Dust and Mud.

It pays to have streets paved to get out of the dust in summer and out of the mud in winter.

To breathe dust all summer and to have to wade in mud all winter is not a sanitary proposition.

Those who have lived where there is neither dust in summer nor mud in winter will not accept these nuisances, or live where they are.

A city covered with dust in summer and streets covered with mud in the winter is not exactly a new Jerusalem.

The first street in this city to get rid of both will advance the value of real estate fifty per cent.

Western Humorous Publication.

Edith Watts Mumford's new humorous book for 1905 is to be a very novel "Joke Book Note Book," to be published by Paul Elder and Company, San Francisco.

The Cynic's Calendar, which apart from its own merits has been appeared, is again on the press for 1906 under the title of the "Complete Cynic's Calendar."

There Will Be Some Candidates.

Present appearances indicate that the crop of candidates for state offices will be much larger under the direct primary system than under the old law.

In order to be voted for in the state primaries a candidate must first file with the secretary of state a petition signed by voters equal in number to 2 per cent of the party vote in the preceding general election, provided, however, that it shall not be necessary to have more than 1000 signatures.

NAMES OF ANIMALS.

The Meaning of Some of Those Whose Origin We Can Trace.

Some of the names of the commonest animals are lost in the dimness of antiquity, such as fox, weasel, sheep, horse, dog and baboon.

and elephant is derived from the old Hindoo word elph, which means an ox. The root of the word wolf meant one who tears or rends.

Lynx is from the same Latin root as the word lux (light) and probably was given to these wildcats on account of fierce brightness of their eyes. Lynx is, of course, from the Latin leo, which word, in turn, is lost far back in the Egyptian tongue, where the word for the king of beasts was labu.

Puma, jaguar, tapir, and peccary (from paquires) are all names from South American Indian languages. The coyote and ocelot were called coyoti and ocelote by the Mexicans long before Cortes landed on their shores.

Moose is from the Indian word mouswah, meaning wood eater; skunk, from seganku, an Angliquin term; wapiti in the Greek language means white deer and was originally applied to the Rocky mountain goat, but the name is now restricted to the American elk.

Rhinoceros is pure Greek, meaning nose horned, but beaver has indeed had a rough time of it in travels through various languages. It is hardly recognizable as bebrus, babru and bra. The latter is the ultimate root of the English word brown.

The little mouse hands its name down through the years from the old Sanskrit, the root meaning to steal. The word rat may have been derived from the root of the Latin word vadere, to scratch, or rodere, to gnaw.

Deer is of obscure origin, but may have been an adjective, meaning wild. Elk is derived from the same root, eland, and the history of the latter word is an interesting one.

Squirrel has a poetic origin in the Greek language, its original meaning being shadow tail. Tiger is far more intricate. The old Persian word tir meant arrow, while tighra signified sharp.

Hops Are Injured.

Hops are coming out of the burr so rapidly now that one can hardly realize the difference a week has made in the hop yards—from the burr to the developed hop. Now growers can pretty nearly tell what they have got. We have not heard from other growers, but from a personal inspection of the Campbell & Walker hop yard today after a week away, find that the "arm" will bear but a small proportion of the crop.

The "bear" influence in the hop market that has persistently sought to secure 1904 hops at less than their real value by fairy tales of a coming good crop, will soon find that they have greatly overestimated the yield.—Eugene Guard.

Remarks By the Typewriter.

Been will do. Unless people should get the habit of building prettier houses.

The run of salmon continues at Yaquina bay and Albany has a merchants' league.

A church should be at least as comfortable these days as a club room if the minister wants very many men to attend on Sunday. The flies should be kept out and the air made cool and fresh.

The Portland politicians are again worked up about mentally and morally about harmonizing party interests, establishing peace and capturing state offices next June. They had better give some attention to making a program that means something to voters in general.

It is a remarkable fact that no sooner does the trading stamp company get into a town and begin to do business than there is a merchant's league organized and the stamp company is put out of business.

Murray Wade's cartoon in the Saturday Telegram on the great Harriman banquet is best thing of season. It represents "the greatest" of all railroad financiers dishing up hot-air pudding to Miss Oregon, with Cotton and Penton sitting on each side of him watching how she takes her diet.

The irrigation congress will meet at Portland and tell how much has been done for other states, and why nothing has been done for Oregon. Incidentally Mr. Harriman favors spending the four millions that are lying idle in some United States government repository.

A Fish Theory Exploded.

The theory that chinook salmon always return to the stream in which they are hatched and to no other is shown to be false by the experience of John Pursey, who returned yesterday from Rogue river. That stream is about half way between Monterey bay, which is near the feeding grounds of the chinook salmon and the Columbia river.

FRAUD EXPOSED.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit, through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years.
