STAND UP FOR SALEM.

It is gratifying that in all the discussion of state capital removal, the press of the state is unanimously for Salem.

That is outside of the Portland paper that has discovered the matter "only in an academic way," the country papers are a unit in favor of its present location.

When it is recalled that only a few years ago references to the Salem Hog were quite frequent, this present harmony and unanimity of friendship is very agreeable.

Salem, as a city, and Marion county, as a municipality, has always respected the rights of other sections of Oregon.

As the center of the Willamette Valley Development movement, Salem's leading citizens have stood up for the interests of Western Oregon and for the whole interior of the state.

Policies of liberality, harmony and expressions of good will are bound to produce good results for the whole state. These are the only policies that Salem people can afford to promise or promulgate.

NOT AN ARISTOCRAT.

Walter L. Toose, of Woodburn, comes as near being one of the common people as any man in Oregon. He grew up in the country, went to a country school, made his own way into business and raised his family to work for a living. His oldest son, while well educated, made a hand as helper in street work at Woodburn, and a full hand on the farm. Mrs. Toose and the rest of the children pick hops right through the season NOT FOR AN OUTING, BUT FOR THE WAGES THEY CAN MAKE OUT OF IT. He does not belong to any of the office-holding aristocracy of the past. Beyond postmaster of his town he has never held a lucrative office. He will be able to make a living if he does not become congressman. If elected he will do more work for the party, for the state, and for the whole people, and be more heard from and accomplish more in a business way than any new man we could send there. He is a rustler and a business man, whether its potatoes or politics.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

The doctrine of eternal punishment and the beliefs which seem to make it an essential doctrine of Christianity had really lost their foundation so long ago as the civil war in America. While there are in all parts of the country, and more especially in the South, men who boast of their belief, in even literal forms, of future and eternal punishment, the tendency throughout the land is to let the doctrine drop quietly into the background. While it is on formal occasions assented to, it is never forcibly presented. It will never be disproved, because no one can disprove a fact which lies in the future. It cannot be argued down, because there is always the possibility of asserting that an infinite being who is capable of governing in that way exists; but, when once a generation has grown unfamiliar with the doctrine, it will quietly take its place with witchcraft, possession of the devil and other delusions and half-truths of past ages.—The Christian Register.

How blessed the thought that we cannot pre-empt, monopolize or limit the possibilities of human and divine fellowship. From wherever we start there is an open way to him. Whenever

Why Refer to Doctors

Because we make medicines for them. They know all about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, so they prescribe it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak lungs, consumption. They trust it. Then you can afford to trust it. Sold for over sixty years. We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

or we reach out after him, whenever we go earnestly in search of him, we find some traces of his presence. What others have seen and felt we may not duplicate, but we may have our own original experience. There is no rule of faith which will cover even a majority of cases. There is infinite fertility and variety in the ways of God's spirit. Temperament itself, with all its contradictions and often as it sets at naught the conventionalities, is only another evidence that what God desires is not some stereotyped form of religious experience, but the sincere, simple, direct fellowship and trust of each individual soul.—The Universalist Leader.

The time has clearly come for liberal theology to justify itself in the eyes of the people, if it can, for the people are weary of negations. Can liberal theology justify itself? It can do it in one way only—by showing its capacity for spiritual zeal. For liberal theology has also been guilty of wrong emphasis. It has emphasized its doubts rather than its faith. It has been destructive of error, but not constructive of truth. It has told people what to reject, but not what to believe. It is not surprising that it is distrusted by people who above all things crave a positive faith; yet it has a faith, a real and deep faith, founded on a real spiritual experience, if it would but have the courage to declare it.—Rev. J. W. Dawson, in The Congregationalist.

The Churchman asks, "Shall nations make peace and Christendom continue divided and discordant? Do Christians at all realize how their divisions minimize not merely their power, but the cause that they profess to represent? Do they observe how many great movements for the betterment of mankind steer clear of Christian organizations? And why? Because Christians are so divided that the choice must be made between a small and narrow movement in one church, or of working independently of all churches."

Living simply has received emphasis of late, but living largely must not be forgotten. The two are in perfect harmony. We should live largely, not in material things, but in ideas, in spirit, and in deeds. Many in narrow circumstances have a wide horizon of thought and experience. A Christian life is one of simplicity, but large in its comprehension of things that are eternal.—The Watchman.

Bribing Newspapers and Magazines.

