SOME HOPS IN SALEM

And Yet it is Only 15 per Cent of What is Grown Near Here

Hops in quantities sufficient to make a German brewer gaze in ecstatic amazement are piled high today in Salem warehouses. In one monster storage room there is—take a breath before you read it—just $100,000 worth of the stuff that makes your beer worth drinking. They are only baled hops now, but will give a delicious flavor to the amber fluid that "made Milwaukee famous." One more place has grown famous through the agency of hops, and that is Salem, now acknowledged as the greatest hop center in the United States.

This fortune in hops is stored in the large warehouse opposite the Southern Pacific freight depot. In all, 5,000 bales, they represent a most powerful evidence of Salem's control of the western hop markets. Really, only a small portion of the total quantity of hops that are handled in this city every year, they are still sufficient to make one stop and think.

Only 700 acres was required to grow that vast pile, an average yield of 143 to the acre. Land that yields annually $20 in wheat to the acre is elsewhere considered marvellously good. Still an acreage production of seven times more than that of very good wheat land is not considered extraordinarily good in the Willamette valley.

The 5000 bales that are piled in the warehouse laid end to end would reach from the Journal office north down Commercial street entirely around the state fair grounds and return, a gigantic circle of hops. Piled in the air, they would overtop Mount Hood about 8,000 feet, and rival in height Mt. St. Elias, Alaska's greatest peak, and the highest mountain on the American continent. Or, placed one on another, in a single course as high as the state house roof, they would make a giant fence around Oregon's capitol.

It is futile to conjecture what will happen when they are finally compounded into beer. How many hundreds of thousands of barrels will contain some of the hops at present lying in the warehouse, it is useless to guess. Nor can anyone estimate how many "Here's looking at you's" will be said as thirsty drinkers gratefully raise the millions of glasses of the amber nectar to their lips. But certain it is that many thousands will smack their lips after drinking and remark, "It must be the hops that makes this beer taste so good."

It seems that some people, having assumed that the pretty girl is given preference by the average employer, are wondering what becomes of the girl who is not only plain but no longer young, and who does not marry.

In the first place it is a wrong supposition that the pretty girl is generally preferred; many business men, young ones, also, who are supposed to be quite impressionable, refuse to hire pretty girls, claiming that they do not take the really active interest in their work that plain ones do, and make less satisfactory employees. They have a theory that the pretty one's mind must be on her curls and her dimples and the admiration she elicits from the male half of the population. Naturally, if such were the case, she would not give as good service as her homely sister, and business men—the successful ones—are running their businesses primarily for the purpose of making money. Therefore, they hire their help without regard for sentiment, and to get the most work in return for the amount of money invested. The plain girl is not discriminated against excepting by a class of employes that it would not be to her credit to please.

"But what becomes of the old girls who do not marry?" This is readily answered by a little insight into human nature and the laws of living. It is certainly true that people get what they go after in this world, to a certain extent. They may not reap in full measure that which they sow, but there is always a partial crop, at least, and most assuredly they do not reap that which they do not sow. A girl who has matrimony in mind—whether pretty or plain, for the plain girl marries quite as readily as the pretty one—dresses with greater care, spends her salary on becoming clothes lives only in the thought of some man some day assuming the burden of the future, and, as she is on the lookout for a husband she naturally finds one. It never seems to her worth while to save money, because she knows she is "working" only temporarily, and she prefers the ribbons, lace, hats, etc., that her salary will buy to a bank account. A man is readily attracted by the prettily and daintily dressed girl, and her problems in life is easily settled.

There are other young women naturally thrifty who would feel that their working hours were wasted if their pay went merely for things of temporary value. They have the business instincts of a man, and they must, according to the nature of their beings, put aside a part of their salaries each week. As the years go on they become keenly interested in watching their bank accounts grow larger with each week's savings. They become more economical with the passage of time, and even take to doing their own sewing at night and economizing in other little things that they may save more money.

The employer notices their thrifty ways and feels confidence in them as women who could no more waste another's money than their own. They are safe people to put in charge of the work, as they will allow no "soldiering" among the help, neither will they waste supplies. They become forewomen and general managers. They are promoted as readily as a man would be, because the employer does not believe they will marry now, and he comes to look upon them as fixtures. Their services are valued and they are paid almost the same salary, and often exactly the same, that a man would receive for the identical work. You will find them in every establishment in the city where there is a good-sized office force, and often as managers of the business where there are no other employes save a stenographer and an office boy.

I know one capable business woman who has complete charge of a tremendous lumber business in Chicago. Dur-

Weak Stomach.

A weak stomach is most frequently caused by the overworked and exhausted nervous system.

The power that runs the stomach is the nerve force sent to it from the brain through the nerves. When the nerves are weak or exhausted the supply of energy is insufficient and the action of the stomach is impaired, and results in imperfect digestion—dyspepsia.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve increases nerve force. It strengthens and builds up nerve tissue, gives vigor to the nerves and muscles of the stomach; this produces a healthy activity.

