KISSING AT THE DEPOT

Journal Horse Editor's Opinion Gathered From Hearsay and Observation Only

The Spokesman-Review of Spokane, recently had a half column article on the habit of kissing as indulged in at the depot in that city. The subject is a profound one, and either the reporter was overcome by what he saw, and failed to do the subject justice, or the style of kissing up in the bunch grass regions is different and less fervid than that in this favored section. The reporter had a keen nose for news, but fear me, he was a tyro in the art osnatory. The kissing habit at the depot is universal. It is a delightful custom if you are the kisser and the other party to the arrangement is young, dainty, and good looking. It is good custom anyhow, under almost any arrangement, for "Tis better to have kissed and lost, than never to have kissed at all." A desultory study of the proposition shows kisses of infinite variety, and with as many different blends, flavors and bouquets as a soda fountain. There is the kiss of the trundle-bed slip. Then there is the other extremity, the 20 years married kiss, that is brief, soulless, tasteless, dry, insipid, and purely perfunctory. This is the "Darling, I am growing old, and all-fired ugly," variety that comes only after long and continued sipping at the same fountain as produced satiety. This is the "Abou Ben Adhem" kiss, because it takes one love his fellow men. Then, not to be overlooked, is the rapturous, ardent kisses, done up in bunches, and threaded on a string, that one girl hands out to another when they meet, a lot of Oh! yum, yum! I'm so glad! yum, yum. Just thought you'd never, yum, yum, yum, yum, until the whole thing is played out. This kind, no one knoweth the flavor of, as it is a tap only for girl friends. But as the attack is generally short, and the kisses popped in like firecrackers, it is not supposed to be highly flavored, and not worth sampling. It lacks salt, touch, expression and timbre. It might be called the peck-a-boo kiss. Then there is the kiss hypocritical between two married ladies, accompanied by smiles fresh from the ice cream freezer, that makes the old thermometer in the depot hunt the cellar. There is direct opposition to this the avid, clinging, can-I-ever-let-you-goulation the first time Jimmy goes away from home while the honey-moon is still full and maddish. This slides a stranglohold on Jimmy by a pair of white arms and a couple of early tears as big as horse chestnuts, at drop on Jimmy's shirt front. This is followed by a rapid dabbling at the eyes with a pad of a handkerchief that rubs the powder off. It is supposed to be warm even to subtriness, it buds, blooms, ripens and fades so short a time the crop is hardly worth raising. Beside this is another variety, unknown to all but the honey-mooners. There is the kiss friendly, the conciliatory, the kiss dutiful, the casual, the kiss experimental, the flirtatious, the kiss sisterly, the kindly, the kiss unavoidable, the financial, the kiss sympathetic, the kiss sorrowful, the kiss silly, the courageous, the old maid kind, the me again kiss, and kisses of every age, form, kind, temperature, flavor, and degree—all good, of course, but no better than others; but there is the kind you never see at the depot, though you may see the sure indications that it is ripe for delivery. This is the kind that waits until it gets away off by its lonesome. You can just bet its coming when you see Johnny get off the train with his grip, and you see a flash of skirts, hear a little gurgle of delight, and see a little hand insert itself in the crook of Johnny's arm, and give it a little I-just-can't-help-it-hug up against a white shirt waist, as the two amble off towards Birdie's home. And then when they reach the front porch, and the grip drops softly on the noiseless lawn, and there is a sudden mixup and Birdie's shirt waist is gathered with an everlasting gather and her head tilts back, and her chin lifts up until there are two rosebud lips open in a crimson bloom like a red geranium on a bank of snow, and her eyes take on a dreamy far away gaze, as though she saw beyond the stars, and then there is a gentle bending of the head masculine, and a slight side movement so that noses don't meet, and then there is a moment of long heartfelt silence, broken by a sound like the lingering exhaust of a bath tub in the still hours of the night. Well, never mind, you never see that kind at the depot, anyway, nor anywhere else unless you're a party to it, and there are others.

