PRESIDENT'S SOUTHERN TOUR WARM Given a Great Ovation on His Arrival at Jacksonville, Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 21.—This is a red letter day in the history of Jacksonville. Never before has the city been so crowded with visitors from all parts of the state as today and never so it presented a more festive appearance. Flags and bunting in the national colors were displayed lavishly on all public buildings and many business and private houses. From early morning the tramping and rattling of the troops, as they marched through the streets to their respective stations, the bugle calls and music of the two bands added a martial note to the general din and confusion. Thousands of people crowded the streets and from an early hour besieged every point of vantage from which a glimpse of the military parade and the President could be obtained. The crowds were particularly large near the station where the President was to arrive and along the streets through which he was to drive to the reviewing stand.

The President's special train, which had left Jessup, Ga., at 5:40 this morning, was met at the state line by General J. Clifford R. Foster, the personal representative of Governor Broward of Florida, who boarded the President's train and welcomed the President on behalf of the governor. At Callahan a committee, representing the city of Jacksonville and the Jacksonville board of trade, boarded the President's train and acted as his official escort until the train arrived at the station here at half past 10 o'clock this forenoon.

When the train rolled into the station the guns of the First Battery of field artillery from Lake City boomed a presidential salute of twenty-one guns, while the crowd cheered and enthusiastically waved hats and handkerchiefs. On the platform President Roosevelt was received and cordially greeted by Governor N. B. Broward, Mayor William H. Baker, President Charles B. Garner of the Jacksonville board of trade, and the members of the citizens' reception committee.

After the welcoming ceremony was over, the President and the members of his party and the officials and members of the reception committee took seats in their carriages and slowly drove to the reviewing stand. A detail of the First Regiment Florida National Guard acted as escort. The arrival of the President was the signal for the military and civic parade to form and start its march. A few minutes for the Presidential party had taken seats on the reviewing stand the end of the parade reached the stand. The marchers saluted the President, then he passed the platform and President Roosevelt bowed and smiled his acknowledgment. After the parade which occupied over an hour and a half, President Roosevelt delivered an address to the assembled crowd, which listened attentively and frequently cheered the sentiments expressed by the speaker. After the conclusion of his brief address the President was the guest of the Jacksonville board of trade at a formal luncheon.

According to the program the President will be taken on a drive through the city in an automobile after luncheon and will be shown various points of interest in the city and suburbs. Then he will place himself into the hands of the reception committee representing the city and board of trade of St. Augustine for which city he will start from here at 4:45 o'clock.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 21.—The President launched into the discussion on the Panama canal without any preface. He outlined its benefits, possibilities and plans. He said: "Pending the report of the advisory board of engineers upon the type of canal, the work is well under way. It has advanced sufficiently to enable me to announce with certainty that it can surely be accomplished, and probably at less expense than anticipated, but can make no positive statement until the report. Of course, inevitable difficulties will occur, and checks be encountered. Whenever such is the case men of little faith at home, critics who confound hysteria with emphasis, will act after the manner of their kind. No check that can come will be more than trivial and of passing consequence. When any such work is done, there are always more adventurers and many who think they are adventurers, but who in reality are either weak or timid. Some of the first class will cause trouble occasionally, but will be detected and punished. The second class will cause trouble chiefly by losing heart, returning home, writing and raising the cry of the unhappy life, hard work and it being done wrong. These are like the stragglers of a victorious army. The isthmus climate was supposed to be deadly, and yellow fever was particularly supposed to be epidemic. Since we assumed control there has been less fever than in this country, and the administration is steadily becoming better and more effective, from a hygienic and every other standpoint. The digging of the canal will make an efficient navy more necessary."

He discussed plans for preserving peace with adjacent countries, and conserving the interests of commerce in the Caribbean Sea.

It was the Wheel mills that first went up, quickly followed by the other two. Luckily no one was in the mills at the time, and there was no loss of life. The walls are left intact, and the loss is not great. The machinery can be used again. The mills are close to others, and it is considered a matter of luck they did not explode.

(Four O'Clock Edition.)

New York, Oct. 21.—Her hair caught in a whirling belt, Fannie Wolf, 17 years old, was scalped Friday afternoon in the shop of the Milbury Atlantic Supply Company. Every vestige of hair was stripped from her head.

A surgeon who responded made a hurried search for the scalp, and found that the foreman of the shop had thrown it out of the window. Persons outside were appealed to, but could find no trace of it.

The surgeon hurried the girl to the hospital, where, it is said, her condition is serious. It is said that if her hair had been found, it might have been successfully grafted.

Cashier Arrested.
(Four O'clock Edition.)

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—Francis B. Runder, cashier of the St. Louis post-office, was arrested in the office this morning, accused of embezzlement. The warrant charges a shortage of between $8000 and $9000. Runder is one of the most trusted and efficient of the employees. Postmaster Wyman was shocked when the inspectors acquainted him with the situation. He said Runder was an epitome of postal information, upon whom the administration of the office relied, always placing the greatest confidence in his honesty and ability. Runder was arraigned this afternoon, and held in $10,000 bond. One of the inspectors expressed the opinion that it may develop that the apparent shortage is the result of a series of mistakes in bookkeeping.

Will Put on Big Fleet.
(Four O'clock Edition.)

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 21.—Advices were received by the steamer Lyra that a combination had been formed of Japanese shipping firms to send tramp steamers to the United States and Europe with cargoes from Japanese and Chinese ports, carrying freight at about one-third the present rate. The 68 steamers which were captured while running contraband and confiscated by the prize courts will be added to the service, and the augmented fleet will be a big one when the steamers now in use by the government to bring home the troops are released. This will make a big inroad into the business of the foreign tramps, mostly British, German and Norwegian, now carrying cargoes from Japan and China to Europe and the United States. It costs 50 per cent less to run a Japanese vessel as compared with a British tramp, and 25 per cent less than a Norwegian, the cheapest of all foreign steamers to man and supply.
