelo yesterday. STOKES AND THE JEWESS

New Yorker, Rich and of High Social Standing, Marries Young Hebrew

Noroton, Conn., July 18.—The romance of Miss Rosa Harriet Pastor, the Jewish poetess and former cigarmaker, and J. G. Phelps Stokes, a member of the multi-millionaire family of New York, culminated in their wedding today at the home of the bridegroom's parents near this place. The wedding was of the simplest character, though attended by quite a large number of guests, including relatives of the two families and mutual friends, among the latter being nearly all of the prominent social settlement workers of New York City. The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's brother, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes.

It was less than a year ago that the announcement of the engagement of Miss Pastor and Mr. Stokes created a veritable sensation and became the topic of discussion throughout the country. Miss Pastor was born of poverty stricken parentage in Russian Poland, coming to this country while yet a child, and found it necessary to seek employment at an early age. She became a cigarmaker, working first in Cleveland and later in New York, and all the while employed herself away from her work bench in serious study. The sufferings of the poor early impressed her mind, and all of her verses and other writings have been around this one subject.

Mr. Stokes is regarded as a character quite as unique and apart from his fellows as is his bride distinguished from the most of those born to her station. Though belonging to a family distinguished for its high social standing as well as its wealth, Mr. Stokes early in life chose to devote his time to uplifting the submerged tenth of humanity rather than enjoying the profligate pleasures of society. When the social settlement was established in Rivington street in the crowded Jewish section of the lower east side, Mr. Stokes was one of its prime movers. He took up his residence at the settlement and ever since has continued to devote to it almost his entire time, as well as a large portion of his income.

Giving up her trade for newspaper writing Miss Pastor was sent to interview Mr. Stokes regarding the work and progress of the social settlement movement. It was a case of love at first sight. All such obstacles as difference in station, fortune and religion were surmounted by cupid, and in a short time after their first meeting the engagement of Miss Pastor and Mr. Stokes was announced. The announcement was received with satisfaction by all of the members of Mr. Stokes' family, and the only discordant note in the harmony of congratulations was voiced by the orthodox Jews who severely censured Miss Pastor for giving up her own religion and embracing that of her future husband. Within a few days Mr. Stokes and his bride will leave for Europe and will visit the native town of the bride in Southern Russia, the scene of some of her girlhood trials, of which she has written many interesting stories. On their return to New York they will resume their charitable and philanthropic work in the tenement districts.

The Egret's Feather.

Canon Rownsley, on Saint Martin's, after describing good Saint Martin, added:

Some of you, my friends, followers of the gentle Christ, come to worship, nay, come to the supper of our Lord, wearing 'egret' plumes or 'ospreys' in your hats and bonnets. Do you realize that this 'egret' plume grows on the bird's back only at the time of nesting, and that to obtain one such feather involves the cruel death of not only of the beautiful white mother heron, but of the whole nestful of its nearly-fledged offspring? What a price to pay for the pleasure of an egret plume! What a travesty of religion to be able to come to church decked with an egret feather and sing in the words of the Benedicite: 'O all ye world of the air, bless ye the Lord! praise Him and magnify Him forever!' What a mockery to kneel at holy communion, take the soldier's oath of allegiance unto the Lord—that gentle Lord of all compassion and mercy, that Lord who said 'Consider the fowls of the air!' who told us that not a sparrow falls to the earth unregarded by their Heavenly Father!—Our Dumb Animals.

Had Sold Both Ends of the Bolt.

A Columbus shopper tells this somewhat amusing story, giving the incident as an actual happening:

"I was making some purchases," she said, "in a downtown store and was directed by the floorwalker to the muslin counter. A young man was in charge, and I noticed at first that he was lightly affected by liquor. After sorting over a number of bolts on the shelf he finally threw down what I wanted. He looked at the cloth for a minute, meanwhile fumbling for the end. Finally he said disgustedly: 'Dick must have sold both ends of this. Yes, I am sure he did.' And with that he pushed his shears across the piece, and from the end thus made he sold me the quantity I desired."—Columbus Dispatch.
