Alexander Hamilton's Birthday.
New York, Jan. 11.—Today is the anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton, one of the framers of the constitution of the United States and patriotic organizations throughout the country will celebrate the event by memorial meetings, banquets and in other ways. The name of Alexander Hamilton is one of those indelibly engraved upon the pages of this country's history. He was born in the West Indies on January 11, 1757, and was still a comparatively young man when he became closely identified with some of the most important events of that eventful period of this country's history. He was one of the master minds of the epoch which developed our constitutional government. To his brilliant and far seeing brain the country owes its financial system. During the period of the war and the subsequent dark years Hamilton was one of the pillars of strength. His versatility was only equaled by the strength of his grasp of matters which concerned the colonies. The history of the world has prophesied no character that it the counterpart of this remarkable man. He was orator, statesman, financier, political economist and scholar.

a block further south to a site adjoining St. Luke's church to make room for a row of modern apartments which were built upon the land formerly surrounding the Grange. Since then an effort has been made to preserve the Grange as a national memorial and to create a small park around it.

Field Has Pneumonia.
New York, Jan. 11.—Marshal Field is said to be in the most critical condition with pneumonia at the Holland House.
Dr. W. R. James, the physician attending Marshal Field, this morning issued a bulletin saying Field has pneumonia in a moderate extent, and is in no immediate danger. Stanley Field denies the report that the patient spent a very bad night.

It was announced that his condition was unchanged at 3 o'clock. Dr. Gigg remained in attendance all day. Members of the family are now here and remained in the hotel all day, showing the serious condition of the patient.

Boat for Independence.
A. D. Pettyjohn and son are trying to float an enterprise that would result in putting on a much-needed means of transportation between this city and Independence. It is a 35-foot steamboat, with six-foot beam, capable of carrying 30 passengers with comfort and safety. It will make the round trip in three hours, and cost about $1000. They will bring the project before the meeting of the Greater Salem Commercial club, probably Friday evening. They guarantee to give good service or return the money.

Roasting a Frenchman.
Paris, Jan. 11.—The trial of Jules Janinet, the sugar king, who recently failed for 15,000,000 francs, began today. He is charged with the abuse of confidence in illegally organizing the savings banks and print-works stores which he managed.

Crossed Wires.
Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—At 6:15 this morning, in the Douglas building, a fire was caused by crossed electric wires. The damage to the building was near $200,000.

ALASKA NEEDS WOMEN

Plea That Governor Brady Puts up to Mate the "Chichaucers"

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—Women! Women! Young women of healthy minds and bodies. That is the pressing need of Alaska today. So the chivalrous John G. Brady of that territory sends out his annual report, just made public, an appeal for young women to come to Alaska, bear the gentle words of love told by the mighty men of the northwest, and to try home building. His is the true cry from the wild for wives.

"As fine specimens of manhood as ever stood on two feet" are they who would become husbands, declares this governor, who ought to know. All health and courage, they have come to a country in search of a fortune. They have not been as successful as they expected, but they have not given up the struggle. Man was not made to live alone, even when prospecting. But why not return to the states for a wife? Governor Brady says they have too much pride to come back to their old homes for a visit and a wife as long as they have not the fortune.

"It is noticed," says the governor, "that school ma'ams and other young women who come here do not reside in a place but a short time before some worthy admirer turns up and tells the old story. A number of these chose matrimony during the past year. There should be no such thing as race suicide in Alaska, where we have more than nine square miles per capita. But to get these young women, that is the question. Shall the government resort to the importation of them, as women was brought to Virginia centuries ago to marry the men who would pay her passage? How to do it, the governor can't decide. "It is a delicate matter and not easy to arrange, but it is desirable to have more women of good mind and health to try this western life and home building."

says he. "Those who have a love of children and desire to rear a family should learn what special advantages Alaska has to hold to them."

It has been suggested that Alaska would be a good place for a match-making mother to take her daughters to, and maybe herself, too.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—Here are some of the recommendations that Governor John G. Brady makes in his annual report on the district of Alaska, just submitted to the secretary of the interior:

That wagon and railroad construction in the great river valleys and the extension of the systems of cable and telegraphs, particularly to Kotlikan, be encouraged.

