TOOZE STANDS PAT

For the Producer and the Business Interests

As the candidate for congress who has a record of constant and unswerving advocacy of Republican principles, Hon. Walter L. Toozé, of Woodburn, is making rapid progress in popular support.

As a self-made man, as a shipper of produce, as a dealer in and grower of hops, he is closer to the people who produce the wealth of the country than any other candidate.

His platform is outspokenly for the interests of labor. He has the courage to say that postal employees are not paid sufficient, and that free rural delivery men should have an allowance for horse hire.

That kind of a man means something to the common people. He is not above them, and has no interest in making a record other than they will give their approval to in the long run.

The opposition to Mr. Toozé fear the success of that kind of an independent man, and have resorted to attacks on his private character. But he has the support of the people of his own community, regardless of party or creed, and that is a sufficient answer to all attacks.

The charge that Mr. Toozé rents a brick building for a saloon, and that he drinks, and that he is a gambler are being industrially circulated by people who have never investigated.

Mr. Toozé is a business man, and makes no parade of his immaculateness in any respect. Such as he is he has been for many years. He has always been good enough to go and make campaign speeches for the grand old party.

He represents the business interests of this district as no other candidate does. As such he is entitled to the support of all business men who desire to see energetic, self-sustaining men in offices of national importance.

Two More Candidates.

C. U. Gantenbein filed his notice of candidacy for nomination for circuit judge in the Fourth judicial district, Multnomah county. He wishes to have printed after his name, the words "Justice to all without fear, favor or prejudice."

George S. Shepherd, of Portland, is candidate for Republican nomination in congress. He wishes printed after his name: "Make the dirt fly at Panama, and save 12,000 miles to market."

Pollution of California Streams.

The people are awakening to the danger and demanding of their governments the protection due them, but the awakening is often the result of a severe epidemic which has cost much suffering and many lives. That California, full of sparkling mountain streams fed from pure snow and springs is giving to many of her people this same water filled with the filth of human excreta, needs but a trip of observation to prove. It might be well to recount the experiences of a recent trip of inspection. Across one stream furnishing water for domestic purposes to probably 40,000 people, there are during the summer months, when the water is low, no less than 10,000 people using that stream as a sewer. There are many summer resorts where invalids and those recovering from acute diseases including those that are water borne, pouring their unpurified filth, loaded as it is with disease germs, into that stream, often not many rods above where another resort takes the water for domestic purposes, to again turn it back with increased pollution for those below.

In one place where the county health officer was making an earnest effort to have a new town clean up and adopt a system of sewage disposal other than the river, I saw what impressed me deeply with need of education along sanitary lines. The order had gone out from the health office to clean up, and it was being obeyed with a reasonable amount of good cheer. I walked down the stream with the health officer and constable to see the chance for locating a septic tank when we came upon a man unloading manure from a two horse wagon in the middle of the stream. This was but a short distance above the water intake of a large town, and there is a great probability that the man did not know that he was doing anything wrong. There are innumerable private camps along this stream, each one adding more to the pollution of the stream than a half dozen families living along its banks. Is it any wonder that typhoid prevails throughout that valley?

This stream is no exception; others are equally bad or worse, and the time is fast coming when with the rapid growth which California is bound to have, our streams will become what they have in many other states, mere sewers—Dr. N. K. Foster of Sacramento in California State Journal of Medicine.

WRIGHTMAN STANDS FOR TAX REFORM

Believes It Is Duty of Revenue Officer of State to Promote That Course

Albany Herald: Mr. Wrightman is and has been a strong advocate of the indirect tax for maintenance of the state government, thereby relieving the land owners and present taxpayers of this heavy burden. By the indirect tax method, which he proposes, the state would be able to collect sufficient money for all administrative purposes from corporations and companies owning valuable franchises and other property, thus cutting off the state tax which is apportioned among the several counties of the state, and by the county government taxed against the people.

