GRAND OPENING TONIGHT.

Little Edison Theatre Has a Fine Bill to Offer This Half of the Week.

Beginning tonight and continuing Friday and Saturday night and matinee and Sunday night, the popular little vaudeville theatre has a fine program to offer. The Starkeys, Robert and Ethel, will present their rural act entitled "Fun on the Farm." This act is full of funny situations and clever, witty lines, and, as the Starkeys made many friends in Salem when Mr. Starkey was manager of the Edison, the little theatre should be packed to overflowing. West and West present a comedy act that will be sure to please. Miss Grace Osmond sings the illustrated song. Her voice is a clear, sweet soprano, and those who enjoy good music will be sure to enjoy her singing. The Edisonoscope shows about a mile of motion pictures, the bull fight being featured.

Ingenuous Albany Boy.
 Archie Metzgar, of this city, with a common coffee mill, has just ground and separated into bran, middlings and flour of a splendid quality, some wheat which he picked from a field, doing the bolting by hand. It is such an excellent job it has been placed in exhibit bottles and will be part of the Linn county display, properly labeled. A pretty young, but efficient miller.—Albany Democrat.

Rev. Walton Skipworth has been appointed to fill the position of presiding elder of The Dalles district, made vacant by the death of Rev. G. M. Booth.

A girl who runs an automobile is a chauffeuse (sha-foose). Pretty name, isn't it.

A Journal reporter heard a man say the other day that anyone who could keep a dollar watch running could run an automobile and keep it in repair. But, judging from the number of "automobiles" always at the hospital, none of the owners of "shavers" own dollar watches.

Extreme Low Water.

The Willamette lacked but an inch Monday of being at dead low water. Dead low water means the mark that is as low as it has been since there has been a record. They have a gauge at Albany that show a mark several inches lower than at any other point, which is said to have been the notch touched in the summer of 1861. The government engineers, however, do not recognize it, but are guided by the marking at Corvallis, Salem and other points, all of which agree. The indications now are that the river will get low enough this season to smash the record, and establish a new marking for low water.—Corvallis Times.

One of the prettiest of late summer weddings was the marriage of Miss Anna Poyser to Mr. Harry Riley, of Lewiston, Idaho, which took place yesterday at noon at the home of the bride's parents north of this city. At 12 o'clock the bridal couple entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and Rev. W. H. Selleck performed the service. The bride was attended by her father, who gave her away. The bride was gowned in a handsome costume of cream lace over taffeta. After the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served, after which the happy couple left for Portland on a short wedding trip, en route to their new home at Lewiston, Idaho. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Poyser, and well known in this city, and has many friends. She has for the past four years conducted a millinery establishment at Lewiston. They were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents.

MAIN WITNESS SKIPS

Ernest Starr Nephew of Williamson Takes to the Woods From Eugene

Eugene, Or., July 27.—Pursued by a deputy United States marshal and by Chief of Police Stiles, of Eugene, Ernest Starr, nephew of Congressman J. N. Williamson, and one of the principal witnesses in the land fraud prosecution, has gone to the summit of the Cascades, and is now supposed to be in a sheep camp, either in the Cascades or in Western Crook.

Chief of Police Stiles left by private conveyance last evening for the mountains east of McKinnle bridge and Foley Springs to assist the deputy United States marshal, who is now in that section, in his search for Starr. He has been absent from Portland since Thursday.

Young Starr came to Eugene Thursday night and left the next morning on the Blue River stage. He arrived at Blue River, the terminus, the terminus of the stage line, that evening, and after eating his supper left foot toward the summit of the Cascade mountains, ostensibly heading toward his home in Crook county.

The government officials learned of Starr's movements, and wired the officers here to try and catch him. Constable Smith left here about twelve hours after Starr did, expecting to catch him at Blue River Saturday morning, but learned that he had left there the night before. Finding no trace of him, Smith returned to Eugene.

Saturday morning a deputy United States marshal arrived here from Portland and left immediately for the mountains in hot pursuit of the missing witness. He has not been heard from since.

Yesterday afternoon the local officers received a wire from Portland to spare no expense in assisting to find Starr, and Chief Stiles left soon afterward to join in the chase.

Some think that Starr has pushed on across the summit of the mountains, and is continuing toward Prineville, while many others are of the opinion that he is being hidden by friends in the sheep camps in the mountains east of the McKinnle Bridge, between sixty and eighty miles from Eugene.

PROSECUTION NEEDS STARR. Heney Expected to Clinch Charges by His Testimony.

Ernest Starr, nephew of Congressman J. N. Williamson, is an important witness for the prosecution. He was in the employ of Williamson & Gesner at the time the alleged frauds were committed in 1902, and has remained with the firm since that time, engaged in managing the sheep interests of the defendants.

District Attorney Heney said in his opening statement to the jury that he would prove conclusively by Ernest Starr, together with other witnesses, that the defendants conspired to suborn perjury, and Starr is very necessary to the government's case as outlined by the district attorney at the opening. He has been regarded as a strong card which the prosecution would spring in making its case even stronger than at the former trial.

Without Starr the government will fail to establish its claim, made at the beginning of the trial. That Starr can remain away until the trial has been concluded, if he wants to, is likely, as he knows the fastnesses of the Cascades, where he has been engaged nearly all his life in running sheep. A determined effort will be made by the government to get him, as he is wanted to go on the stand at once.

The prosecution is to use every effort to find Starr. If it fails to bring him back to testify, it will probably be charged that the defense hid him out, and if necessary the trial may be delayed until he can be found. Williamson denies knowing anything about his whereabouts or intentions.

A HOT BALL GAME

State House wins the Game, and Bankers win Their Own Good Money

The ball game between the state house and the bankers, played yesterday afternoon on the Willamette field, was called promptly at 5 o'clock, and there was something doing every minute until the close of the sixth inning, at which time the hot pace was telling on both teams, and the game was called. The generous rivalry has awakened intense enthusiasm among the backers of each team, and yesterday saw more bankers and state officials present than ever assembled to watch the boys manipulate the sphere. The banks were turned over to the janitors, while Messrs. Bush, Page and others went out, each with a whole barrel full of coin and checks, which they were anguishing to put up at any old odds on their representatives. Each had a megaphone or two, and extra relay of helpers to assist in blowing them; and the amount of baseball guff that was handed out would have delighted the hearts of the craziest fans. On the other hand the state house was there in full force, Treasurer Moore, State Secretary Dunbar, State Printer Whitney, our own "George" and ex-Governor Geer, besides dozens of lesser luminaries in state affairs. They didn't have as much money, but were just as game, and had more, bigger and louder and more persistent megaphones. Just imagine Banker Bush dancing around and shouting "knock the leather off it. Bat it off the earth," and then sinking back when three strikes were called, with the remark: "That duffer couldn't hit a barn floor with a ball." Just imagine our strenuous governor bursting a pair of gloves and straining his lungs when his side made a two-bagger, or the state printer fairly plugging his form in his wild gestulations. There wasn't much money changed hands, but when the score was announced as 7 and 11 in favor of the bankers they each and all went home satisfied, while the state house fellows—well, they had to be.

The Lebanon paper mills sent a fine exhibit to the exposition this week. It consists of samples of all the different kinds and forms of paper they manufacture. It will make a very valuable addition to the Linn county exhibition.
