PIGWEED FATAL TO CATTLE

Corvallis, Or., Oct. 28.—It is announced at the college that pigweed, or redroot, a weed very common throughout the Willamette valley, is under certain conditions fatal to livestock, particularly cattle. The discovery was made by Prof. Pernot in the bacteriological department during the past few days.

For several years it has been common for the department to receive a great many pathological specimens from cattle that die in the late summer or late fall before the first rains come. Always in the past the investigation of these specimens has failed to result in detection of the trouble.

The discovery came from investigation of pathological specimens sent by the stock inspector of Marion county from a farm near Gervais, where 14 cattle died within a comparatively short period. A long study of the samples failed to reveal the trouble, and the case was about to be given up when the microscope revealed a highly inflamed condition in a section of an intestine. Attention was then directed to fecal matter contents and a myriad of small seeds were found, the fecal matter being literally studded with them.

Prof. Lake and Prof. Coote both identified the seeds as amaranthus retrofractus (pigweed). In a mature state, a pod incloses the seed, and on this pod there are spines or stickers. These spines are very sharp and very minute, generally, and are mainly composed of silica, which renders them insoluble in the gastric juices of the stomach, and even prevents them from being softened by their passage through the various organs.

Further study of the intestine finally revealed thousands of these minute and flinty spines in the mucous membrane of the intestine, many of them having pierced the intestinal wall. A high state of inflammation is the consequence, and the animal dies of acute gastritis.

Cattle will not eat the weed until it is mature, and not then if there is other forage.

Son Lost Mother.

"Consumption runs in our family, and through it I lost my mother," writes E. B. Reid of Harmony, Mo. "For the past five years, however, on the slightest sign of a Cough or Cold, I have taken Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which has saved me from serious lung trouble." His mother's death was a sad loss for Mr. Reid, but he learned that lung trouble must not be neglected, and how to cure it. Quickest relief and cure for coughs and colds. Price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed, at J. C. Perry's Drug Store. Trial bottle free.