Nerve allays the inflammation, heals the membranes, and makes the stomach strong and healthy. There is nothing that so quickly gives energy to the whole system as Restorative Nerve.

"I can't say enough for Dr. Miles' Nerve. I don't know what it will do for others, but it certainly cured me of stomach trouble, and now I am as well as I ever was. Two physicians failed to relieve me, but in three or four days after taking Nerve I was much relieved. Four bottles made me a sound man, at the cost of $4.00."

Dr. Miles' Nerve is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

A PLAIN GIRL'S CHANCES

It is often as great as woman's. But Thos. S. Austin, Mgr. of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, Ind., was not unreasonable, when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife, for female trouble. "Instead," he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters. My wife was then so sick, she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters, she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties." Guaranteed by J. C. Perry, druggist, price 75c.

ing the recent drivers' strike she was left in charge of the business while her employer was in the east. She telegraphed him the changed conditions relative to moving lumber arising from the strike, and he replied: "Use your best judgment." She is only a slip of a woman, but he felt perfect confidence in her ability to manage the striking teamsters and get his lumber delivered. And she did manage so well that little business was lost through inability to secure drivers. She took her own woman's way. She opened up a kitchen in the lumber company's office, and with her own hands, between billing lumber and overseeing the handling of it by carloads, cooked hot dinners for the drivers and kept them in such a good humor that they remained loyal to her interests. She didn't leave the office during the hot summer months of July and August before 9 and 10 o'clock at night, but she pulled everything through successfully, and the triumph was worth more to her than an idle compliment could possibly be. This woman was a simple little country girl, beginning a job at 16 a week ten years ago. Her salary is now above $100 a month. She owns a beautiful little farm not far from Chicago, and she has a snug bank account.

A woman in business is not dropped excepting for inefficiency. Some employers prefer men because they naturally think the women will marry and leave them just as she has learned enough about the business and has gained enough business judgment to be of real value. But if the woman passes the so-called marrying age safely they look upon her as they would a man who had given them an equal number of years of good service and held to her, advancing her position and her salary as her qualifications warrant.

Man's Unreasonableness. It is often as great as woman's. But Thos. S. WINTER RATES TO YAQUINA BAY

Oregon's Greatest Recreation and Health Resort at the Newport Beaches.

As a winter health and recreation resort Newport is the one par excellence. Recognizing this, and wishing to give the people an opportunity to breathe the fresh, pure ozone of the ocean, the Southern Pacific and Corvallis and Eastern railroads will resume the sale of tickets through Yaquina Bay Saturday, October 21, and will sell same throughout the winter and spring on every Wednesday and Saturday.

The rates will be the same as during the summer and will be good for return 30 days from date of sale.

Dr. Minthorn's Sanitary Sea Baths will be in operation during the entire winter, and treatments will be given daily. Hot and cold salt water baths can be taken every day in the saltarium, and for anyone desiring rest, recreation and health, no place on the Pacific Northwest can be found equal to Yaquina Bay.

Other Health Resorts Closed. During the winter nearly all other health resorts are closed or difficult to reach, and none of them have the advantages of Newport and vicinity as regards climate, points of interest, recreation and amusement. For parties desiring to enjoy fishing, hunting, or seeing the ocean in sunshine and storm this famous resort is unequalled. The surroundings are ideal—beautiful scenery, climate mild, healthful and invigorating.

Cottage and Rent Cheap.

Neat clean cottages, either furnished or partly so, can be rented in the immediate neighborhood of the sanitary baths at about $5 per month. Plenty of fresh milk, vegetables, honey, fruit, and all household necessities can be obtained at the lowest possible cost, while all kinds of fish and the famous rock oysters can be had in abundance for the trouble of securing them.

People troubled with the loss of appetite, insomnia, rheumatism or run down from any cause, will find Newport an ideal place to regain their health and vigor, or for rest and pleasure.

Full information as to rates, checking of baggage, etc., can be obtained from any S. P. or C. E. agent, or from A. L. Craig, general passenger agent S. P. Co., Portland; or J. C. May, general passenger agent C. & E., Albany, Oregon.

Twice-Told Tale. A Massachusetts lawyer has a notoriously treacherous memory for details. This falling occasionally leads him to garble a joke in repeating it. Recently he met a friend, who, clapping him upon the shoulder, said enthusiastically: "Well, old man, this is a fine day for the race, isn't it?" "Why, what race?" "The human race," said the friend—and fled.

This was the first time the lawyer had ever heard this very ancient joke, so he determined to get it off on the next man he met—and he did, in this manner: "Hello, Godfrey, isn't this a fine day for the trot?" "Trot—What trot?" "By gad," stammered the lawyer, "I swear there was a joke there, but I can't find it now"—Carl Von Kraft in Lippinsott's.