The Star-Chronicle of St. Louis makes itself authority for the statement that the New York Life Insurance Company is trying to fool the country by false reports of the exposure of its scandalous management. Its publicity bureau sent to the Star-Chronicle a "news" dispatch which lifted its scandalous conduct almost to a level of a loyal work of charity, and wired this version of the testimony to all the St. Louis papers with a request that it be printed as news with a news head above it, the line "Special Dispatch to the ——" and the date, and without advertising marks of any kind, at the same time authorizing each newspaper to make the price "whatever you like" and send bills to the home office. In its exposure of this proceeding, the Star-Chronicle recited that on receipt of the New York Life's edited "news" and the accompanying request for publication, it had wired back its rejection of the proposal, offering, however, to print the "cooked" dispatch as a display advertisement. To this offer the publicity agent of the New York Life promptly replied: "Your proposition does not go. I ordered telegraphic news printed. When I order telegraphic news printed, I do not propose to accept trips." The Star-Chronicle refused to publish the dispatch. Other papers published it in the deceptive manner required and presumably got the bribe money. Similar methods of bribing periodicals have been common enough. The railroads are even now bribing newspapers right and left and all through the country. But heretofore it has been regarded as "possessive" to mention such facts. Now, however, exposures are widening out to such an extent as to make the unsophisticated wonder whether Rockefeller and the Standard Oil crowd are not also engaged in it. Certain it is that a great silence with reference to Rockefeller's rascalities and a great devotion of space to the bright side of this man with millions, a side hitherto concealed, coincide with an outburst of lavish advertising of Standard Oil specialties.

DALLAS
BURGLARS

Later details from Dallas show that the burglars of Wednesday night or Thursday morning carried on wholesale operations. Two saloons and a confectionery store were included in their operations, and they secured money and plunder amounting to upwards of $300. Besides the saloons of Matthews and Mattison, where the largest haul was made, the resort known as the "Club" and the store of W. R. Ellis were entered. In each instance the robbers forced the doors, doing considerable damage, but without making any noise or arousing residents. There is still not the slightest clue as to their identity.

NEEDLE PARALYSIS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Only Safeguard

One of the Afflicted Tells How They Restored the Use of almost Fingers.

Too steady use of a particular set of muscles tends to chronic fatigue, which produces faulty or difficult motion, trembling, cramps and even paralysis. Writers, stenographers, telegraphers, tailors and seamstresses are among the classes most threatened in this way with the loss of their power to earn a living.

The only safeguard is to keep up the supply of nerve force through the blood, which carries to the nerves the food that supports their strength. The following instance shows that nerve power may be recovered after it seems entirely lost, if the right means are taken. Mrs. O. S. Blacksten, of No. 584 North Bowman street, Mansfield, Ohio, says:

"For years my hands would become so numb at times that I would drop anything I attempted to lift. Later they became so bad that I could not sew any longer. As soon as I put on my thumb a pricking sensation would begin in my finger tips and run up to my shoulders. I got so at last that I could scarcely do anything at all with my hands."

"There was another serious discomfort. At night the pricking sensations would come on worse than ever. When I retired my hands and arms would pain so that I dread to go to bed. I suffered more than I can make anyone understand. My family doctor gave me some nerve tablets. They helped me a little, but only for a short time after I had taken them. If I happened to be without them for a day or two I would be as bad as ever or even worse."

"One day a book was left at my door. I looked at it and got interested in reading accounts of cures from nervous troubles effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. That very day I got a box and began to take them. The result was surprising. Thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I am now all right. I can sleep undisturbed by pain, and I am in fact as well as I ever was in my life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made some marvelous cures in severe nervous disorders because they feed the blood with vital elements and so restore lost nerve force. And, through the blood, they strike at the root of all common blood diseases, such as anemia, general weakness, indigestion, headaches, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, backache, and the special ailments of women when their blood becomes poor or irregular. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Great Fair and Chicken Supper.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Christ Lutheran church, Rev. Ad. Eberle, pastor, will hold its annual fair opposite the Electric Store, on East State street, Friday and Saturday, October 27th and 28th, from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. From 5 to 9 p. m. an excellent chicken supper will be served for 25 cents per meal.

The articles which will be sold at the fair are very useful, handsome, good and cheap.

GOVERNOR
SIGN DEEDS

Deeds to about 10,000 acres of school lands will be issued by the state to individual buyers as soon as they pay the balance due on the principal, with interest to date. The deeds will come from the state, but will not bear the governor's signature. According to the attorney-general's opinion they will be legal, as they will be signed by the state treasurer and secretary of state, the two other members of the land board, who differed from the governor on the question of issuing the deeds.

The governor's dissension in the recent land certificate matter was continued yesterday, when the deeds were up before the board for signature. Governor Chamberlain refused his signature, and an opinion was asked of the attorney-general as to whether the deeds would be valid when signed by only two members of the board.

The opinion creates a precedent. The attorney-general says that the board, in signing land deeds, acts as a unit, not as individuals; that all deeds are valid if they are signed by a majority of the board, if the entire board was present when the issuing of the deeds was authorized.

A Marion County Candidate.

If Marion county gets a place on the state ticket it is liable to be the office of secretary of state.

Frank T. Wrightman, who served this county as sheriff, and has been for several years clerk of the corporation tax department is a candidate.

He was raised on a farm, became a factor in county and state politics and has a state wide acquaintance.

Educated for the legal profession, Mr. Wrightman has made a study of revenue laws, and was one of the factors in securing for this state the enactment of the corporation and inheritance tax laws.

As a recognition for his work, he was put at the head of the revenue department of the department of state, and, with the training of four years in that position, he feels qualified to be promoted.
