PRINCESS PAULINE METTERNICH

A Viennese correspondent of a Berlin paper sends the following interesting reminiscence of a woman who once filled a large space in the public eye:

"Within a few weeks the Princess Pauline Metternich will have passed the allotted span of three score years and ten—Princess Pauline, oft bizarre and unconventional, always sprightly and amiable, full of new ideas, and today still Vienna's society queen, just as she has been for the past twenty years. From time to time there have not been lacking those who liked to make fun of this aristocratic manageress of Vienna society, but nevertheless the final result of her entertainments, bazars, etc., has been that in the course of time she has been able to distribute 4,000,000 kronen out of the profits among the poor of Vienna, and with her seventieth birthday she will begin with the fifth million. In the Princess Pauline there is an inexhaustible, natural joyfulness united with a sound and healthy human sympathy, and without her Vienna society certainly would find life a great deal more monotonous. Till 1870 she was a recognized leader of Parisian society, just as she is of society here today—a role, however, which she certainly had to share with the brilliant young empress. The empress Eugenie now, at 80 years of age, is a resigned and weary gray haired old lady, while Princess Pauline, at 70, is still full of youthful vigor. The empress and the princess were those who set the fashions in the frolicsome, gay Paris of the third Napoleon, often giving very free reins to their gayety as expressed in their new ideas. 'Marianne la Princesse' might be seen at the wild boar hunt, riding elegantly along the Bois de Boulogne, dining in the restaurant or in her salon where popular lady singers would appear to entertain the guests—all most astonishing and almost unheard of doings in those days. But in addition to all this she still found time to attend the regular Monday receptions of the empress and the emperor. She succeeded in obtaining the friendly assent of the latter for the performance of the opera of one of her musical proteges, although the composer and his work were totally unknown. The man was a certain Richard Wagner, and his opera was called 'Lohengrin.' Princess Pauline had the satisfaction of seeing her wish carried out; but on that historical first night a storm of disapproval broke over the work, and the princess was in the highest degree enraged at the scandalous scene. 'In five and twenty years Wagner will be applauded in Paris,' she declared on leaving the opera house. Facts loquatur.

Letter to Mothers

All Salem Women Should Be Interested in This Letter.

Mrs. C. W. Stump, of Canton, Ohio, writes: "I wish I could induce every mother who has a weak, sickly child to try that delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol. Our little daughter was pale, thin and sickly. She had no appetite and no ambition.

DAUGHTER OF C. W. STUMP.

"We tried various medicines, but without any benefit whatever, and she could not take cod liver oil or emulsions, as they nauseated her and upset her stomach.

"Learning that Vinol contains all the medicinal and strength creating properties of cod liver oil, but without the nauseating and system-clogging oil, we decided to try it, and the results were marvelous. She loved to take and it gave her a hearty appetite, the color returned to her cheeks and she is stronger and in better health than she has been for years.

A member of the G. W. Putnam Co. says: "We have never sold a medicine in our store equal to Vinol for puny children, weak old people, sickly women and children. Why don't you try it on our guarantee?" G. W. Putnam Co., Druggists, Salem, Oregon.

"The real secret," said the artist, "is to hang most of them in the garret, where they don't show."—Detroit Free Press.

COAL IN CROOK COUNTY

Review Tells of Valuable Discoveries of a Good Bituminous Coal

Nineteen miles due north of Prineville, at the head of Hay creek, a small band of men is at work developing, or at least prospecting, the bituminous coal discovery mentioned last week. A great deal of information could be given concerning the find if the promoters were of a talkative disposition; but they deem it best to keep their secrets until such time as the permanency or continuity of veins shall have been established. Besides, it is not desirable to have a crowd of prospectors locating and otherwise disturbing the men at their work.

This much can be given, though: The principal vein has already been uncovered for nearly 100 feet, and the seam so far is distinctly bituminous, is becoming thicker and is continuous. There is a total absence of pyrites, or sulphur, which is a good feature, as coal containing sulphur is worthless for commercial purposes. The coal is being used on the ground for cooking purposes and camp fires and is said to be the best ever.

The land containing the seams has been filed upon for purchase and the purchase will probably be consummated within the regulation period of 60 days. Indications have been unearthed upon six quarter sections all in a line and each of these is taken. If any further discoveries are made it is probable that they will be filed upon immediately, as it is the disposition of the locators to develop the whole district if conditions are found to warrant it.

Titles to the lands will be vested in individuals who have formed a company which will be incorporated shortly.

Lignite features in the main seam, which were prominent in the outcroppings, disappear entirely as the shale covering farther in is removed, the coal becoming entirely bituminous and of good commercial value. Ascertaining the continuity and permanency is a matter of development, which is progressing as fast as the weather will permit. The ground is so muddy that lumber cannot be hauled just now to build bunkers, and as there is no object in removing the coal without a place to store, it is constructed, little is being taken from the seam, the prospectors contenting themselves with taking off the caprock and drifting into the hill under the seam, which is five feet in thickness.

Under favorable transportation conditions—mainly, the advent of a railroad—this discovery will prove to be one of Crook county's most valuable assets. When tapped by a railroad the industry of mining the coal will be of the highest magnitude and give employment to many hundreds of people and being a wealth producer beyond the dreams of avarice.—Prineville Review.
