Not Afraid of Thirteen.

The Washington State College baseball team arrived from Pullman this morning. The Washingtonians are a husky bunch, and appear to be formidable. This afternoon they meet the Willamette University nine on the college athletic field. Typical of the portion of the Evergreen state from which they hail, they all wear the sombrero with the leather band. They are not on this trip for the athletic pleasure only, but also to advertise the Washington State College, and in this they display a commendable college spirit.
 On each of their suit cases is pasted a badge with the following caption:
 "Washington State College Baseball Team, Season of 1906. The party is made up of 13, of whom 11 are players.

REPUBLICANS GOT STARTED IN BENTON

Withycombe for Governor and Mulkey for Senator Make Good Speeches

The opening gun of the campaign was fired at Corvallis Tuesday evening, and it was a success. The Albany Republicans went over in strong force with a special train. There were also Republicans from Marion county and Portland present.

Anvils were booming and the opera house was decorated with hundreds of flags and arches trimmed with the national colors. Every seat was taken on the main floor and gallery. There were many ladies and college girls in the audience. It was an inspiring gathering, and nothing like it has ever been witnessed in Oregon politics for many years. The stage was occupied by about 40 of the Republican leaders of Benton and Linn counties.

State Chairman Westgate opened the meeting with a few well-chosen remarks, reviewing the past and stating fairly the purpose of this campaign.
 There was just claim for pride in the progress of the state, industrially and politically, and it was up to the Republicans to give the ticket this year a record-breaking majority. He won several rounds of applause, and gave Withycombe a fine send-off.

The enthusiasm was interspersed with college yells from the throats of hundreds of O. A. C. boys. Dr. Withycombe recognized the support the college boys had given him all over the state. He referred pleasantly to his competitors for the high honor. There should be clean and moral men in high office, to whom every citizen could point with pride. He said he would engage in a straightforward contest for the office of governor. He favored obliterating the factionalism of the part, and applying the principles of Republicanism for the upbuilding of the state and nation. He reviewed his platform pledges made early in the campaign. Taxation in the past has been inequitable, and the farmer had borne too much. Franchises should be limited, and intangible property should be taxed. He opposed government ownership of railroads and street car lines. He believed in a strong individualism, but favored the public control and ownership of some of the most needed public utilities. Laws should be enacted to give equal protection to labor and capital.

He believed the state should protect the forests and all natural wealth of the state. He favored river improvements and water transportation, without restriction or taxation at the locks at Oregon City. It was a constant tax on the producer. The locks on the Willamette and Columbia should be operated at the lowest possible expense.

He favored working the 250 or 300 convicts on the public roads, instead of competing with high-class labor.
 With good roads, free rural mail and other improvements, there was a future for the farmers such as would make farm life enjoyable. He spoke of Governor Chamberlain as the gentleman who had given the state a good administration, but he was human, and liable to err.

He said he denied that Governor Chamberlain was the father of the initiative and referendum and the direct primary. The governor had made that claim in his Mount Angel speech, but the Populist party had incessantly demanded those reforms, and finally the Republicans adopted them, and the Republican party enacted them before Governor Chamberlain came into office.

He denied that there was any justice in log-rolling appropriations, and the failure of the governor to veto that million-dollar bill that contained bad features was a mistake of judgment on his part. If Chamberlain had exercised his veto power the bill would never have gone to the people. If it was wrong he should have vetoed the bill, and he would have saved the state fifty to a hundred thousand dollars. He would veto any appropriation bill that was sent to him containing obnoxious or improper appropriations, and give the legislature a chance to correct such legislation before saddling upon the state and its employes charges for interest and discounts running up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He closed with a magnificent tribute to Oregon, and the young and growing manhood. "Let us have a grander and a greater Oregon. Let us all labor for the development of this state, and roll up a majority for the whole ticket that will show our appreciation of the labors of that greatest of all Americans —Roosevelt—to secure better government.
 He got a fine burst of applause that

 speech showed great familiarity with the conditions of the state, and an ability to state the case and score points against his opponent in a telling and effective manner that created a great deal of enthusiasm.

