Two Salem Inventors.

Salem is now honored with two successful inventors. They are Shand & Marcus, of the Salem Iron Works, who, having done a very successful business while in Salem, have capped their record by inventing a hop press, and are now applying for a patent. They have several orders for the press, among them being A. German, Henry Ottenheimer and H. Gouley, and other orders are still to come, as several other prominent hop men have been calling to examine the press, and are very favorably impressed with it.

Don't Forget

That we are still doing business, and lots of it. We keep the very best of everything for the bicycle, do the best work, and will guarantee to please you. There are other shops, of course, but this is the place where you get the best work at honest prices.

TO EMPLOY CONVICTS ON ROADS

Alabama Man Tells of the Good Effects Way Down South

John Craft, president of the South Alabama Good Roads Association, and a delegate to the recent good roads convention in Portland, has some strong opinions concerning the employment of convicts on public highways. Prejudiced against it at the start, he made a thorough investigation of the subject. As this question is being discussed to a considerable extent in Oregon at the present time, Mr. Craft's views on the subject will be of interest. He says:

"I have given the subject of utilizing the convicts on the public roads earnest investigation for more than four years, and the fact appears that the states and counties that work their convicts on the public roads have the best built roads, the cheapest built and the most miles of good roads.

"Judge Eave, of Richmond county, Ga., who has worked convicts for twenty years, says during that time not a single woman or child has been molested, nor one dollar's worth of property destroyed.

"Statisticians also show that they worked convicts, fed them, guarded them, clothed them and gave them medical attention at a cost not to exceed 25 cents a day.

"When the convict is put to building roads he is out in the open air, he sees the beauty and grandeur of nature, the better side of his character is appealed to, and statistics prove that 90 per cent of the convicts that work out in the open air as road builders are restored to their families and become wage earners.

"If your state convicts were put to work on your public roads instead of being hired out to a stove factory, the people of Oregon would receive the benefit of the convict's labor. I would invite your law-makers' attention to the fact that a convict is the best and cheapest roadbuilder to be had anywhere. It is a waste of the people's money to hire a convict for only three and one-half cents per hour. I therefore invite your law-makers to investigate this question and they will come to the conclusion that the convict is the cheapest and best roadbuilder to be had, and they will not come in competition with honest industry."

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IN RUSSIA

An Interview with a Russian Revolutionist, the Author of "The White Terror and the Red."

"Is there to be a French revolution in Russia?"

The question was asked of Mr. A. Cahan, the well known author of the remarkable novel of revolutionary Russia, "The White Terror and the Red," which the publishers, A. S. Barnes & Co., report as already in its third edition.

"The question is not unnatural," said Mr. Cahan, "in view of the bloody outbreaks in Warsaw, the strikes and disturbances in so many Russian cities, the dramatic revolt in the Black sea fleet and the spectacle of a Russian battleship cruising the sea manned by mutineers and surrendered voluntarily, after the rest of the fleet has shown itself afraid to use force on account of the general dissatisfaction of the sailors. There may be a vast amount of bloodshed to come in Russia, but there will not be a French revolution in your sense, because the country is too vast and too heterogeneous."

"Then you do not look for revolution?"

"I do not say that," said Mr. Cahan. "There will be a series of local revolutions. Whether the central government can be overthrown is a question of time."

"How about the Black sea mutiny?"

"There were undoubtedly members of the revolutionary committee on the mutinous battleship. The Russian sailor is usually a little more advanced than the soldier. A very active propaganda has been going on among the sailors for the last three years. Some officers are members of the revolutionary organization. Undoubtedly the revolutionary party controlled the ship through representatives on board. In my novel, 'The White Terror and the Red,' I describe a dynamite mine laid under a street for Alexander II in case he came that way, although, as a matter of fact, he went another way and was killed by bombs. It was not generally known that the dynamite was supplied from the Kronstadt navy yard by a naval officer."

"Will the autocracy be forced to yield?"

"I think it will. The reactionary element is represented by Boulygin, minister of the interior, and General Trepoft, minister of police. At present the reactionaries seem cowed. The press of Russia today is printing things which would have sent the editors to Siberia ten years ago. It is almost free. The 'underground press' which is described in 'The White Terror and the Red' is much more radical than the regular papers. Even the conservative papers denounce the advisers of the czar. What is likely to happen is that the czar will yield, that the Zemstvo representatives will be allowed to meet and will practically dictate terms for a representative government, free speech and amnesty for political offenders."

"Boulygin's constitution will be discarded and a more liberal constitution adopted. The mob will be quieted by the Zemstvo representatives, who are in touch with the peasants, and by the revolutionists who can influence the working people. But unless this is done promptly there will be an epidemic of boom throwing and many violent deaths."

ROBBED TWICE IN TEN MINUTES.

St. I. Dr. Cameron Managed to Save His Clothes and Necktie.

The police say there are but few crooks in Portland, and yet the papers there contain dozens of statements similar to the following, only of the single-barrel variety:

Dr. W. L. Cameron, 314 Clay street, lost a package of valuable papers last night, among which was bonds and deeds, and later had his hat stolen from him, according to a report made to Police Captain Moore.

Dr. Cameron lunched at the Louvre. Fourth and Alder streets. He was not feeling in the best of health, and in his haste to leave the restaurant and get a remedy at a drug store, he left behind when he went upon the street a package of valuable papers. In the package were gold bonds of value, legal papers, personal and business letters and cards. He missed the package within a few minutes and returned to look for it. It had disappeared. While in the Louvre the second time he was attacked with illness, and stepped into an adjoining room, leaving his hat on a table in the main room. When he returned his hat was gone.

Hatless and bondless, Dr. Cameron journeyed to police headquarters and told his story. An officer was detailed to look up the headgear, and detectives will look after the papers today.

GETS BACK TO PRISON

Edmund Lousignont, the escaped convict captured on the exposition grounds Wednesday, confessed to Sheriff Word and Frank Curtis, warden of the penitentiary, yesterday to a trail of stolen horses, buggies and harness reaching from Ashland to Portland. He lived off the proceeds and had a good time, and had $30 in his pocket when apprehended. Besides, he said, he gave his wife, who, with their little child, resides at Gales Creek, $50.

Lousignont ran away from the penitentiary early in June, accompanied by Fred Collins, and says he parted with Collins in Southern Oregon. He got rid of his convict garb, he says, by changing with a scarecrow, and after the horse stealing trade became profitable he purchased a new suit and shoes.

He obtained a horse and buggy at a livery stable at Ashland, and traded it near Albany, afterwards selling the rig he secured in exchange. He stole a horse in Ladd's field, which he placed in the livery stable of W. J. Louder at Front and Clay streets, and borrowed another horse, which he sold at Vancouver, Wash. He obtained a horse, buggy and harness at the stable of W. R. Williams, Fourth and Ankeny streets, and sold the outfit to the constable at La Camas. Lousignont denied stealing a horse at the race track and several others, which he is supposed to have taken. He has a bullet wound in his left hand, which he says he administered to himself accidentally. He denied being one of the men who attempted to rob Frederick V. Holman.

Lousignont was returned to the penitentiary last night to finish serving his three years' sentence for stealing a horse belonging to Frazier & McLean, livery stable keepers. He is a strong young man with no bad personal habits, but is mentally weak, and a prodigious liar. His father served a term in the Oregon penitentiary for larceny; also two of his uncles, and his cousin, Dave Engart. Young Lousignont was first taken to the penitentiary by Deputy Sheriff Dode Parrott, and that officer states that he seemed pleased to get there, and acted as if it were all a good joke. After he had been in a while he changed his mind, and wanted to get out.
