Every morning he found it bathed in sweat, and with its mane and tail plaited by unearthly hands. He advised Frau Koelbl to secure the services of a neighboring witch doctor. a certain Hartwig. At dead of night Hartwig entered the stable, fixed a crucifix, with two burning candles, at the horse's head, wrote some mysterious letters on the wall with "consecrated chalk," drew a magic curtain around himself, opened his book and began incantations in some unknown jargon. He shivered with the violence of his emotions, and after three quarters of an hour revealed that the witch who had 'possessed'' the horse was a certain Frau Schaumberger. At the trial the judge at first was not inclined to convict Hartwig, as he regarded the witch foctor as perfectly sincere, but on reflection he condemned him to four weeks imprisonment as an imposter.

St. Peter stood before the gate-that golden gate on high. A dozen souls from Mother Earth were slowly drawing nigh. "Here comes a bunch," he said unto an angel standing near. 'I'm glad they're coming too, for it has been too dull up here." The crowd lined up, and one by one, they told St. Peter why they thought that they should get inside of that bright home on high, And, one by one, they proved their claims, you see-until the last man took his place to make his little plea,

This last man was quite tall and had a nose quite long and sharp. Said her "St. Peter let me in, I'm sure I've carned a harp." St. Peter answered: "Tell me why. What did you do in life, that you should have a home up here away from care and strife? "

"I furnished oil for everyone," the man said, bowing low. "I furnished gasoline and such to make the autos go. I earned a billion dollars and I left it there on earth. Now, does not that prove to you, sir, my honesty and worth? And lots of men I kept out of the oil trade-they were mad. I kept them out and they were saved from losing all they had. I went to church on Sundays and addresses the Bible class. So open wide your gate and let a fellow pass."

Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horebound Syrup, and it cured him. Blemishes in the National Capital.

The police census of 1905 showe. that there were 19,076 people living in 286 of such alleys in Washingtonsome straight; others tortuous with dead ends and odd pockets harboring all sorts of ills. To learn better of the life in them Mr. Weller lived during the summer in both a "white" and a "colored" 'ally. No water, no sowerage, and some of the worst conditions of disease and dilapidation characterized Chinch Row, thre eblocks from by squeezing them? Oh, my! I'll Dupont Circle and seven from the White House, In "Factory Hill," near 'Boston," seven persons (the youngest (wo weeks old) were found living in one room, 10 by 12 feet. Of one alley Mr. Weller writes:

"O street alley exemplifies the extremes of moral degradation and affords some striking instances of overcrowding, as, for example, a six room house containing five families-only twelve individuals in this case-and a four room dwelling with a separate family in each room, one of them comprising a man, his grown daughter with her three illegitimate children and another woman who is not married to the man, but says: "I just stays with him.' Another house has three count housing their families, one of whom including two adults and two children, live in the lean-to-kitchen-un unplact ered, dilapidated, wooden shell-where they drag out greasy mattresses at night to put between them and the cold floor. In a fourth house seven people sleep in one room measuring 9x13 by 9 feet high, with only one window, 'North Court' presents the worst alley conditions discovered as to toilet and water supply, although it is located in one of the nower sections of Washington All the water required for the twenty five two story, five room wooden houses with their 139 occupants is drawn from an old pamp. There are twenty five lidless wooden box privies which violate the laws us to the size, condition and cleanliness of toilet sheds and as to their distance only three to five feet from the house, whose tenants complain constantly of the bad odors which permeate the entire neighbor hood.

"Bassett's alley, with its hidden ontrance only three feet wide, its oneroom families and no water connections at all, is especially notable for its close proximity to the secute chamber and house of represents tives. Its worst row is a rough, unsubstantial set of shacks whose lines are all out of plumb, the first floor twelve inches below ground level, ceilings sloping irregularly from a height of 7% to 6% feet, with the total window area in some rooms equal to 1-14 or 1-18 of the floor area.
