REPUBLICAN RALLY TONIGHT

At City Police Court to Nominate New City Committee

Greater interest is manifest in the city Republican campaign. More candidates' names have been filed and button-holing by candidates on the streets is going on quite lively. So far but one Democrat's name has been filed, Jos. Bernardi, in the fourth ward.

Two nominations have been made that are independent or citizens or Taxpayers' League, or anything but Republican, as no party is mentioned, A. N. Moores in the second and O. G. Savage in the first. In the Savage petition the word "independent" was used first, but was afterward pasted over with a slip of paper. Both Moores and Savage have many signers, and are being strongly supported by the Taxpayers' League.

A Republican Ticket.

Talks with party leaders disclose the intention to put up a straight Republican candidate in each ward with no platform, except pledge to stand up for the best interests of the city. They will "point with pride" to the financial record of the present Republican administration which has run the financial record of the present Republican administration which has run the city within its means, and done all it could for street improvements. The first step in the campaign is to see that the best men are brought out in each ward for aldermen, and a candidate for city committeeman in each ward.

The meeting tonight will call the roll of wards and ask to have a complete city ticket and city committee nominated, and may also adopt resolutions on various subjects. As the banner Republican city of the banner Republican county of the state, and a city and county that stand for good government and progress on all lines, the Republicans of Salem have nothing in their record to be ashamed of. The general feeling is to have spirited contests for the nominations Saturday, and then all support the nominees in each and every ward. The spirit of factionalism will not meet with any encouragement whatever. The time for filing petitions for nominations expires at 5 o'clock tomorrow, Thursday, afternoon.

Boys' Club Rally Tonight.

The junior department of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a boys' club rally tonight at their rooms in the Y. M. C. A. building. H. W. Stone, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Portland, will speak, and Mr. Hale, the Portland boys' secretary, will be there with his stereopticon and phonograph. The Salem Boys' Club has always been a strong one, and every member should be on hand tonight, and set the wheels turning.

Mr. Stone will tell some of his best stories, and those who have heard him know that they will be fine. Mr. Hale is now in the city making ready for the rally tonight.

Admission will be by ticket, and only boys between the ages of 12 and 17 will be admitted. The tickets are free.

IS GREAT ATTRACTION.

Egyptian Magician Delighting Audiences at the Edison.

A genuine Egyptian magician, the White Yoga, is delighting huge audiences this week at the Edison. What he does is strictly novel and high class. The most startling is making a great punch bowl fully two and a half feet across apparently from nowhere.

Two clever jugglers, Leonard and Bernard, fill a place on the bill and they do it to the most enthusiastic satisfaction of the audience.

Herbert B. Cherley and company appear in a well-written one-act play called "The Third Generation." One of the members of the company is little Ethel Barr, famous all over the West as a child actress of unusual ability.

The illustrated song, "The Song My Mother Used to Sing," is a beautiful sentimental ballad, sung with rare effect by Harry Moyer.

Laughter, frequent and loud, is drawn from the audience by the moving pictures, absolutely the funniest ever seen in Salem.

Eugene lodge B. P. O. E. is making arrangements to observe the order's annual memorial day, the first Sunday in December, and P. H. D'Arcy, of this city, will deliver the address.

HUMOROUS SIDE OF EDITING

(By A. B. Knox, Formerly Proprietor of the Woodbury, Conn., Reporter. Address delivered at the summer meeting of the Connecticut Editorial Association.)

At 18 years of age I was seized with an uncontrollable desire to own a printing press and enter upon a star course of journalism, and for a liberal number of dollars I became the owner of a Star press and a few superannuated type which an honored ex-president of this association was willing to sell me, and on January 10, 1877, I electrified the citizens of Woodbury by letting loose a few copies of the first number of the Woodbury Reporter, four pages, each page 4 1/2 x 6 inches. A copy of this infant sheet fell into the hands of the then editor of the Waterbury American, and its general appearance so impressed him that he gave the little thing a puff and advised "Editor Knox to knock the thing in the head." A second number soon appeared, and it showed marked improvement and increased size, and, half a dozen or so of the citizens of the town venturing the price of a three months' subscription, the child began to wax fat and increase in stature.

But it is something humorous you ask for. And that reminds me of the exceedingly nirth provoking expression that fell from the lips of a wealthy citizen of the town when he was requested to subscribe for the Reporter. "I don't care a cent about the paper," said he, "but here's a dollar to keep you out of the poorhouse." Somewhat different was the remark of the village blacksmith, for he, in refusing to have his name added to the subscription list, said, "I can get all the news I want in the New York Herald."

The situation was somewhat humorous in the pioneer days of the paper, when the editor was informed by the irate young husband that the announcement of a birth of a son in his family was premature by a number of moons. Said item was reported as a fact by a single young lady in order to get even with her one time sweetheart. And equally funny was the experience of the editor some months later when he printed the society item sent in under a forged signature announcing the engagement of a prominent society couple, when the truth was the young people had never entered into an entanglement of so strange a nature.

Quite different were the woes of a middle aged spinster who entered my office and tendered for publication a half column article in which she painfully "screamed" her neighbors, against whom she had a dozen or more grievances. As I was about ready to go to press I informed her that I had no space for so lengthy an article. "No space!" said she, whipping out an old copy of the paper and pointing to the advertising columns. "Look at all that white space in those advertisements that ain't filled up. You've room enough, but you dasn't print it!" Equally ingenious was the remark of another spinster who cultivated a grudge against a widower and thought to give him fits in the Reporter. After reading her fiery article I informed her that publication would libel the gentleman, whereupon she exploded as follows: "Libel that old coon! Holy Moses! Goodby!"

In summing up the few assets that I possessed during the years of work on the Reporter I am inclined to rate tact as the most valuable. It requires tact to win friends in newspaper work. Tact is better than a college education if you can have but one.

A subscriber from an adjoining town frowned in upon me one day and fiercely exclaimed: "Stop sending me that paper. I don't want it any longer." After bowing the gentleman out of the office and erasing his name from the subscription list I penned a nice little "puff" about him, and it appeared in the current issue of the paper. Three days after the Reporter was issued my agricultural friend walked in and, reaching out the price of a year's subscription, remarked, "My wife says she can't get along another year, and let me have a dozen copies of this week's issue." This was tact put to good use. The want of tact was well illustrated in the early days of my newspaper experience. A gentleman called to see me on business and incidentally inquired about the success of the Reporter. I told him I had secured a few subscribers in his town and stated that there was one old lady there who refused to take the paper. Knowing that she was a woman of means, I asked the gentleman if he did not think that she was stingy and mean. He replied: "I haven't found her so. She's my mother." The lesson was severe, but has been of lasting value.

I venture the assertion that the ed-

Wants the Stake.

A demurrer was filed this morning with the county court by the members of the state board of agriculture, who had been made defendants in a suit brought some time ago by E. B. Tongue. The latter was the owner of a colt that won a race at the late state fair, but was refused the stake on the ground that there was but one other horse in the race.

The board of agriculture, after Tongue had set up his claim to the stake of $300, decided to abide by the decision of the governing board of the National Racing Association. That body decided that Tongue had no right to the stake, and the payment was refused.

James Jansen, a bridge carpenter of the G. P. gang rebuilding the bridge at Harrisburg, fell off the bridge Sunday afternoon, and was stunned and drowned before assistance could be rendered him.
