DISASTROUS FIRE AT DRAIN

HARD BLOW FALLS

The Little Town Suffers a Loss of Not Less than $15,000

(Special to The Journal.)
Drain, Or., July 22.—2:40 p. m.—A fire broke out here at noon in the roof of the Commercial hotel, and only stopped when there was nothing in reach for it to burn. The buildings destroyed, and their values, are as follows: Commercial hotel, $5000; Hotel Drain, $3000; depot, $2000; roadmaster's office, $200; warehouse and contents, $700; barber shop, $500; two residences, $800; Mrs. Wheelon's millinery parlors, $400. The whole is a total loss, and is in the main part of the

BRITT BEATS SULLIVAN.

Letter a Hard Fighter, But Lacking in Science.

San Francisco, July 22.—Jimmy Britt is still the lightweight champion of the world. He was awarded the decision over "Kid" Sullivan tonight in a 20-round contest, in which Britt was the bright and shining star. He outpointed Sullivan in nearly every round, and, although he did not knock out the husky youngster from Washington, he demonstrated beyond all doubt his superiority. As the referee said: "It was a stake horse against a selling plater."

Britt gave a marvelous exhibition of scientific boxing. His generalship was perfect, and during the whole fight Sullivan never landed an effective blow. He did very little leading, and did most of his fighting in the clinches, when he would play his right against Britt's ribs. Sullivan made a number of rushes, but Britt's clever footwork kept him out of danger, and a straight to the nose would straighten Sullivan up and stop his impetuosity. Britt was very careful all through the fight, as he said:

"Why should I, with my superior skill, mix it with a man like Sullivan, who knows nothing except roughing it? I am confident that I am his master at that game, but I had too much at stake to take a chance. Sullivan is a good hard fighter, but he does not possess the necessary skill to make a champion."

ABOUT SAN DIEGO HORROR

Fifty-Six Dead and Many More Bodies Identified

—Admiral Notified

San Diego, July 22.—The list of dead as a result of the Bennington disaster this morning shows 55 dead and 55 still remaining in the several hospitals, and at private homes in the city. These include seven dead whose names are unknown, and who are still in the tangled meshes of the torn machinery in the Bennington boiler room, from which they cannot be recovered until the water is pumped out and the wreckage is cleared away. At roll call last night 21 were reported missing, and, while some of these may have gone ashore without leave, following the disaster, it is feared that many jumped into the bay to escape the explosion, and were drowned. Several who jumped were picked up in an exhausted condition. Just before Ensign N. K. Perry died he wrote a cheerful telegram to his wife and baby, and a few minutes later folded his hands in prayer and peacefully passed away. The cause of the accident, as definitely ascertained by an examination this morning, was the weakening of the crown sheet of the port forward boiler, which drove that boiler back, striking another boiler, and breaking the steam pipe. At Davis & Anderson's morgue, at 9 o'clock, there were 29 bodies.

San Diego, Cal., July 22.—The body of S. C. Hoffman, a blacksmith, was brought to the morgue from the hospital at 1 o'clock, making the dead from the Bennington number 56. Others identified today are C. E. Rushing, coal passer; M. C. Quinn, oiler; E. Brownlee, seaman; B. A. Hughes, ordinary seaman; A. Kemmer, coal passer; W. W. Wright, oiler; C. Hogg-bloom, coal passer; E. Dreach, ordinary seaman; A. Rensel, coal passer; F. W. Brown, machinist first class, Feraris; Claud Bushing and A. Nelson.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Darling has wired Rear-Admiral Goodrich, commanding the Pacific station, informing him of the disaster to the Bennington, instructing him in connection therewith. Goodrich is expected on Puget Sound at any moment, when he will communicate with the department. It is expected that Goodrich will appoint a board of inquiry after a conference with the Washington authorities.

San Diego, July 22.—Workmen just up from the engine room report seven bodies, three or four under the bulwarks and three more under the shattered machinery. A naval funeral for all the dead will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow.

San Diego, July 22.—The revised list of the identified dead is as follows: A. H. Schrogg, seaman, New Ulm, Minn.; A. F. Saunders, apprentice seaman, Springfield, Mo.; C. J. Jauntz, coal passer; Joseph Hill Pier, first class fireman, Washington, D. C.; F. U. Brunson, Chaney, Neb.; John McKane, seaman; J. E. Ezell, Waco, Texas; Rahrouse, apprentice seaman, Denver, Colorado; W. C. Wilson, Edward B. Ferguson, chief machinist; Edward B. Robinson. (Continued on Page Twelve.)

ITALIAN MURDER IN PORTLAND

Feravis Kills a Former Friend

—Shoots Six Times, and Hits Five

Louie Feraris, an Italian, aged 24 years, shot Carlo Bornanto, another Italian, aged 33 years, five times at 8:45 o'clock last night at Fourth and Sheridan streets, Portland. Feraris was captured, and is confined in the city jail; Bornanto died at St. Vincent's hospital at 1 o'clock this morning.