Sickening Shivering Fits of ague and malaria, can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine; of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to quinine, having none of this drug's bad after-effects. E. S. Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Electric Bitters, which saved his life. At J. C. Perry's drug store; price 50c guaranteed."

A Rival to the Fish. "Talk about mosquitoes," said an American, "why when we were in latitude 30 degrees and longitude 75 degrees, a host of mosquitoes settled on our rigging, and when they left us there wasn't a stitch of canvas left on the boat." "Wal," said his friend "that's strange, because when I was sailing in latitude 29 degrees and longitude 74 degrees, a swarm of mosquitoes settled on our rigging and every one of them had a pair of canvas breeches on. Same mosquitoes no doubt."

Spoiled Her Beauty. Harriet Howard, of 209 W. 34th St., New York, at one time had her beauty spoiled with skin trouble. She writes: "I had salt rheum or eczema for years, but nothing would cure it until I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve." A quick and sure healer for cuts, burns and sores. 25c at J. C. Perry's drug store.

Sawmill Burned. At 2 o'clock Monday morning the small sawmill owned by Johnson & Slayter, at Blackley, in the Lake Creek valley, 35 miles west of Eugene, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Johnson left the mill three hours previous, and everything seemed all right at that time. It is not known how the fire caught, but probably a spark had caught in the woodwork or in some sawdust and smoldered until a breeze fanned it into flames.—Eugene Guard.

How About This?

We often hear people say they would like to move away from this or that town, and go to a place where there is not so much gossip. No use trying to find that place. Gossip arrived pretty close on the heels of the serpent, and like love and hate and death, is here to stay. The editor of the Wyoming Gazette has been making a comparison between the destroying power of gossip and other of earth's evils, and he sums up his investigations as follows: "Gossip is a humming bird with eagle wings and a voice like a Legion. It can be heard from Dan to Beersheba, and has caused more trouble than all the bedbugs, ticks, fleas, mosquitoes, chinchbugs, rattle snakes, sharks, sore toes, eyecloves, earth quakes, blizzards, smallpox, yellow fever, gout and indigestion; that this great United States has ever known or will know until the universe shuts up shop and begins the final invoice. In other words, it has got war and hell backed up in the corner yelling for ice water."

In Touch With Waldo Hills. Connections were made Wednesday afternoon with the telephone system of this city, bringing over 50 families in the district extending into the Waldo hills into touch with the residents and business establishments of Salem, as well as with long distance points. This independent system, which was built by the residents of the Waldo hills neighborhood, is only one of several reaching out of this city, which have brought hundreds of farms into direct communication with the city for a distance of 20 miles around. The Waldo hills system, however, is the largest independent line constructed to date, and there has been several months delay in securing connection with the city system on account of a shortage of instruments. It will be only a matter of a few months until nearly every farmer will be brought into telephonic communication with the metropolitan world for a radius of 20 to 25 miles in all directions from Salem.

A Grim Tragedy is daily enacted, in thousands of homes as death claims, in each one, another victim of consumption or pneumonia. But when coughs and colds are properly treated, the tragedy is averted. F. G. Huntley, of Oakland, Ind., writes: "My wife had the consumption, and three doctors gave her up. Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which cured her, and today she is well and strong." It kills the germs of all diseases. One dose relieves. Guaranteed at 50c and $1.00 by J. C. Perry, druggist. Trial bottle free.

Made Good Time. Some good time was made last evening on a run with an automobile by Ernest Klinger and Harry Munson, two well-known young men of this city. They started from Salem after supper, and made the run to Independence in 40 minutes, and returned in 41 minutes. The machine in which they made the trip was a Rambler, and it broke the record for fast time over the rough roads between here and Independence.

Which 'he Greater Crime?
A 17-year-old boy was arrested in Portland yesterday for having stolen a violin, which he sold and bought food for his mother and sister, who were starving. The same day in New York the private secretary of the cotton king, Gates had his mother arrested for speaking to him in front of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, where he lived, and asking him to support her. Now let us see how the punishment is meted out.
