The principal speaker of the evening will be General N. M. Curtis, now of New York, but formerly of Ogdensburg. General Curtis is often referred to as the hero of Fort Fisher. FLASHED ACROSS THE OCEAN

One-half the Words Reached Ireland, But Some Got Lost

The officers and employees of a wireless telegraph concern have reported that last Wednesday 571 words were flashed across the Atlantic from Coney Island to the coast of Ireland, a distance of 3200 miles, without the use of cables, wires or any other medium than the atmosphere. This transatlantic achievement regarded as making the greatest forward step yet taken in the development of telegraphy without wires.

For several nights past Coney Island station has been sending messages across the ocean, and these messages have been received in large part by operator in Ireland. Wednesday night, however, marked the maximum of achievement. On that night a total of 1000 words was sent from the Coney Island station. Ireland reported by cable yesterday morning that 572 of these words were received and recorded. The remaining 428 words were lost somewhere between Coney Island and the Irish coast, and may still be wandering about aimlessly, trying to find the station, so that they can be picked up and recorded.

To Divert Trade to the Gulf.

New Orleans, April 5.—The first Mississippi valley and Pan-American congress, which opened its session here today, is the result of many years of agitation on the part of the commercial interests of the Mississippi valley, in favor of securing a larger share of the business which is carried on between the central portion of the United States, particularly the Mississippi basin, and the various countries of South and Central America. For a long time the commercial organizations of New Orleans and other coast cities on the gulf have made every effort to bring about concerted action of the various organizations with a view of increasing the commerce with the Latin-American countries, but their efforts did not have the desired result owing to a lack of organization. It was with the intention of remedying these conditions that the combined commercial organizations of New Orleans decided to call together a congress of representatives of the commercial and industrial organizations of the Mississippi valley. It is the plan of the organizers of this movement to form a permanent organization under the name of the Mississippi Valley Pan-American association, and to organize the movement on a large scale.

The territory represented in the congress extends from Pittsburg in the east to Denver in the west and the great lakes in the north. Nearly every prominent commercial and industrial organizations within that area is represented by delegates and in addition to the regular delegates there are several state governors, mayors of many cities in the Mississippi valley, representatives of railroad companies, etc., in attendance.

The session of the congress was opened by Henry Schrelber, chairman of the executive committee. The delegates were welcomed by Governor Blanchard of Louisiana, Mayor Dehman and the president of the New Orleans chamber of commerce. In his address James W. Porch of the executive committee called attention to the fact that the completion of the Panama canal would cause an enormous increase in the commercial activity of the south and that, by rational and concerted action, the Mississippi valley would be able to secure its just share of the business which would come to this country after the canal would be finished. He emphasized that now is the psychological moment for starting such a movement and urged the commercial organization represented by delegates in the conference to make every effort to secure favorable legislation and to co-operate in the interest of diverting as large a percentage as possible to the gulf ports of the United States.

The conference will be in session three days. The business session will be held in the forenoon and in the afternoons the delegates will make tours of inspection to acquaint themselves with the New Orleans gateway and the advantages which the city offers to shippers. Tugs will be ready to take the delegates around the harbor and along the waterfront, while the trips to the various railroad terminals will be made in automobiles. On the last evening a banquet will be given at the St. Charles hotel.

A Philippines Story.

"America in the Philippines" was the subject discussed by the Graduates' club after their recent dinner in the Aldine club's quarters, 111 Fifth avenue, New York. A warlike turn was given to the evening by the reminiscences of the early days of American occupation by General Grant and Rear Admiral Coghlan. Other speakers dwelt on the progress made and the reforms introduced. General Grant said: "My good friend Woodford kept treading on the corns of the Spaniards until our statesmen in their wisdom decided on war. Then our navy too the Philippines, and we poor fellows of the army were sent to help them when they wanted to let go." He went on to describe a conspiracy that had been formed against him in Luzon. "I thought something was up," he said. "So I stopped the mail carrier. We had a military government and no mail laws, so I opened the mail, read it, and sealed it up again. From that time the mail always passed through my headquarters. The conspirators had appointed a governor for Luzon and alcaldes and presidents for all the towns. The whole thing was to come off with the capture of myself at dinner. I had my officers mark down the conspirators, and I accepted the invitation to dinner. I never refuse an invitation to dinner. I attended the dinner with thirty of my scouts and my host was one of the men arrested. I dined with his family, and a very good dinner it was. Altogether 450 people were captured, and after we had whipped those who surrounded me and killed a few, the rest were as loyal as people could be who were afraid not to be loyal. No doubt there were some cases of improper conduct among the officers and men, but they were always stopped as soon as known. We had to use strategy sometimes. We might know a village had a certain number of guns, but we could not find them. We would march the men out to an open space and tell off three to be shot. They were led a little way off behind low bushes, and ropes were tied to their legs by soldiers lying concealed in the grass. The firing party would arrive and shoot blank cartridges. The natives legs would be pulled from under them and their friends thought they were killed. Three more were told off, the performance was repeated, until the guns were produced by the 'survivors.'"
