Bull Chased Beef Peddler.

A beef peddler from Elmira, whose name was not learned, had an exciting experience with an enraged bull this forenoon. As he was bringing his load of beef to town a bull in a field along the road smelled the blood of his own kind, and, jumping over the fence, took after the peddler's outfit, following it into the city. The peddler stopped at Professor B. J. Hawthorne's residence at West Fourth and Lawrence streets, and was cutting off steaks for Mrs. Hawthorne, when the bull was seen coming head on toward them at full speed. Mrs. Hawthorne ran into the yard just in time to escape being run down by the maddened beast. The peddler protected himself with clubs and rocks, and the bull was finally run into Dr. R. L. Willoughby's barn near by.—Eugene Guard.

Notice of Assessment.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council of the City of Salem, Oregon, will, at 8 o'clock p. m., on the 15th day of August, 1905, at the Common Council chamber in the City Hall, at Salem, Oregon, proceed to assess upon each lot or part thereof or tract liable therefor its proportionate share of the cost of improving the following described part of Commercial street, as provided for in the plans and specifications of said improvement now on file in the office of the City Recorder in said matter, and will proceed at said time and place to hear any and all objections to said assessment and appointment, to-wit:

Beginning at a point in said street where the south boundary line of the donation land claim of W. H. Wilson and Chloa A. Wilson, his wife, intersects said Commercial street, thence along said street to the south boundary line of said city, excepting therefrom eight feet wide along the center of the aforesaid part of said street.

By order of the Common Council.

Herbert Nash was pinched early Sunday morning for being drunk and disorderly, and wanting to lick everything that came in sight. When Policeman Murphy attempted to arrest him Nash put up a resistance, but not enough to prevent the officer from landing him in the city jail. He was fined $15 this forenoon, which a friend put up for him, and he was released after a heart to heart talk to him by Recorder Moores, who told him that if he ever came up before him again the full penalty would be handed out.

H. H. Penberthy, of Kent, Washington, was in the city yesterday. He is assistant chief of the Kent fire department, and is taking his vacation making a journey on his wheel to the southern part of the state. Big Day for Rattlesnakes.

One day last week Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Woods, who live in the Pine Grove section, established a record for killing rattlesnakes. During the forenoon, while Mr. Woods was working in his field, he succeeded in killing a good-sized rattler. On returning to the house for dinner he boastfully informed his wife of what he had done. Mrs. Woods immediately informed her husband that he was not in it when it came to killing rattlesnakes, and showed him two that she had killed in the chicken stable during his absence. After dinner Mr. Wood's attention was attracted to the barn by the barking of a dog, and upon investigation found another rattler making its way into a hole. Mr. Woods called his wife to watch for the appearance of the snake, and he returned to his labor. The good housewife, armed with a club, and in company with two dogs, began the watch. In a short time the snake crawled out and met his fate at the hands of the trio. This made four snakes for the day, and the last killed was five feet four inches long.—Elgin Record.

YUCATAN'S ANTIQUITY.

Evidences of a Culture and Civilization Equal to the Egyptians.

Long before the day of Columbus—indeed, thousands of years before—a race of people hardly less cultured than the ancient Egyptians, and even more religious than they, lived in Yucatan, Chiapas, Guatemala, and Western Honduras, in Central America. These people were quite distinct from the Aztecs, who settled in the valley of Mexico and reared great cities there, and the Aztecs, relics of whom are found in the western part of the Mexican peninsula.

They are known as the Mayas, worshipped one great deity, erected palaces and temples, established colleges and convents, had confessionals and reckoned time by years comprised of 305 days, just like our own.

It has long been known that a wonderful race once made its home in Central America, but the extent of the culture attained by it is just now being ascertained. A report just made to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, by Cyrus Thomas, an archaeologist of more than passing note, sets out the result of recent study into the hieroglyphic writings left by the Mayas.

It is shown by the hieroglyphics, Mr. Thomas asserts that the Mayas had made greater advance in culture than was known previously. "It would be somewhat difficult for any one at the present day, except a mathematician," he writes, "to calculate back 34,059 years nine months and 13 days from a particular day in the present year, using our Gregorian calendar, and determining the exact month, day of the month, and day of the week that will be reached. Yet this was accomplished by the Maya priests according to their calendar and with their cumbersome vigesimal system."

In the light of recent revelations the arts and industries of the Mayans astonish the deliver into archaeology. Their books reveal evidence of much skill in glyptic and pictographic writing. The system of computing and keeping time was so accurate that the Mayans are believed by some students to have borrowed certain parts of it from Eastern countries. In grammatical construction their language resembles English to a greater degree than any known tongue.

