AMUSEMENTS

TONIGHT.
 Edison—Vaudeville.

Good Bill at the Edison.
 The Berlino children, youthful prodigies, satisfied all expectations with their remarkable performance, at the Edison theatre last night. The elder of the trio is a finished musician, and the two younger have memories only short of marvelous. They will again appear tonight and tomorrow night.

Walstein and Daly have a comedy novelty turn that is absolutely unique on a vaudeville stage. They use skates in their act to dance on, play on, and make bewildering evolutions and flights across the diminutive stage. It is difficult to speak of the excellence of the turn; it is a whole show in itself.

The rest of the Edison show is also up to a high standard. There is a very beautiful illustrated song, and the usual 1000 feet of new moving picture films.

"I Thank the Lord!"
 cried Hannah Plant, of Little Rock, Ark., "for the relief I got from Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It cured my fearful running sores, which nothing else would heal, and from which I had suffered for 5 years." It is a marvelous healer for cuts, burns and wounds. Guaranteed at J. C. Perry's drug store; 25c.

JUDGE BEAN DISSENTS

The first dissenting opinion by the supreme court for a long time was rendered yesterday in the case of Geo. D. Sprague and others against Mrs. Sophronia Jessup. Justice Bean offered in opinion from his colleagues on the bench, and both registered his dissenting opinion emphatically. It is unusual, in view of the fact that there has been no difference of opinion among the judges of the supreme court for almost two years, in fact so long ago that the case has been forgotten.

The case in question was that of the heirs of Mary Pennell to have declared valid a sale of the property adjoining the Salem hotel, which they alleged Mrs. Sophronia Jessup, the defendant, made in 1902 for $5350. The sale was made under a parol agreement, that is, no specific contract was drawn up, but the first payment of $200 was made and a simple receipt given. Shortly after this Mrs. Mary Pennell, who the supreme court has decided was the purchaser, died. Her heirs fought the case to obtain title to the property.

Justice Bean, in his dissenting opinion states: "The specific performance of a parol contract for the conveyance of real estate will not be enforced under any circumstances unless the terms of the contract are shown by full, complete and satisfactory proof to have been so precise that neither party could misunderstand them." Then the justice quotes previous decisions on which he bases his opinion. In conclusion he says:

"I am not satisfied that in this case a full understanding of the contract was held by either party to the sale." In summing up their decisions Justices Wolverton and Moore state: "But courts are governed by judges who are only human, and whose deductions are based on issues of fact depending upon evidence which they deem to be true, and if they mistake in their honest convictions in respect to the testimony produced, the fault lies in the method of determining the facts rather than in the agency employed."

BRIGHT CHILDREN

We have in our city today three unusually bright children, David, Robert and Clarence Berlino, and their turns at the Edison last night were only too short, and many appreciative listeners regretted the entire time could not have been devoted to them. It is too bad that better arrangements could not have been made for an entire recital. David, a boy of eight years, gave Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," as a double piano solo with his mother, with all the art, expression, rhythm, perfection and technique of a finished musician; playing that and Godard's "Vals" without notes. He is a wonder, and a charming little fellow. Robert and Clarence gave marvelous tests of memory that seemed almost too much for their years, and made one just think it scarcely possible when their mother asked them question after question that they could answer another one, but never a failure. The writer interviewed them afterwards, and found them, with their interesting mother, as gracious and informal as they are talented. If the house was larger, and they were allotted more time, and nearly every one in town heard of the children, there is no question but what they could break all records for a successful engagement in this city.
