Russia Evidently Expects to Pay Japans Actual War Expenses

Portsmouth, Me., Aug. 12.—The much discussed question of indemnity or "reimbursement," as Japan puts it, is not going to prove as great an obstacle to the pending peace negotiations as was at first imagined.

Portsmouth, Me., Aug. 12.—The "Mystery" is now explained.

These experts were brought here to determine the actual cost of the war to Japan. It will be the duty of these officers to examine the figures and bring them down to a reasonable sum.

Portsmouth, Me., Aug. 12.—The peace plenipotentiaries went into session at the navy yard at 9:35 this morning, and after an hour and 25 minutes the conference adjourned.

Russia delivered her reply to the Japanese demands, refusing to concede certain conditions. After adjournment Sato, the Japanese spokesman, announced the conferences would be continued.

Portsmouth, Me., Aug. 12.—After the heavy storm last night, the day broke humid and sultry.

The Russians were up early. Assistant Secretary Pierce called on Witte at 9 o'clock, after which the Russians took seats in an automobile, M. Nabakoff carrying a large black portfolio with the Czar's answer to the Mikado's peace terms.

Portsmouth, Me., Aug. 12.—It is rumored late this afternoon that negotiations are broken off.

Korostovetz, secretary of the Russian envoys, returned to his apartments at the hotel at 3 o'clock and left almost immediately for the conference hall in the navy yard. He said no intimation had been received by the Russians as to the Japanese intentions.

Too Much for Russia.

London, Aug. 12.—A St. Petersburg dispatch this afternoon says: "It is now clear that the Japanese demands are too much for Russian acceptance. It is anticipated the next meeting of the peace envoys will be the last, Witte sailing immediately for home."

Blow Up the Cop.

Radom, Poland, Aug. 12.—The chief of police was severely injured by a bomb last night as he was riding in his carriage. Several houses were wrecked.

THE OREGON PRESS IS UNANIMOUS

And Oregon People Will No Longer Take Promises---They Demand a Square Deal and Are Going to Have It

The Oregonian yesterday has two editorials dealing with the railroad situation, one commenting on the Harriman banquet, and the other the taxation of railroads generally, and both are well worth perusing.

It may seem strange to Mr. Harriman and his local representatives that open dissatisfaction with his policies and purposes has just now reached such acute form in the state of Oregon. The reason is not hard to find.

Mr. Harriman has said that certain branch lines are projected in Oregon but he has made his announcements, which are indefinite enough in form, with the air of one who was conferring a boon not deserved upon a people little deserving. That's what's the matter. The people have no rights.

The dinner was good, the wine abundant, and the society above reproach.

After the Feed Was Over. We recite these things for the purpose merely of explaining to all whom it may concern some things that have happened since the banquet. We want a banquet. The business community of Portland is invited. Its object was to place the great railroad president in more cordial personal relations with the constituency which his railroad lines serve.

The railroad diplomats of Portland who arranged the affair desired to show the discontented public that Mr. Harriman was a dreadful ogre. Likely enough they desired also to show Mr. Harriman a people in an admirable condition of docility.

It was all very laudable, and would have been a fine thing if it had been all carried out in accordance with the programme, or rather in accordance with general expectation.
