Don't Know Old New York.

There is much truth in the statement of a writer whose communication appears in the column of letters from Herald readers this morning that comparatively few residents of this city seem to know much about old New York.

This is not surprising. The growth of the city has been phenomenal and most of the busy workers who carry on its myriad activities hail from other lands. Members of the old families who have inherited fortunes founded in commerce, finance or real estate, on the other hand, spend but a small portion of their time in New York and know little of its geography aside from the beaten paths of fashion.

The societies that are making the sites of historic events are doing good work, and the attention now given the subject in the public schools is exciting an interest in it, but in general the public are so busy seeking enjoyment or "hustling" for a living in the New York of today that they give little time or thought to the New York of the yesterday.—New York Herald.

RELIC OF NAPOLEON'S ESCAPE.

Secretary Bonaparte Receives Piece of Wood From Famous Vessel.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Sec. Bonaparte today received a piece of the wood from the Natalie, the vessel on which Napoleon Bonaparte made his escape from the island of Elba to France. It was sent by Edward A. Sherman of the Sloat Monument association of Oakland, Cal.

After the escape of Napoleon the vessel went to the Pacific coast, and was purchased by the Mexican government for use as a revenue cutter. In 1843, when lying off Monterey, the officers went ashore to attend a ball and the crew, deciding to have some fun on its own account, left the ship.

During the absence of the officers and men there was a heavy gale, and the Natalie was wrecked and driven ashore. Fragments of the vessel are still preserved, and the one which was sent to Secretary Bonaparte is in an excellent state of preservation.

In the letter accompanying the piece of wood Mr. Sherman states that the late Rear Admiral John Drake Sloat while a Lieutenant, and on a leave of absence from March 1, 1815, engaged in commerce in command of the schooner Transit on a voyage to France. While at Nantes he arranged with some friends of the emperor to take him aboard with his suite and convey them to the United States. The plan was abandoned.

His Voice Needed Filing.

There is a young medical student living in Westport who has decided not to speak to a girl he knows. He was calling on the young woman recently, and during the evening he volunteered to sing. When he had concluded his song he turned to the girl, "I'm thinking of taking voice culture," he said. "Do you know of a good teacher whose charge is reasonable?" "I know the very one for you," she replied. "His name is Taylor. Give me a card, and I'll write down his telephone number for you." The young man gave her the card. Next day he called Taylor up on the telephone. "Is this 'Mr. Taylor, the vocal teacher?'" he asked. "The what?" came over the wire. "The vocal teacher." "Naw," was the reply. "I don't teach nothin'. I file saws."—Kansas City Times.

A Pleasant Way to Travel.

The above is the usual verdict of the traveler using the Missouri Pacific railway between the Pacific coast and the east, and we believe that the service and accommodations given merit this statement. From Denver, Colorado Springs and Denver there are two through trains daily to Kansas City and St. Louis, carrying Pullman's latest standard electric-lighted sleeping cars, chair cars and up-to-date dining cars. The same excellent service is operated from Kansas City and St. Louis to Memphis, Little Rock and Hot Springs. If you are going east or south, write for particulars and full information.

The Scared Hero.

The man who goes down with his engine in a wreck is considered worthy of great commendation, when the truth is, as all railway men are aware, that the unfortunate in such cases lost his nerve at the critical moment and hesitated to jump. When an accident is impending the cool and collected engineer shuts off the steam, applies the brakes and opens the valves, all of the actions taking a few seconds. Then he looks out for his own safety. Another man becomes so frightened in the presence of great danger that he does nothing, not even the possible, and he is the person likely to wear a martyr's crown.—Locomotive Engineering.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

New York, Aug. 19.—Predictions for the autumn styles are many and varied. Cashmere is among the materials which will be worn this fall, and there are rumors that the three piece costume, consisting of skirt, short coat and bodice will be the thing for those who wish to be in the swim. Bodices of the material as the skirt do not seem to be very popular with the gentler sex, so Dame Fashion has decreed that they shall be mostly of lace with touches of the material here and there.

The latest fad in the very popular linen is saffron color, which is very handsome on a green lawn, but has one disadvantage, that of being conspicuous.

An attractive and novel costume for the early fall days is made of crepe de shine of a soft pastel pink shade combined with white, and trimmed with heavy lace. The tendency of trimmings is toward the narrow effect some costumes being trimmed with frills of lace overlapping each other.

