WALTER L. TOOZE AT McMinnville

Synopsis of His Remarks About the Columbia and West Coast Harbors

The year 1906 marks an epoch in the history of Oregon. The Lewis and Clark Fair has been the means of attracting public attention to the undeveloped resources of the state. Eastern visitors have been charmed with our wonderful climate, pleased with our generous hospitality and amazed at our lack of manufacturing industries and shipping facilities.

Situated upon the shores of the Pacific and possessing more undeveloped and valuable resources than any other state in the union, it is not strange that the result of the advertisement given by and through the exposition and the ceaseless efforts of our Development League has been to divert the attention of Eastern financiers to this portion of the Pacific northwest. The press of the state now contributes almost unlimited space to the vital subject of development. The producers and laborers are aroused as never before and the question of better markets and improved facilities for the transportation of our products to the centers of trade, where competition is an important factor to those who form the basis of the prosperity of our commonwealth, is the matter of paramount importance, not only to them but to every citizen of Oregon. Speedy development is demanded by our people and millions of dollars are now to be invested throughout the state. We are at the dawn of an era of development that will leave its impress upon the commercial and industrial life of Oregon through all time.

What is most needed now is a united effort upon the part of all our citizens in this great effort for the improvement of our harbors and the development of our boundless resources. No jealousy ought to exist between the different sections of the state. Citizens should have a common purpose

HELLO, PORTLAND!

There's visitors a-coming from the village down the creek, And the valley hangs its latch string out the balance of the week. For there's nothing 'twixt Willamette falls and Ashland's busy mart, Too good for them, and no place but will take them to its heart. While Salem will be first to greet, and welcome with a smile And let them have the capital for just a little while. They can shake hands with our mayor and likewise with Walter Tooze, And any day but Sunday, we will stand the price of booze.

We're financially embarrassed, due to Portland's little lark In honoring the memory of Lewis and of Clark, And the incidental killing of the State Fair was no joke, Yet we played the Portland limit, till the most of us went broke. Still there's apples and potatoes, and there's other things galore, With eggs and cream in plenty, and there's chickens by the score, And there's bacon in the smoke house, and we want them all to think There are no microbes in the water, and no water in the drink.

We wish they'd stay a week or two, for we can scarce believe Portland's bent on honest wedlock, and not flirting to deceive, For the valley's but a country lass, a buxom, blushing maid. But a license and a minister, is the base on which she'll trade, She's seen Portland flirt with Holladay, she sees it flirt with Hill. She knows that once in Villard's time, it got a nasty spill, She saw the mash on Harriman, but still she will forget When the ring is on her finger, and the wedding day is set.

P. S. — But we must confess to feeling that you wouldn't pull our leg— While you travel with McMurtry, and in company with Craig; And our confidence grows stronger, you're not looking for a scoop, Else you'd surely side-tracked Coman, and you'd also " " Shoup.

directed to the upbuilding of our resources in all sections of the country. Broad views along this line are necessary to achieve the highest success. Persistent, united, zealous effort will transform the present isolated, unproductive portions of the state into conditions of prosperity and an increased population, and flourishing communities that will add untold wealth to the people and benefit every citizen of Oregon.

Congress has appropriated for the improvement of the Columbia river during the past twenty-one years $4,425,680.00. All of this princely sum has been expended and an additional amount of nearly one million dollars is required to protect the work already done. No citizen of Oregon, from any portion of the state should object to this necessary improvement or attempt to retard the effort now being made to secure the additional funds from congress to carry on this great improvement of such vital importance to the citizens of Oregon. It is not the desire of our people that our commerce be diverted to Puget Sound, which would be the inevitable and logical result of failure to secure this additional appropriation of one million of dollars.

Hill is coming down the Columbia river with the declared intention to make Portland the chief terminal city of his line on the Western Coast. His vigorous, independent efforts have already brought results in an increased activity in railroad circles. Other lines are now anxious to enter the state to compete for the traffic that offers a rich field for investment. This condition of affairs is precisely what is most desirable and will insure quick action in the matter of improved railroad facilities and lead to the opening of a deep sea harbor along our coast.

This Development League will not attempt to block the wheels of progress by open or covert opposition to the improvement at the mouth of the Columbia river; but this league does demand a proper consideration of the needs of our coast harbors. The slogan of the hour is and shall be: The opening of a deep sea harbor south of the Columbia on the Oregon coast. Which harbor is to be selected should depend upon the expert examination of government engineers, who are qualified to determine the exact conditions. Coos Bay, Yaquina and Tillamook can and ought to be open to the commerce of the world. It is certain that railroads will be built to Coos bay and to Tillamook at an early date. All these harbors have strong claims for immediate development; but the burning question now is: How to best secure prompt and effective results. With the railroad to Coos bay an assured fact, coupled with the knowledge that it can be readily improved and made a deep sea harbor, together with the certainty that with these improvements a competitive market would be opened up for the producers and shippers of the Willamette valley and all the magnificent territory of Southern Oregon and the coast, would point to this great harbor as the present objective point for consideration at the hands of congress. If any other harbor can present and establish a stronger claim than Coos bay, the Willamette Development League and our citizens in general will stand for its prompt consideration. There is no disposition upon the part of the members of this league to oppose the improvement of any or all harbors along our coast. We are for the improvement of all, but a concerted effort is now required to obtain prompt results. With a deep sea harbor at Coos bay, Yaquina or Tillamook, and by a deep sea harbor I mean a depth of forty feet of water on the bar or more, opened to the commerce of the world, and the improvement at the mouth of the Columbia river, Oregon will forge to the front as the greatest state in the Pacific Northwest. Our population will be doubled. Our undeveloped resources will be developed and our transportation facilities will be adequate, and upon a fair basis of rates that will enable our citizens to reap the benefits of their untiring industry along all lines of human endeavor.

The government ownership of the locks at Oregon City and the improvement of the Willamette river also means much to our citizens and merits more than passing notice in the discussion of these questions affecting the welfare of our people.

The counties of Klamath and Lake are on the map, though only recently discovered by our capitalists and railroad promoters. That the four million of dollars set aside by a great railroad corporation will be expended in penetrating into this heretofore isolated section of our state, and result in a wonderful development of that country of boundless possibilities and successful irrigation projects, is generally conceded.

Shot Full of Holes.

"I am 65 years old, and have been a great sufferer from headache all my life. One of Dr. Miles' circulars was left at my door, and what it contained about headache interested me, so that I determined to invest a dollar in their make of shot, and go gunning for that headache. The first charge brought it down, but I continued to shoot until the thing was shot so full of holes that I believe it will never come to life again. I consider it the work of a "good Samaritan," to spread the knowledge of what Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will do." I. F. MOORE, 1352 Fairfax Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

PUEBLO INDIANS AND THEIR QUAINT HOMES.

One of the sights of New Mexico is an Indian pueblo, or village, which somewhat resembles a row of city flats after it has been struck by a cyclone or an earthquake. The houses are made of adobe and timbers, and some of them have been the abodes of Indians for a century or more. Jemez, the pueblo shown in the cut, is about thirty-five miles west of Santa Fe and has a population of about 450.
