Paving the Streets.

Another step is being taken in the matter of street improvement which may lead to good results. Since the request of the Taxpayers' League for crushed rock streets has been made to the council, the question of paving is uppermost in the minds of all classes. The council has asked the Taxpayers' League that a petition be presented, asking for such an improvement, but as yet the petition has not come in, but probably will. In the meantime some of the business men of the city, who pay the rents, as well as a number of large property owners, have submitted a petition to the council, asking that when an improvement is ordered for our business streets, it be something better than crushed rock. It has been learned that a few of the Taxpayers' League are strongly in favor of a better improvement. It is also learned that a number of them will not object to a first-class improvement, and it has pretty generally leaked out that not a few of them hope for no improvement whatever. This being the case, it is opportune that the subject should be taken up at this time, with a view to getting the best kind of a pavement for their money that can possibly be procured. The Journal does not mean by this that an extravagant system should be adopted, or that the highest priced pavement should be put down, but it does mean that this community should use its best intelligence to get an improvement such as will be lasting and be cleanable, and be within the means of the property owners. The fact that business men who are renters are petitioning for something better is evidence of the right spirit on their part. They are the men who pay the rents, who hustle the business which produces the incomes for the valuable properties, and they know that for every permanent improvement on property which they occupy an additional rent will ultimately be levied. Knowing this, it is to the credit of these business men that they are willing to show their faith with their own handwriting.

Just to illustrate the value of the good street improvement, the Journal would like to state its own case. The room which it occupies has 20 feet frontage. At $6.00 per frontfoot for a first-class pavement this piece of property will be assessed $120. Dividing this additional cost into 24 parts will make an additional rental of $5.00 per month for two years. This additional rental the publishers will be very glad to pay, in order to have our city property improved, and at the end of the two years undoubtedly conditions will be sufficiently improved to justify a continuance of that much, or more additional rent. Thus it is a very simple proposition that the owner of the building will find a first-class improvement a paying investment. We believe that we can predict with safety that other business people would very gladly do as well or better by their landlords if they felt that a work would extend for the permanent betterment of our town.

The Journal does not care to promote or encourage controversy on this subject, but it will be very glad to publish views of citizens and property owners on this subject which are pertinent and rational. It is time that the better element all around should get closer together on this improvement subject in order to produce results for our city's advancement.

WHEN BUYING A BROOM INSIST ON HAVING A SALEM BROOM.

REAL TRIBUTE TO REALISM.

The Hayseed Was Completely Carried Away.

It happened during the fire show at White City. The second afternoon performance was well under way and the pomper-men were nimbly climbing the ladders to reach the roof of the burning hotel.

Seated in the audience was a tall, spare man, his chin decorated with a bunch of whiskers somewhat discolored with tobacco juice. About his frame was wrapped a long yellow linen duster and in one hand he firmly grasped a valise. He was all attention and lost no part of the show. As the scene grew in intensity and the quodam guests of the hotel began leaping into the life net from the third story window he relaxed the motion of his jaws and stared with open mouth, and at the first scream of the woman whose child is in apparent danger, far removed from help, he sprang to his feet.

"Look at the little girl!" he yelled with all the force of a strong pair of lungs. "Look at the little girl—she'll be burned up!"

"Shut up! It's only in the play," replied a man behind him whose view was obstructed. "Sit down! Sit down!"

"She'll burn! She'll burn!" he yelled.

Somebody grabbed him from behind and forcefully pulled him into his seat, but he sprang up again like a steel spring.

"Get her out'en that, you firemen, git her out!" he shouted, quivering with excitement. "Somebody fetch a ladder there!"

He was pulled into his seat again and his attention was called to the fireman who was making his way up the ladders. But his excitement was not subdued until the girl was brought to the ground amid the cheers of the audience.

"I want to buy that man a drink," he shouted; "he's all right!"

When the curtain was finally drawn he took off his hat, wiped his forehead with a large red handkerchief and declared that he had never had such a time in his life.

"Just like a real fireman," he remarked to his neighbor. "Gee whizz! but this is the show for my money. I'm goin' to set here and see it all over again."

