WILL PLAY MULTNOMAH.

Willamette Will Meet Multnomah Team on the Gridiron.

Arrangements were made yesterday whereby Willamette university will send a football team to Portland to battle with the Multnomah team on Christmas day. It will not be considered a championship game, but will rather be in the nature of an exhibition game, as the Salem team will go down greatly strengthened by the addition of Coach Bishop and possibly Prof. C. O. Boyer, and thus could not be considered the regular 'varsity team.

Willamette university is the only college in the northwest that has ever been able to defeat the doughty clubmen, and while the Multnomah team will be considerably stronger on Christmas day than when they were defeated by Salem, it will nevertheless be a game that is a game. Scott, Chalmers and Fenton, the three Stanford stars, will all be home for the holidays and will be a big addition to the Portland lineup.

The university boys had broke training after the Thanksgiving game and consequently will not be in near the physical condition they were when they won their former victory, yet they are confident of making as good a showing as did either Oregon or Corvallis. There is no danger of their being over confident, as they know exactly what they have to go up against and at the same time there is no danger of their having stage fright, as they know what they can do.

The players and faculty of the university had hoped to have had the season end on Thanksgiving, but the opportunity to wipe out the football debt could not very well be turned down. Willamette's share of the gate receipts will enable the management to pay off not only this year's debt, but last, as well.

School News.

The exhibition of work started by Principal Graham is growing both in quantity and quality. Among the work lately put out is some excellent drawing by the following: Roy Sarge, Woo Sun, Winnie Hargrove, Edna Lansing, Gaynell Baldwin, Ruth Mitchel, Vera Holman, Dorothea Steusloff, Lester Masher, Eva Hall, Wilda Salomon, Meni Pearce, Ruth Kress, Emery Gilmore, Lloyd Casper, Grace Fowks, Clifford Farmer, Charlotte Holmstrom, Elma Oswatt, Carmel Rollo, Jennie Pearce, Beryl Headrick, Mary Frisby, Helen Perkins and Edna Oswalt.

Some excellent geography outlines are on display written by Beryl Headrick, George E. McElroy, Rita Steiner, Bush Thompson, Sarah Alderman, Mary Frisby, Helen Perkins, Carl Veach, Bessie Goode and Zoe Olmstead.

Among the spelling papers those getting perfect are May Steusloff, Carl Veach, Rita Steiner, Helen Perkins, Clara Savage, Bush Thompson, Zoe Olmstead, Beryl Headrick, Charlotte Holstrom, Jenny Pearce, Grace Pratt, May Steusloff and Louise McClaren.

Several excellent compositions on "Hiawatha and Pearl Feather" have been written and illustrated by Sophia Widdersheim, Marie Grover and Fay Huchins.

The primary grades also have a large display of work in numbers, pen practice, map drawing, copy work and spelling. A great many visitors come to see the exhibit from day to day.

The high school basket ball team has broken up for this year. The student body elected Earl Eyre as manager of the team. Eyre, considering the best interests of the school, refused to allow ringers to play on the team, and refused to provide expensive jerseys for the team. The team requested Eyre to resign, which he did. When his resignation was handed to the executive committee the matter was investigated and Professor Powers moved "to disband boys' basket ball." Professor Martlatt seconded it and the motion passed.

Marjory Kay, who is sick with appendicitis, is improving and will soon return to school. She is in the 1B grade under Miss Missamore.

Percy Johnston, who was in the same class, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia. He is going to move to Portland as soon as he is able.

The Influence of Environment.

Now Mr. Taine accounts for both English and French writers according to inheritance and environment, and his explanation is generaly accepted; but can anyone make a beeline from the past to the present which will account for American novelists upon such grounds? We have more writers of fiction than any other country, but few of them have what may be termed the indigenous genius. And these are rarely the best. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman keeps close to the New England earth and spirit in her stories, but Hawthorne, who was born in the same region, was "a reversion to type." He belonged to a larger, older field of expresion. He interpreted the heart of man, not the heart of New England. He surpassed environment and inheritance. Kentucky claims James Lane Allen with great pride, but Lloyd and Vox have come nearer representing the common life of that part of the country. And there is Mary Austin in the west, who has written a novel this year which shows the inspiration of old world poetry and religion more than it does the influences of the real west. She has made the country as ancient as Spain and filled it with troubadour music and love. The golden coast environment of California makes an up to date American woman write as if she had been born in the middle centuries. And the novelist of the south is a sad example of what inheritance and environment fail to do for some American authors. The old south is dead. His very cradle was burned with it; he lives in a new civilization, and he is descended from men who knew how to grapple in a life and death struggle with any situation which demanded attention. But he has no courage adequate to this splendid new life. He has neither the vision to see nor the genius to present what is actually going on about him. His literary style is better suited to the illusions of memory than it is to facts. He can not realize in literary forms anything but the past. His novels are for the most part romantic diplomas certifying to the glories of the dead. Will N. Harben is the only author in the south who is offering the simple, honest, homely life of the common people in his stories. And he is receiving less attention than he deserves, because he leaves out the Civil War, the obsequious negro and the "mangnificent southern gentleman." He has stretched his canvas in an obscure neighborhood among the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains in North Georgia. But there is no telling when he will make a fool of himself by coming out where the other fellows are, in the cemetery business. The temptation must be very great, for they sell more of their books than he can sell of his. Cyrus Townsend Brady can make the welkin ring further with the doings of his preposterous duodecimal heroines and fallacious southern rakes than Harben can with stories of real life like "Abner Daniel" and "Pole Baker."—Our Novelists, by Mrs. Harris.

RIGHT NOURISHMENT.

We think of nourishment as food—meats, soups, vegetables, etc., but that's only half. It's not the food alone that counts but the good that we get from food that furnishes nourishment. A pound of steak is of less value to a weak stomach than a crust of bread is to a strong digestion. But weak stomachs can be made strong. Begin by eating less; have regular hours for meals; avoid fancy things and about a half hour after eating take a tablespoonful of Scott's Emulsion. It's a fact of medical history that people have lived on not much else but Scott's Emulsion for a long time—not only lived but gained flesh and recovered their strength and health. From the pure Norwegian cod liver oil to the last drop of glycerine, Scott's Emulsion contains just the strength-giving and health-building elements needed for low vitality, weak digestion and poorly nourished bodies.
