The Death of the Flowers.

(With proper apologies to the memory of William Cullen Bryant.) The melancholy days are come, the saddest of them all, Of frenzied finance, exposed graft, and schemes foredoomed to fall, Heaped on the curbs of Wall and Broad, where once the lambs did play, The forms of "captains of finance" lie in grand disarray. The "suckers" from these haunts have flown, and gone the "easy jay," And Trinity's deep, booming chimes sound through the gloomy day.

Where are the flowers, the fair young flowers, that once did here abide—Schwab, Alexander and Depew and eke the sporty Hyde? Alas! all wilted now they lie, a bunch of faded flowers

That have been plucked and thrown aside, the prey of vaster powers. The slush is dirty where they lie, and gone their fragrant bloom, And none is left to shed a tear above their slushy tomb.

The steel flower and the peach's bloom, they perished long ago; The corrus, night-blooming Hyde, has lost its waxy glow; And on the curb the others lie, exposed to snobs and jeers, While not a withered petal is refreshed by falling tears.

As fell the frost from the cold clear sky, so fell the wrath of man, And they who were once great and strong are now the "also ran."

And when I gaze upon them now don't think I wail and screech For Alexander, Schwab, or Hyde, or eke for "Chance the Peach." We'll lay them in the warm, moist earth for all of future time, And o'er their mounds we'll thickly strew deodorizing lime.

'Tis not unmet that they should fade—they never should have bloomed, And not a tear will drop above the "flowers" thus entombed.

—Will M. Maupin in the Commoner.

1000 MILES FROM NOWHERE.

Midway Island, Our Smallest Territorial Possession.

The greatest attraction of Midway Island is its windmills, whose enormous height make the mile-length coral island look from shipboard smaller than it really is. Although Midway Island belongs to the United States and is a cable station, there are about a dozen Americans only on it. Several of these inhabitants have become, through isolation, more afraid of strangers than the millions of tame gulls that make the island their home. The history of almost every white man on Midway Island may be written in the one unkept sentence: "I ran away from a whaler." Midway is an island that was born upon the bosom of an immense wave that followed an earthquake shock. Just how old it is no living man in the Pacific seems to know. There is no vegetation on the island because there is no soil. Midway is a hunk of coral reef, around which a ring of ocean breakers continually lash themselves into a mist of creamy foam.

Strike Still Grows.

Ries, Russia, Aug. 1.—All the ship laborers have joined the strikers.

Bad Habits in the Country.

The grasshopper chews tobacco, The quail gets out his pipe, The fish hawk is so awful poor He has to hunt a "snipe."

The rooster has his cocktail, The orchard gets plum full, The onion squanders every scent And the radish has a pull. "Songs of the Santiam."

So many doctors of law are being created that it does seem the laws ought to be sufficiently doctored to control the trusts. The doctors have a good constitution to work on.

The Southern Pacific has changed its time table slightly, but its trains never arrive on time, it was a waste of printer's ink and energy to publish the fact.

The Fogg family are to have a reunion in Boston next month. Several members of the tribe reside in Oregon and Washington, but, owing to distance, many of them will not attend. They will be classed as the "Oregon missed."

SCATTER REPORT.

Chamber of Commerce Issues Interesting Pamphlet on Roads.

Such a demand has arisen for copies of the report of the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which was published by the local press earlier in the month, that the committee decided to issue the statement in pamphlet form. The first copies of the report in that shape were distributed today.

The unhesitating manner in which the persons compiling the report laid bare the facts regarding the railroad development in Oregon, the manner in which Mr. Harriman and his associates had feigned the Webfootites with promises of facilities in the undeveloped regions, and the general backwardness of the state in that respect as compared with other domains in the West, are conditions which seemed to have appealed to the masses, judging from the call for the booklet.—Telegram.

FRAUD EXPOSED.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit, through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection to you is our name on the wrapper. Look for it, on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. Chicago, Ill., and Windsor, Canada. For sale by J. S. Perry, Salem.

Catholic Foresters Meet.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 1.—The biennial international convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters opened in Boston today with an attendance of about 250 delegates, who come from various parts of this country and Canada. The headquarters of the convention are at the American house, but the sessions are being held in Faneuil hall.