A great number of ruined cities, once inhabited by this people, are to be found in Yucatan and the State of Chiapas, to the southeast. Two explorers alone have discovered the remains of fifty-four. Among the most remarkable of these are Palanque, Uxmal and Chichen, the name of each one being carved on the palaces contained in them.

Abundant evidences that the Mayas paid considerable attention to education and religion are to be found. They had colleges for both sexes of the higher class, and also convents. The nuns lived like the vestal virgins of Rome, the ones who failed to keep their vows being slain with arrows.

Some of the manuscripts left by them are in European museums, and efforts to translate them are now being made. These manuscripts are on a kind of paper manufactured of the maguey plant. A description of one is practically a description of all, although the size and number of pages vary.

A manuscript at Madrid consists of a strip of maguey paper about fourteen feet long and nine inches wide, both surfaces of which were first covered with a white paint or varnish. The two faces were then divided by black or red lines into spaces about six inches wide, on to which the characters were painted. The strip was then folded like a pocket map, into thirty-five folds, corresponding with the cross lines, presenting, when pressed together the appearance of an ordinary octavo volume.—Philadelphia North American.

The Russian Volunteer.

It is often said that Russians are soldiers "born;" occasionally, however, one is made to order. An English visitor to Moscow was in one of the side streets recently, when his attention was attracted by the scuffling of feet, the swish of a whip, and the sound of loud words.

Looking across the way, he saw a stocky fellow in a blouse flat on the ground stoutly resisting the efforts of two soldiers to set him on his feet and make him go along.

The Englishman turned to a man in official uniform at his side, who also was watching the struggle, but without excitement or interest.

Extravagant.

"You seem bound and determined to live right up to my salary."
"I'm merely trying to live up to the diamonds and things you gave me when we were engaged, dear."—Houston Post.

"The best remedy I can prescribe for your indigestion, madam, is Green's August Flower. I know of several other physicians who prescribe it regularly."

Indigestion is making an awful record as a cause of sudden deaths. It is besting heart-failure in its ghastly harvest.

You read in the papers daily of apparently healthy and even robust men being suddenly attacked with acute indigestion after enjoying a hearty meal, and of their dying in many cases before a physician could be called in.

This should be a warning to you who suffer with regular or periodical attacks of indigestion. If these unfortunate victims of acute indigestion had taken a small dose of Green's August Flower before or after their meals they would not have fallen a prey to such sudden seizures.

August Flower prevents indigestion by creating good digestion. It also regulates the liver, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system in a natural way.

HARD RIDING IN NORTHWEST.

Halfbreed Who Made One Hundred and Twenty Miles in Ten Hours.

"You people who came here since the railroads were built have an idea that we used to have a bad time of it getting about Washington territory," said the old timer the other day. "That's where you are wrong. Distances were no greater then than they are now. True, we didn't always go so fast as you do now, but we made speed that would astonish you.

"I remember one trip an old friend of mine made, a big cattleman from Kittitas county, afterward the owner of considerable property in Seattle. His divorced wife was living here, and she took it into her head to go after him through the courts for non-payment of alimony. There were a number of reasons why he shouldn't pay, but he didn't care to stay here and argue it out with the court, so getting a tip on what was doing, he decided to go back to the cattle in Kittitas. About 6 o'clock one evening, accompanied by his horse wrangler, who happened to be here with him, he struck out horseback for Ellensburg. The two rode all night—it was in mid-summer and at the fall of the moon—and the next morning they ate breakfast in Ellensburg—110 miles away. And they didn't think it was much of a ride at that.

"Rides? Why, I could talk all day about rides in those days. One of the best ever done in the territory, however, was that by a young halfbreed during the Nez Perces uprising in 1877. When Joseph went out with his band one of the first things they did was to cut the military telegraph between Fort Lapwal, up the Clearwater river from Lewiston, and Walla Walla. Fort Lapwal wanted to send dispatches to Gen. Howard at the post at Walla Walla, and wanted to send them had. At that time nearly all the Indians on the reservation had a halfbreed or at least one pretty good horse in his riding string. This particular halfbreed boy had an extra good one, and he was selected to carry the dispatches, being a reliable fellow. Well, he rode through to Walla Walla in ten hours, a distance of 120 miles, and during the ride he never slowed down from a gallop. That was in mid-summer, and if you ever have been in that Snake river region at this season of the year you can imagine that was some riding."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

A Fortunate Young Woman.

A western railroad assigned to Miss A. E. McCrae of Chicago, the general supervision of the landscape gardening and architectural remodeling necessary to beautify the passenger stations on all of its main and branch lines. This is a big undertaking, and Miss McCrae is to be allowed to carry on the work entirely in accordance with her own ideas and her own judgment. A special private car is to be assigned to her use and she will travel extensively over nine different states.