The Dalles Chronicle: Mr. Frank T. Wrightman, an old-time resident of Salem, was in The Dalles for a short time yesterday, getting acquainted with our people, whom he desires to have support him for secretary of state. Mr. Wrightman organized the now corporation department in the secretary of state's office under the new corporation law, and has had charge of the department since that time. He is a very genial man, and strikes one as being the genuine sort. Mr. Wrightman is a personal friend of our district attorney, Mr. Franklin Moseley.

La Grande Observer: Mr. Wrightman is a man of standing in his home county, having been chairman of the county central committee; in the sheriff's office for ten years; is now president of the Marion County Bar Association, and is and has been in the office of the secretary of state in charge of the corporation department. Mr. Wrightman is a genial fellow to meet, and convinces every one of his ability to fill the position to which he aspires.

Portland New Age: One Salem candidate is pretty sure to get there—Frank T. Wrightman, for secretary of state—just the man for that office.

Portland Hatchet: Assistant Secretary of State Frank T. Wrightman is just the right man to advance to the head of that office. He deserves it, and no better man could be selected.

Ontario Argus: When you go to the polls on April 20th, be sure and vote for Frank T. Wrightman for secretary of state. He is just the man for the place, and will make an official that the state of Oregon can well feel proud of.

HAD NO RED.

University Buildings Daubed With Black Paint.

A dispatch from Forest Grove Tuesday says:

Considerable feeling has been aroused among students and faculty by an act of vandalism in the past week which is attributed to certain of the undergraduates. Two of the most prominent buildings upon the college campus have been defaced by black numerals and references to the faculty, painted in black in conspicuous places. If the perpetrators of the act are apprehended they will be expelled or suspended from the institution.

Often in the past members of the various classes have printed class emblems upon the grandstand and other places on the campus, but the present instance is the first time that actual damage has been done to property in this way. The inscriptions are in large letters, and spread across almost the entire side of Science Hall and the academy building. Both structures were recently painted white, and the black daubs stand out glaringly upon them. It will be necessary to scrape and repaint the buildings.

Since the painting was done certain members of the student body have been under suspicion, and the faculty will make a thorough investigation. The student body will probably insist on finding the guilty members, as the general sentiment condemns the action. At chapel today posters were circulated strongly scolding the students implicated, although no names were mentioned.

MADE A STIRRING ADDRESS

Professor Ackerman Has a Talk for Benefit of Willamette Students

Superintendent J. H. Ackerman made a strong and particularly interesting address before the students of Willamette University this morning. The speaker said he was always pleased to speak to the students of our state colleges. "I consider this university a state school; there are two kinds of state schools, those supported by the state directly, and those which receive financial backing from the citizens in the state. This is a state school, moreover, because it fits and prepares young men and women for the duties of citizenship, and its alumni have gone out to their places in all walks of life."

The great problem facing educators today is to give attention to the young people; little can be done in shaping opinions of middle-aged men, and still less those of old men. The history of education shows that it has been blocked by conservatism; progress is to come through our young people, who are now studying in our schools and colleges. It is they who will take the places on the school boards, and lead the educational movements of tomorrow.

The old curriculum, with its emphasis on the Latin and Greek, is being done away with. Men are not entering the professions as they were formerly, but the field of commerce and industry have become more attractive. "The school that is to succeed is the school whose curriculum will touch life at the most points," said Mr. Ackerman. Young people must be fitted to meet the actual conditions of life. Latin, Greek and the humanities have given away to physics, chemistry and political and social science. The schools have not progressed ahead of the people, on the contrary every change in their curriculum has been brought about by the demands of the people outside of educational circles. In proof of this assertion, the state superintendent of public instruction cited the introduction of business courses in our high schools, and the demand of the Granges that elementary agriculture be introduced in the country schools.

The time demands experts and specialists in the various lines of endeavor. Young people should not waste time in studying that for which they have no liking. They should choose one of the three divisions of work—commercial, manual or professional, and give special attention to one group. In closing he paid a high tribute to the American home, and said: "To put it in plain English, young people, get married." The sentiment appeared to take the student body by surprise, but when they had recovered their mental poise the sentiment was applauded wildly.