MEDICAL COLLEGE BUILDING

Willamette University Medical College to Have Fine New Brick Structure

The final plans and specifications have been adopted for the new medical building for Willamette University, and the actual work of construction will be started by the first of August. The matter was decided last night beyond all possibility of a doubt at the meeting of the finance committee, which was held in the office of Dean Byrd last night. The plan, as drawn by Architects Pugh & Legg, were adopted, and bids will be advertised for at once. The building will be constructed of brick, and will cost, complete, outside of equipment, etc., about $15,000. At the meeting last night it was found that there was enough money in sight to warrant going ahead with the work. A building committee, consisting of Dr. J. N. Smith, C. P. Bishop and E. P. McCormack, were appointed to manage the affair from the present time until the building was completed.

The building will be a two-story brick structure. The designs are drawn from the latest approved plans for medical colleges, and will be a credit to the city, as well as to the University. It will stand as a fine monument to the generosity of the contributors to the building fund, and the earnest and untiring efforts of the finance committee.

According to the present plans the basement of the building will be used for a chemical laboratory, the first floor proper will be divided into classrooms, the second floor space will be devoted to lecture rooms, while the attic, which will be quite spacious, will be used for a dissecting and clinic room. The building will be located in the north-west corner of the University campus and situated about a hundred feet back from State and Winter streets, respectively.

Celebrated Organist.

The following appeared recently in one of the Portland papers concerning Prof. Goodrich, who gives the recital at the M. E. church tonight:

"Mr. Goodrich, who has been organist at St. David's since last July, is the author of a number of meritorious compositions, and has presided at the organ in many celebrated English cathedrals. He served at St. John the Baptist cathedral in Kensington; St. Peter's at Hammersmith, London; St. Clement's at Kensington; St. Colum at Kensington, and at Bletchingly, Surrey county, where he had a large choir, choral society and orchestra."

X-RAYS

And now Heney will call; Next!

Anyway, when it rains the streets are well sprinkled.

All railroads lead to Klamath, according to latest reports.

Peary got started in the race all right but he didn't have the pole.

The pole might as well come down off its perch, now a Silverton man is after it.

No one need go hungry for work now, the harvest is ripe—and then comes hops.

Two thousand feet is something of a tumble, even when a one-winged airship accompanies you.

With the dentists and the doctors all in Portland at once the Health Board ought to have a rest.

A dog, a real fresh dog, ought to be able to outrun a bicycle, for the bike is tired all the time.

Idaho papers are jumping onto Hitchcock. Seems to us that what was done out this way, but the jumpers are getting off.

The Williamson case took so many printers out of Prineville the papers there couldn't write up the Fourth of July until the 13th.

If Peary does find the pole, our money says the Marion county boy from Silverton will climb it. He's used to a good climate, anyhow.

China isn't going to stand for any settlement between Russia and Japan unless she has a say in it. Say! Wouldn't that bamboozle you?

This is the weather that makes a fellow long to be at the seaside, and have his onliest girl with him. Still if he cannot be at the seaside the onliest girl will do.

Portland Writes Racing Epitaph.

Ben Benjamin, in the San Francisco Examiner, has this to say of Portland's coming races:

The managers of the coming Portland race meeting had a chance to make a ten-strike, but failed to do the right thing at the right time. How they expect to make such a long meeting a success with a "skindicate" betting attachment is hard to understand. The Seattle meeting was a frost on account of the "strangle hold" betting methods, yet Seattle was one of the most promising fields in the west for a good summer meeting. Three years of "skindicate" betting has killed the town for racing. The promoters benefited by "get-rich-quick methods" at the start, but it is a different story today. Butte, Mont., made $30,000 in two months by operating a syndicate book one year. The next year they tackled the proposition only to lose $20,000. The public fought shy of the cinch game. The Portland race promoters should take heed of what has happened in Butte, Sacramento, Seattle and numerous other cities that have toyed with the "skindicate" game. The sport may run along for two or three weeks, then the managers will see the crowd grow less and less with each succeeding week. If Portland had run a pro rata ring open to all bookmakers it would have helped the meeting, but to give the exclusive privilege to a few "strangle-hold" gamblers means the end of racing in the state of Oregon. A fitting epitaph for 1906 would be: "Racing killed in this state by managers who adopted 'get-rich-quick methods.'"