B. F. Mulkey, of Portland, Republican candidate for the short term for U. S. senator, said he was only entitled to about a minute, in proportion to the length of his term. He showed a great deal of wit and humor, that kept his audience laughing a good share of the time. He had the house well in hand, and convinced them that he had the proper dimensions for senator.

Senator Mulkey paid a high tribute to the new direct primary law. The candidates wore no man's collar. They acknowledged no boss, and, by the grace of God, there would never again be set up a boss in Oregon. No combination had made this ticket. It was made by the people. The candidates occupied a direct relation of responsibility to the people—a situation that the people should never surrender.

Frank Benson, of Roseburg, spoke for a few minutes in a pleasant way. He is the Republican candidate for secretary of state. He was born in California, removed with his parents to Portland, where his father was editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate. He was a school teacher, was twice county superintendent of schools, and admitted to the bar.

He said the office was not a legislative one, but rather an office of trust, and he pledged himself to execute his duties faithfully, and to the best of his ability. His brief remarks were well received, and he was warmly applauded.

Chairman Westgate read a short letter from Jonathan Bourne, regretting his inability to be present. His letter is as follows:

Jonathan Bourne's Letter.

It is a matter of profound regret on my part that I am unable to be present and take part in the opening meeting of the campaign, to be held in Corvallis on the evening of the 8th, inst. I realize, as the initial effort, it should be made such an occasion as to convince the people of this state that the Republican hosts are again in motion, and have taken up their march for another signal victory. Ever mindful of the fact that the Republican party is the party of Lincoln, the party of freedom, of equity and of justice, it has in Oregon evolved a system of local state government, that enfranchises citizenship as in no other state in the Union, and emphasized its claim to being the party of the people. In this day when the very life of the nation is menaced by the overgrowth of corporate power, and the national and state governments are struggling to free themselves from the grip of the monster they have fostered, the Republican party of Oregon has devised ways and means in perfect consonance with the fundamental principles of the constitution and the theories of self-government, to meet the crisis within her own jurisdiction, enforce justice and save to the people their rights and their liberties without wrong to any man. It is an achievement, however, so little we may think of it in our preconceived prejudices of today, that we shall grow increasing proud as the years go by, and as we shall witness one state after another following the example of our beloved commonwealth, until the people shall become in fact, as they are in theory, the sovereign power in this republic. We are barely upon the threshold of this our enlarged inheritance, and while there are honest misgivings in the minds of some, there is unfeigned satisfaction in the hearts of others, and the eyes of hosts of patriotic sons of sister states are fixed on us in buoyant hope. The state platform formulated and promulgated by the state central committee, and upon which the Republican ticket is presented to the electorate for its suffrage, claims and rightly claims the credit for our party of giving life and efficacy to the reclamation of all political power into the hands of our citizenship. Not the least achievement under the beneficent new order of things political, is the method by which party nominees for public office have recently been named. It cannot be charged that any man on the Republican state ticket secured his preferment by dishonorable means or by the betrayal of a fellow aspirant, and the people instinctively recognize that while the victory was to the strong, it was pre-eminently fair and clean, and that the victor is in perfect party fealty entitled to the loyal support of every defeated candidate and to every party vote.