A very popular material for dinner and party gowns is mousseline in white and pale colors. One gown was made quite plain with a deep hem, above which were embroidered bunches of flowers.

The most conspicuous thing in the evening bodices of the season is the extreme simplicity as compared with those of previous seasons. The lines of the figure are followed more closely the blouse effect having almost entirely disappeared. This vagary of fashion is making it somewhat for the modistes, as it is not an easy matter to make a gown severely simple in its lines, and yet concealing the defects of the figure and accentuating its good points.

In whatever form the sleeve of the evening bodice is made it must be small. It may be a puff or a bit of lace, or be separate from the shoulder strap.

A very graceful style of dress for those who can wear it effectively is the princess. The material is tucked or shirred around the waist line. This style requires a certain poise to look well, but if properly worn there is nothing more charming.

One very beautiful, yet simple, bodice was made of ivory white chiffon satin with jeweled bow knots as the sole trimming. The chiffon satin was put on quite plain and made with a pointed front. It fastened down the middle of the back. The seam down the middle of the front was stitched with three large graduated bows of rhinestones on a foundation of tulle. The décolletage was trimmed with bowknots of the same style on a band of shirred tulle, and it was also edged with a ruffle of cream colored lace. Over the bodice was a shaped flounce of cream colored lace quite long in the back and caught up on each side.

Girdles are getting smaller. Sometimes they are part of the bodice or are replaced by sashes and ribbon belts with smart little bows in the back. When the belt is separate it must be of a contrasting material to that of bodice. Generally it is some soft silk, made three inches wide in front and one inch in the back, where it is finished by a bow consisting as a rule of two upright ends with two longer ones hanging below the belt.

Baby comes in for his share of fashion's attention this year. His clothes are no longer the elaborate, befrilled and beuffled conceptions of former seasons, but in their simplicity and fineness of quality are far more attractive. What is lacking in trimmings is made up in quality of goods and careful workmanship. Baby's dresses must be of the finest material and the trimmings must be applied by hand.

A simple and pretty dress is of fine white lingerie stuff with a yoke of hand run tucks; the only trimming being frills valenciennes lace at the throat and wrists joined to the material by narrow banding.

Hand embroidery and scalloped or button holed frills are also used to trim the baby's dresses and coats.

Linen seems to have eclipsed all other materials, even in the world of boys' fashions. This year is essentially a white season for the boy as well as the girl. White suits for boys are as popular as ever, but for every day hard wear the linens in dull blues and khaki colors are the most sensible.

The Russian smock suit is the thing for the small boy who has not yet graduated into knickerbockers, and it has also the advantage of being easily laundered and of combining comfort with beauty. The Russian blouses for boys no longer close on the side, but are arranged in various ways with collar and revers, or a long sloping smoker collar turning back from a shield and crossing at the belt or slightly above it. Collar and cuffs are sometimes trimmed with the ever popular broderie Anglaise, which is especially effective on the suits of the small boy just out of babyhood.

Some very pretty suits are in a narrow stripe of white blue or white and red with plain white collars trimmed with narrow stitched bands of the color and a scarf of the same.

Dark blue and white mohair are also made up in Russian blouse suits and are trimmed in a variety of ways, with white or light blue braid, gold buttons, etc. The smartest suits of mohair are of one color, with no trimming except stitching and big pearl buttons. ESTELLE CLAIRMONT.

Find Cure for Leprosy.

American surgeons, connected with the board of health of Manila, declare that they have discovered a positive cure for leprosy. Of 25 cases treated, all have improved, six cases being absolutely cured. Several patients, portions of whose bodies were gone, have recovered.

All of these cases have been under observation for at least six months, and it is absolutely impossible to discover a trace of the germs of the disease in the blood of the patients. The method used is a system of X-rays.

The surgeons do not desire their names to be mentioned at present. They will not ask for the rewards which various governments have offered for a cure for leprosy.

Spanish War Veterans Meet.

Rock Island, Ill., Aug. 19.—The annual convention or encampment of the Illinois Spanish-American War Veterans opened here today. The attendance is not as large as in former years, owing to the fact that many of the veterans intend to attend the national encampment which will open in Milwaukee on September 7th, and find it impossible to be present at the state encampment as well.
