HORSE EVOLUTION NOW COMPLETED

American Museum of Natural History At Last Successful in Its Search For Missing Link.

New York, Jan. 20.—At last the chain of equine evolution is complete. After years of search, and just when all hope of success had been abandoned, the American museum of natural history, New York, has been rewarded by the discovery of remains of the "mountain horse," or Orohippus. This discovery fills in the last gap in the record which science has endeavored to make perfect.

The museum began its explorations in 1901 under the direction of Prof. Henry F. Osborn, curator of the department of vertebrate paleontology, with a trip to the Big Horn Basin in northern Wyoming. The expenses were defrayed by a fund contributed by the late William C. Whitney. At his death these special explorations had to cease, the hunt for fossil horses is now carried on in conjunction with that for other fossil animals, until some other public spirited horse lover comes forward to continue it distinctively.

The locality around Fort Bridger, Wyoming, was carefully searched for fossils, but particularly for the "mountain horse," fragments of which had been found and named by Professor Marsh in 1872. Parties sent out by the American museum visited this region in 1893 and 1895, and from 1903 to 1905, but in spite of the most indefatigable efforts the Orohippus eluded the searchers. It had begun to look as though the attempt to locate its skeleton would have to be given up as hopeless, when on the very last day of the final expedition of 1905, just when the party was about to return, the long looked for remains were unearthed. These consisted of the skull, backbone, limbs and other parts of the skeleton of the very stage wanted.

The find has not been publicly announced heretofore, and it will be some time before the museum has ready its exhibit, showing every stage of horse evolution, beginning when the ancestor of the horse of today was about the size of an Irish terrier. The museum has already classified the fossils of the horse previously found in various localities in the western part of the United States, and will thus be able now to place before the public a complete record of equine evolution from the early days of the Eocene period, estimated at three million years down to the present time.

The museum's latest discovery is of the greatest importance, not only because it will make these records more complete, but also because it may lead to the verification of the theory that the horse originated in this country. Professor Osborn will make a thorough examination of these remains and his conclusions are awaited with a great deal of interest.

A Famous Remedy for Sick Headache.

The cause of this complaint is not in the head at all; it comes from the stomach. A stomach that has become clogged by overeating, drinking or abuse in any manner, will warn you by bringing on sick headache. Cure the pain and distress in the stomach and the headache will stop of itself. All bilious attacks, dyspepsia, belching, bad taste in the mouth, muddy complexion, and yellow eyes are cured by this remedy. It is called Dr. Cass's Improved Liver Pills, one for a dose, and is sold by druggists all over the U. S. for 25¢ per box.