Behind the shooting is a brother's desperate attempt to save a young sister from shame and outrage. According to the story told by Feraris, through an interpreter, to Detectives Snow and Kerrigan, and substantiated in part by others of the Italian colony, Bornanto and another Italian, whose name is at present unknown by the authorities, induced the young sister of Feraris to enter a certain house in Little Italy, and there attempted to assault her. Feraris arrived on the scene, rescued his sister and took her home. Bornanto made threats at the time that he would kill Feraris if he came between his sister and the two men again.

Last night at 8 o'clock Bornanto, who lives at 658 Sixth street, went to the home of Feraris, at 656 Sixth street, next door, and demanded that Feraris come out and fight. He exhibited a knife, and Feraris locked the door of the dwelling, and refused to have anything to do with the man. Bornanto was intoxicated at the time, according to Italians questioned by the police on the scene of the shooting.

After making quite a disturbance, Bornanto went away from the house, and half an hour later Feraris put on his coat and started down town. At Fourth and Sheridan he came face to face with Bornanto, who advanced toward him, and endeavored to begin a quarrel. Feraris, not caring to have trouble, began to walk away, going toward the street car line. He had not taken a dozen steps when Bornanto, with an oath, drew a knife and started toward Feraris on a run. Feraris drew a revolver and fired six times, five of the shots taking effect in Bornanto's body. The victim fell at the edge of the sidewalk.

Feraris fled, but was caught. At the station he broke down, and declared he fired in self-defense.

At St. Vincent's hospital, Bornanto was immediately placed on the operating table. He had been struck in five places. A bullet had pierced the right lung, another had passed through the pit of the stomach, a third had broken the right wrist, and the fourth and fifth were lodged in the groin. Blood was spurting from the two wounds in the man's breast. The house surgeons declared immediately that it was impossible for the wounded man to survive.

VICIOUS JERSEY BULL

W. J. Huntington of Woodburn Has Narrow Escape From a Horrible Death

(Special to The Journal.)
Woodburn, Or., July 22.—W. J. Huntington, teamster for the Woodburn Nursery Company, was gored by a Jersey bull belonging to J. H. Settlement late last night, and is in a serious condition. The timely arrival of two of the employes was all that saved his life. Huntington entered the corral, carrying a club, as the animal was known to be vicious. He was attacked most furiously by the enraged creature and thrown to the ground. The brute gored and stamped on the prostrate man until he lapsed into unconsciousness. To the prompt action of Albert Walker and Alphonso Sapp, Huntington owes his rescue from a terrible death. They attacked the bull with rocks and clubs and rescued the injured man at the risk of their own lives. Huntington is still suffering intensely, and his recovery is a matter of grave doubt. He is a young man very popular in this community, where he has lived for many years.

Hugh Albrecht, who plead guilty to the charge of forgery was also sentenced to serve two years in the penitentiary, but, as he was under 16 years of age, he was turned over to the county judge for consideration, as to whether he shall be committed to the reform school or not. As the judge was still out of town at the time of going to press, it is not known yet what will be done with him, but it is very probable that he will be committed to the school this evening or tomorrow.

The case of H. P. Riddings against Marion county was given a change of venue, and will be tried in Clackamas county. This is the case in which Riddings seeks to recover $2000 damages for injuries received by going through a defective bridge near Monticor.

Shortly before noon the judge adjourned court until the October term.

To Investigation Elevator Companies

St. Louis, Mo., July 22.—The interstate commerce commission today began an investigation here into the question of alleged allowances made by railroads to companies or persons owning grain elevators or by such companies or persons owning elevators to shippers of grain. It is charged that these allowances furnish one of the most fruitful sources of violation of the interstate commerce law because they enable grain merchants to make a profit over the actual cost of the elevation.

The Malodorous Equitable.

New York, July 22.—Chairman Morton has discovered the chemicals used to make the erasures in the books of the Equitable. It is stated positively that the changes were made in pursuance of a definite object not to correct clerical errors. The erasures cover transactions of a year ago.

Paul Jones Is Home.

Washington, July 22.—A dispatch from Admiral Evans by wireless via Cape Henry states that the Sigbee squadron will anchor in the bay today 10 or 15 miles below Annapolis, and get under way Sunday in time to anchor off Annapolis at 10 a. m.

CHINESE BOYCOTT SPREADS

Now Lets See if Uncle Sam Will Lay Down on the Altar of Commercialism

Shanghai, China, July 22.—The boycott on American goods has now spread throughout the southern provinces. The area affected has a population of 150,000,000. The belief is growing that the boycott is managed by government officials.

German Beneficial Union.

Detroit, Mich., July 22.—Many visitors are here for the annual convention of the German Beneficial union, an organization composed of over 16,000 members in Michigan and nine other states. Aside from the routine business there will be numerous other features of the program. A street parade will be held Monday, and in the way of entertainment there will be excursions to the St. Clair flats and other points of interest in Detroit and vicinity.