That representation in congress be given the district, if possible, through a delegate elected by the people; or, not, through a commission appointed from among bona fide residents.

That a careful congressional investigation be made into the number of residents and their condition previous to the authorization of a local legislature with the power of taxation. "Territorial government is a sort of medicine to be avoided as long as possible," says he, "even if the quacks insist that it is the only remedy."

That a fourth judicial district be created better to protect life and business interests, particularly the mining industry.

That a mining commissioner be appointed. "The mining industry is now too large and too widespread and important," says the governor, "to let run in this slipshod sort of style any longer."

That water rights in the Seward peninsula be determined, in order to insure justice to the small miner.

That governmental medical inspection be required of employes in the salmon canneries.

That the question of seal hunting be taken up with Great Britain, Japan and Russia, and that the killing of seals be stopped on St. Paul's and on St. George's islands for eight or ten years, the natives being deported.

SALEM'S MORAL TIDE

The trial of Fanny Davenport and three others is in progress this afternoon before a jury of six and a court room filled up to the limit. The jury is composed of C. W. Yaukie, Max O. Buren, C. W. Zanker, Col. Olmstead, Charles Roth and J. M. Lawrence.

When the cases were called this morning at 9:30 Attorney Horgan asked permission to withdraw the plea of not guilty, and filed demurrers to the complaints. The demurrers were submitted without argument, and overruled as soon as read.

Attorney D'Arcy, who is assisting in the defense demanded a jury trial.

After the jury had been selected the court took a recess until 1 o'clock this afternoon. The defendants all appeared in court. The attorney made a brief outline of the case before the jury, and P. H. D'Arcy presented the case on the part of the defense. He said that the attorneys for the defense would show that the whole prosecution was but a piece of spite work, instituted by the chief of police to get even with his enemies. So far as the case has proceeded they have not shown any animus on Cornelius' part.

Cornelius was the first witness called, and, in spite of the many objections interposed by the attorneys for the defense, he was finally permitted to testify as to the character of the houses in which the women were arrested, and as to the general character of the women. He also stated that there were a number of men in the house when the raid was made, and that they scattered in all directions. When he was asked who the men were the crowd held its breath for a moment, but only to be disappointed at the answer, "I do not know who all was there."

Mr. D'Arcy in cross-examination sought to get him to admit that the purpose of the prosecution was for revenge, but this was not developed by the answers of the chief. For this same purpose they introduced as evidence Cornelius' interview as published in Tuesday's Journal.

Jim Lewis, former city health officer was the next witness called and was giving his testimony as The Journal went to press.

GREAT GAMBLING SCHEME

(Four O'Clock Edition.)
Washington, Jan. 11.—Congressman Grosvener today discussed the Philippine tariff bill at length. Williams, of Mississippi, followed Grosvener, favoring the bill, and saying it was a step in the right direction toward free trade between the islands and this country. In advocacy of the appointment of the commission to investigate the character of the corporations engaged in interstate commerce, Hepburn declared that Wall street was simply a gambling resort. He said: "The day is passed when gamblers could demand legislation by saying the financial condition of the country would be ruined if certain legislation was not passed, but such a day may return again."

HONOLULU SHERIFF THINKS

Says Mrs. Stanford Aid the University

San Francisco, Jan. 11.—A dispatch says that High Sheriff Henry, who was at the head of local police when Mrs. Jane Stanford died there in March last, has made an assertion in the island capital that the death of Mrs. Stanford was brought about in the east of Stanford University; that he believed that Mrs. Stanford was murdered.

"I believe," he continues, "Dr. David Starr Jordan took the way. He is a science crank, wrapped up in science and nothing else."

"The Stanford University, at the time of Mrs. Stanford's death, was the most urgent need of money. Mr. Jordan and Hopkins were here to investigate the cause of Mrs. Stanford's death, the real purpose being working for was to create the belief that Mrs. Stanford had died from ural causes and was not worth telling them to their faces that they were trying to do."

Killed His Mother.
(Four O'Clock Edition.)
Tacoma, Jan. 11.—Nels Nilsen Wilkerson killed his mother this morning, cutting her throat. He then killed his wife and two children with flat iron, and then blew out his brains. His wife and one child recovered, but the youngest child, one year old, was fatally injured. Loss of his land through a tax closure is said to have unbalanced mind.