The formal opening of the convention was preceded by the celebration of solemn mass at St. Stephen's church, the delegates attending in a body. The delegates then marched to Faneuil hall, where the regular business of the convention was begun. The reports of the various officers show that the order is the largest Catholic fraternal insurance organization in America, comprising some 117,000 members in 1500 subordinate courts. The present high chief ranger is Thomas A. Cannon of Chicago.

SHE KEEPS DIABLO

Mrs. Emma Murray, of Santa Rosa, Cal., won in the supreme court yesterday in the suit brought against her by Sam Casto for the possession of the pacing stallion Diablo. Casto claimed the right to possession of the horse under a contract of employment with Mrs. Murray, the owner, and under a contract with Mrs. Murray, after her husband's death.

About a year ago Mrs. Murray, Dr. T. E. Strong and E. D. Crookham broke the lock on the stable door at the state fair grounds and took the horse away. This replevin suit was then brought. A trial before Circuit Judge George H. Burnett resulted in a verdict for Mrs. Murray, and Casto appealed.

The supreme court holds that whatever right Casto had to the possession of the horse was under his contract with Mrs. Murray, but, as the alleged contract was made after the husband's death, and before the appointment of an administrator, no title was conveyed thereby. Mrs. Murray, as an heir, had a right to the possession of the horse, pending the appointment of an administrator, but no title could be secured by any person except in pursuance of orders made by the county court, in due course of administration. The opinion of the supreme court was written by Justice Moore.

Fable of the Pansy.

A pretty fable about the pansy is current among French and German children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most pansies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the petals are plain in color and three are gay. The two plain petals have a single sepal, two of the gay petals have a sepal each, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals.

The fable is that the pansy represents a family consisting of husband and wife and four daughters, two of the latter being stepchildren of the wife. The plain petals are the stepchildren, with only one chair; the two small, gay petals are the daughters, with a chair each, and the large gay petal is the wife, with two chairs.

To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and pistils are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to the old man, with a flannel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised and his feet in a bath tub. The story is probably of French origin, because the French call the pansy the stepmother.

How Much She Missed Him.

Boston Herald. The late Mary A. Livermore liked to tell a story of a young friend of hers, in Molross, for she believed in this story lay a lesson for husbands.

Mrs. Livermore's friend was passing a month alone, her fate having been summoned to Europe on a business matter.

"And you are very lonely without your husband now?" the elder said to the younger woman one morning.

"A little lonely," was the qualified answer.

"But surely," said Mrs. Livermore, "you miss your husband very much, now he is away."

The other laughed rather bitterly. "Oh, no, she said. 'At breakfast I just stand his newspaper up in front of his plate, and half the time I forget he isn't there.'"

CALIFORNIA CUTS OUT PORTLAND

Big Klamath Country's Trade Goes to San Francisco.

Klamath Falls, Or., Aug. 1.—The steamer on the new Klamath-Falls-Laird's Landing run, the Klamath, which was successfully launched Saturday forenoon, will begin her regular run between here and Laird's Landing, on the lower end of Little Klamath Lake, about August 10 or 15. At Laird's Landing the steamer will connect by stage over a 40-mile wagon road with the present terminus of the McCloud River railroad at Bartels.

From the latter point the McCloud road runs up to Upton, on the Southern Pacific, in Siskiyou county, California. The McCloud people say they will have their road built to Laird's Landing by July 1st, next year. This new line will give a more direct route from this region to Sacramento and San Francisco.

The Klamath is 80 feet in length; beam, 15 feet; draft, 2 feet; capacity, 75 tons; will develop 150 horse-power and will probably show a speed of 15 miles an hour. She has a freight and passenger deck, a dining room and four staterooms, will be allowed to carry from 75 to 100 passengers on regular trips, and cost approximately $10,000. Her propeller is 44 inches in diameter.

After the ropes were cut, the beautiful new craft slid gracefully into the water amid the applause of the assembled spectators. No formal ceremony attended the launching; it was strictly a business affair. The new steamer was hauled up to the wharf after the launching, where the finishing touches will be put on her.
