A PERFECT FLOUR
When you buy flour you want the kind that gives the best results. Valley wheat is too soft to make good flour and Eastern Oregon wheat is too hard when used alone.
PERFECTION FLOUR.
Is carefully blended from both kinds of wheat and is in truth "Perfection." Grocers sell it for $1.05 per sack.

LATEST NEW YORK FASHIONS

Ribbons Everywhere; in Sashes, Hat Trimmings, Shirrod and Frilled on Gowns and Parasols, Spring Suits, Materials, Lingerie Waists, Pony and Empire Coats.

Ribbon trimmings are seen on all sides. Hats are wreathed with ribbon loops, dresses of sheer materials have garnitures in fancy beading patterns of shirrod ribbon, and ribbon edges the overlapping scant bouffes, or heads the bias folds that are used tuck fashion on circular skirts. Sashes adorn gowns of all sorts, except tailor gowns, and fashion favors. Wide broaded satin ribbons were further enriched by designs wrought in gold or silver plain, broaded or in striped effects, and heavier metal gauzes for beltings and for hat bands, while among the products of American manufacture there were less expensive but were in very pretty styles in moss roses and buds, poinsettias and violets.

"Tulip" Messalines.
"Tulip" messalines, a plain soft satin ribbon that rivals the tulip in the beauty and variety of its colorings and Pailetines just imported in soft ribbon-weave and chiffon texture, both plain and with hemstitched borders are especially designed for hat trimmings.

Thanks are due the McCall Co., makers and designers of Fashion, for handsome illustration accompanying this article.

Spring Suits.
Two styles vie with one another for leadership in spring suits. The prinmany of these have scarfs of wide sash ribbon that cross surplus fashion to replace the more conventional vest. Parasols are ornamented with plain ribbon shirrod and frilled and flared ribbons used in flat bands.

A Notable Display.
We were privileged to see the display of ribbon that is made by the H. B. Clinton Co. and were impressed by the wonderful colorings and soft, rich textures. Sashes of wide tuffets in light or dark grounds were printed in life-like reproductions of merican Beauty roses, or the stately orchids that ress with bodice skirt and loose short jacket ending high above the waist, and the circular skirt, plain or with plaited front and back and the loose short coat that ends just below the waist, and is known as the "Pony Coat." Either style is fashionable, but the princess requires most skill to make satisfactorily and is atrocious when not perfectly fitted.

Lingerie Waists.
Lingerie waists are still first choice, but they must be made of really nice material and put together daintily, or they too are atrocious. Silk waists are worn of course and the more dressy ones are made in lingerie styles with tuckings, lace insertions and embroideries. Plain silk waists are nice, especially for school girls, and cheeks make a desirable waist for utility wear. Silk waists are usually chosen to match the color of the suit, or in a shade that blends rather than contrasts.

Headwear.
Hats are small comparatively and soft straws are liked that lend themselves to being shaped and draped as readily as velvet. Crowns are often round and low in many of the newest shapes and the brim that droops all round is much in evidence. This shape is almost always trimmed with a wreath like arrangement of ribbon loops, ribbon about four inches wide of soft texture. Long sweeping, cigarette like plumes or similarly shaped plumes of juncos or coque are a feature of the most modish hats. Black hats of "erin" or horsehair braid, and of lace with satin crowns and hats of silky rose colored straw with matching trimmings are much worn. Sailor shapes are used for dress hats, the crowns rather high, and the brims very narrow. The favorite trimming is a full ruche surrounding the crown of quilled ribbon, tulle or lace edged muslin with a band of very small varicolored flowers in light tints through the center and a full bow of velvet or silk ribbon conceals the button at the back of the hat, and fills in the space becomingly.