A Girl Who Demands Extravagance. (Margaret Ayer, in San Francisco Chronicle.)

Two young men were talking together on the train.

"What are you going to do Saturday afternoon?" asked one.

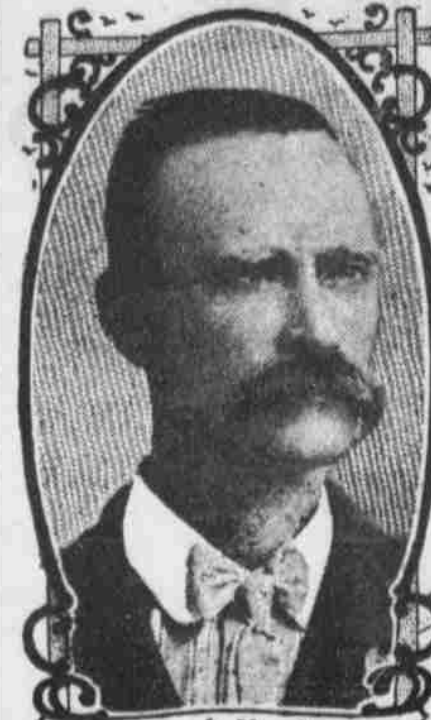

"Oh, nothing in particular. I wanted to take Mamie out again, but I can't afford it. Not that she is extravagant, but she doesn't seem to realize that everything mounts up in the end, even car fares and soda water. And a Saturday afternoon treat with her takes a good slice out of one's earnings."

The same complaint was heard from another struggling young man:

"I can't call on Miss So-and-So or accept her mother's hospitality, because she is putting me under an obligation that I cannot repay without spending just about all I make in one week, in theater tickets, cabs, bouquets, etc."

Girls, if you want to be popular, don't be extravagant, or expect a man

THE RICH AND THE POOR NEED PE-RU-NA.

Mr. Geo. A. Hughes.

"Pe-ru-na is the Medicine for the Poor Man."—Geo. A. Hughes.

CATARRH assumes different phases in different seasons of the year. In the early summer systemic catarrh is most prevalent.

That tired, worn-out feeling in nine cases out of ten is due to a catarrhal condition of the mucous membranes.

Mr. Geo. A. Hughes, 808 Mass. Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I am forty-five years old now, and feel as good as I did at twenty. I was very thin and run down, but Peruna acted just right in my case. I am a carpenter and sometimes need a tonic. Peruna is the medicine for a poor man."—Geo. A. Hughes.

A Congressman Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family.

Hon. Thos. J. Henderson, Member of Congress from Illinois, and Lieutenant in the Union Army for eight years, writes from the Lemon building, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Peruna has been used in my family with the very best results and I take pleasure in recommending your valuable remedy to my friends as a tonic and an effective cure for catarrh."—Thos. J. Henderson.

Peruna cleanses the mucous membranes and cures the catarrh wherever located.

Many Suffer With Catarrh and Don't Know It.

The Phase of Catarrh Most Prevalent in Summer is Run Down, Worn Out Condition Known as Systemic Catarrh.

There are no remedies for catarrh as good as Peruna. Accept no substitutes.

A reward of $10,000 has been deposited in the Market Exchange Bank, Columbus, Ohio, as a guarantee that the above testimonials are genuine; that we hold in our possession authentic letters certifying to the same. During many years advertising we have never used, in part or in whole, a single spurious testimonial.

Help a Good Cause.

The entire proceeds of the recital Friday evening go toward the organ fund, Eilers Piano House having very kindly given the services of Prof. Goodrich free of charge, and all others assisting are donating their time and services. Help the cause, and at the same time enjoy a fine entertainment, by attending the recital Friday evening.

Stude- baker Wagons

For the wood hauler, the grain hauler, or any place where the heaviest hardest work is to be done.

Studebakers are the product of a factory where experience counts. Nearly 70 years of cumulative knowledge go into every wagon turned out.

New England black birch hubs, second growth white oak spokes, with slope shoulders, sawed fellows, all contained in a wheel that's nearly a half larger by actual measurement than other shown, and tend to make the best wheel ever turned out of a factory.

The wheel determines the length of life of your wagon.
