PORTLAND VISITS THE VALLEY

GENTLEMEN THE CAPITAL IS YOURS

Salem Welcomes You as the Harbingers of a New Era in the Northwest, and a United Oregon

A special train left Portland at noon today, carrying eighty-four of Portland's representative business men, who are to make a tour of Western Oregon as far south as Ashland. The object of the trip is expressed on the title page of a very pretty itinerary, prepared by the Southern Pacific, on which they, the business men, extend the following greeting:

"To your valleys of the Willamette, the Umpqua and the Rogue, to your fir-clad mountains and green vales interlaced, Portland sends greeting.

"We come, business men from your gateway city, Oregon's gateway to all the world, to clasp hands at home with you, the business men of the great interior.

"We wish to know more of the great interior, the magnificent cornucopia of Western Oregon, which for more than half a century has poured its riches through Portland into the lap of the earth.

"We wish to know you beyond the business acquaintance that mere interchange of traffic brings. In friendships we visit you who did so much to create and maintain that beacon light of the Northwest the Lewis and Clark Exposition. Your interests are our interests; we wish to know how we may serve them and, above all, we wish that personal friendship and understanding that will enable us to engage in effective team work on behalf of the greater and United Oregon."

It is an event of more than passing interest, for it is undoubtedly a fact that a goodly portion of Portland's business men are not acquainted with their own fair state of Oregon. They know that Salem, Albany, Eugene and Roseburg, Grants Pass, Medford, Ashland and hundreds of other thrifty towns deal with them and pay for their goods. They know in a desultory sort of way, that some where south of Portland a thousand rivulets of trade meet and mingle, pouring into Portland's harbor a continuous stream of wool and hops, wheat and hay, and all the varied products of farm and flock. Yet, of the great state they know little. Most of them, even in their visits to San Francisco, take a sleeper, leaving Portland in the evening, and seeing only a glimpse of the Rogue river valley. It is time this should be changed, and all Western Oregon extends to the coming visitors a welcome, sincere, frank and heartfelt, and the more heartfelt because it sees in the present visit the forerunner of closer relations, a better understanding of mutual needs, and the awakening of state pride. It means the exploiting of Oregon, instead of Washington and Idaho, and a knowledge of the unsurpassed opportunities that lie dormant in forest and field and mine. No man with red blood in his veins can look upon the fertile fields of Oregon, can grasp the beauty of glen and grove, of wide sweeping prairie, of halm-fringed streams, without a thrill of delight; nor can he see the sweep of foothill, the timber-covered ridges lifting step on step, up to the blue summits of the Cascades, from which the snow-peaks lift in silent and imposing grandeur, without realizing that nature lavished here the surplus of her riches and her beauty. There has been too much of blekering, too much of fault-finding between sections, too much of a desire to find out what our neighbors needed, and then knocking it. Yet, all the time we all know that Portland cannot grow and prosper without the valley feeling the good effects in some degree, and we know that everything that benefits the valley, is of direct benefit to Portland.

Excessive store expenses and losses from the credit system make it impossible for "regular stores" to match the prices of an economically managed spot cash store.

In spite of this knowledge, petty jealousies have caused mutual distrust and mutual neglect of each other's interests.

For this reason, and for many others, the visit of our Portland brothers is well-timed and welcome.

They will go home imbued with the idea of Oregon's greatness, and with a pride of state that will be an important factor in getting us all out of the old groves, and which will cause us all to stand together on the common plane of "all for Oregon."

The train will arrive at the crossing of Commercial street at a few minutes after 7 o'clock, and the distinguished visitors will be met by a committee of Salem's business men and escorted to the Willamette Hotel, where introductions will take place, and a short program will be carried out.

The following is the committee on arrangements: Mayor F. W. Waters, E. Hofer, Geo. F. Rodgers, F. T. Wrightman, Henry W. Meyers, J. L. Stockton, L. R. Stinson.

Reception committee: A. Welch, Theo. Kay, R. B. Houston, W. H. Downing, Geo. W. Johnson, J. G. Graham, M. Bredermier, John H. Albert, L. K. Page, J. M. Lawrence, J. F. Hughes, E. P. Douglas, C. H. INSURANCE GRAFTERS SHOWN UP

New York, Nov. 14.—Expecting Hyde to be called as a witness in the insurance investigation this morning, a large crowd, including many ladies, was present. Seats usually occupied by witnesses and attorneys were given to women. Hyde, accompanied by his attorney, Untermeyer, entered and appeared unconscious of the attention he attracted. John McGuinness, comptroller of the Equitable, was the first witness. Hughes read a number of letters from Equitable officials to A. C. Fields, expressing disapproval of certain legislation pending at Albany.

Hyde was called. There was a stir in the room as the young financier was sworn. Asked first about his connection with the Equitable, he declared he was educated by his father in the life insurance business, and was brought up to understand that he would succeed his father.

He entered the service in the fall of 1898, as second vice-president, and felt qualified to fill the position. He declined a salary when he entered into office. In 1900 he accepted a salary of $30,000, which continued to 1902, when it was increased to $75,000. When his salary was increased he was made chairman of the finance committee, with increased duties.

He insisted that in both cases the salary was offered, and increased without a suggestion from him, but on the volition of the members of the executive committee. He could offer no explanation of the testimony of Dewey before Hendricks, in which the senator was uncertain whether Hyde had asked for the increase, but thought he did, and thought he asked more than Alexander. Hughes asked Hyde if he would have continued at $75,000, if $100,000 had been refused. He answered: "Yes, because I did not believe I could get as much elsewhere." The galleries laughed.

Hyde said he had been given authority to receive money from the cashier, without any voucher other than his own. He became a director in the Equitable Trust Co. previous to 1901, and vice-president later. His salary of $5000 was increased to $12,000. He claimed much credit for the building of the trust company, and discussed syndicate operations. The Squire account, which was part of the "yellow dog fund," was the subject of inquiry which Hyde could not explain.

These accounts had not been explained at any time. He told of the "K. W. Alexander," fund which was used to settle suits and purchase stock, and for political contributions. Hyde, who is courtly, affable and at ease among women, and in the ball room, was uncomfortable on the stand among men, in a drama of his own making. He appeared like a school boy before his master, expecting to be sent to a corner in disgrace.

Hyde said when the banking department called for the repayment of $655,000 by Alexander, Thomas D. Jordan made up what he could, and he paid $212,000 himself.

Held Up the Station.

Chillicothe, Mo., Nov. 14.—Four highwaymen held up the Wabash railroad station at Gallatin Crossing last night. They lined up seven passengers and the station agent, and took $100 and a lot of jewelry. One woman's belongings were untouched. Arrests have been made, and it is said members of a prominent family are implicated.

NEW YORK ELECTION CONTEST

Official Count is Being Made Today, and it Will go Into the Courts

New York, Nov. 14.—The official count began today in each of the four counties included within Greater New York. Lawyers for Hearst and the Democrats appeared before each board. Hearst fights to have the discrepancies in the tally sheets corrected, protested ballots counted, the ballot boxes opened and the ballot recounted in districts where there is evidence of fraud. McClellan fights to confine the canvassers as closely as possible to the face of the official returns, which show McClellan elected by about 3000. A contest in the courts seems inevitable. The forces of the mayor and Jerome are active in preparing for the prosecution of the perpetrators of fraud.

New York, Nov. 14.—The ante-rooms were filled with witnesses when the grand jury resumed its inquiry into the election frauds this morning. It is reported that member of the election board in Murphy's district has confessed. Alderman Haggerty was re-arrested this morning on complaint of assaulting a Hearst watcher. He pleaded not guilty, and was held in $1000 bail.