"But there are other things that demand our earnest consideration. Our family of states is bound together by a thousand common ties. The interests of one are the interests of all in the large sense, and it is in the judgment of these in justice to each, between individual citizens, and to the world's family of nations that our political parties are founded, and the character of our national administration of affairs is shaped. Ours is a world power. We are interested in the commerce; the peace; the wars of the world. The development of the Pacific ocean's commerce and our trade and other relations with the Far East is the concern of every American citizen, and the man from Maine is as vitally concerned for the improvement of our Pacific coast harbors, rivers and defenses, as we are in Oregon, or as we all are in our shipping and tariff laws. And for the same reason the speedy completion of the Panama canal is important. The development of American genius in material affairs made possible by boundless opportunity is moving society from its ancient foundations, and the interests of the individual and the family are pro- high ideals of American citizenship foundly disturbed. As a result our high ideals of American citizenship are not only menaced but are trembling in the balance. The immigration laws of the United States need drastic revision, and those corporations employing large numbers of men should receive rigid supervision to stop slave labor, in the interest of the preservation of American citizenship, the American ideal of home, and the proper assimilation of that desirable European blood admitted to our shores. The formation of great trusts and the exploitation of the people by them are incidental to the development of our genius and opportunities. They have come to stay, but not to rule and rob for long, for their destiny is to serve and not to govern freemen, and it is given into the hands of the Republican party by the patriotism of its soul to work out the great problem and reset the stage. The spirit that breathed the breath of life into the party of Lincoln—the party of the Union—animates President Roosevelt in his noble purpose to save the country and her people from impending ruin. The Republican party and enlightened citizenship everywhere in the broad domain of the republic hail him as the peerless champion of liberty and law. He stands for the definite purpose of making ours a government of and for men and not a government of and for money and property. A Democratic victory in Oregon in the June election would amount to nothing less than a national calamity, a discrediting of him and his work, to be pointed to by his enemies and ours, and constructed as a promise of victory for the special privilege class, who worship at the shrine of their vested right to despoil the people. No single candidate on the Republican ticket can be defeated without to that extent repudiating the President and his work for the redemption of his countrymen from bondage to the corrupt power of money. No state election in years has been of so signal import to the people of this nation as that to take place in Oregon on June 4th, next, not alone on account of its significance in removing from the auction block the United States senatorship, but because it must, in the very nature of the case, indicate the approval or disapproval by the people of the most heroic efforts made by any administration for the country's welfare since the administration of President Lincoln. It is not to much then to ask and to expect that every patriotic citizen in Oregon at the June election will record his approval of the administration and the party that stands in national life for progress and for justice, and that the electorate of this state, by an overwhelming majority for the Republican ticket, may strike the keynote of the battle hymn in November.

"Confident of success for the party in the intelligence and loyalty of the people, and with best wishes, I am, Sincerely yours,
JONATHAN BOURNE, JR.

The Apollo quartet made the program go off harmoniously with music that was very acceptable. Mr. O. P. Hoff, for labor commissioner, spoke on the duties of his office for a few minutes, and that concluded the speaking program.

Robert Eakin, the Republican nominee for supreme justice, was present. He is a resident of La Grande, and one of five brothers. The oldest is Stewart B. Eakin, of the First National Bank of Eugene, and state central committee man. Herbert Eakin is a banker at Cottage Grove. J. A. Eakin is the Republican nominee for county judge of Clatsop county. The other brother, Walter T. Eakin, is merchandising at Rickreall.

Judge Eakin has served as judge of the circuit court for 11 years, and has two years to serve. He was elected over T. H. Crawford, of Union county, by 700 majority, running 20 per cent ahead of his party in some counties. Judge Eakin is not making any political speeches.

SOME REASONS.

Why Salem People Should Follow This Valuable Advice.

Because this proof is in Salem.
 You can easily investigate it.
 Not necessary to experiment.
 With some untried remedy.
 Profit by the experience of a citizen.
 N. S. Williams, carpenter, of 239 Liberty street, Salem, Oregon, says: "A number of years ago the doctors told me my kidneys were in bad shape. I came west on account of the trouble, thinking the change of climate would help me, but nothing I did gave me relief in spite of the use of remedies and medical treatment. On procuring Doan's Kidney Pills I found them the best medicine I ever used. At the time I got them at Dr. Stone's drug store I was suffering from an intense burning sensation as if two live coals were placed directly over my kidneys, the secretions from the kidneys were the color of strong black coffee and of a bad odor. After using two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I did not have the least pain in my back or trouble with the kidneys. I give all the credit for this to your valuable remedy."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

A Whole Week With One of the Best Companies Ever Showing in Salem

Lee Willard and his excellent company are doing as good work as ever shown on a Salem stage. Last night it was "Kathleen Mavourneen," the greatest of Irish plays, and it was played greatly. Mr. Willard is an actor, young, of fine stage presence, and with all the elements of greatness. He is profound natural with a keen sense of both pathos and humor, turning easily from one to the other. The play last night gave but little opportunity to any members of the company except Mr. Willard and Miss Adelaide Harland, who took the part—no—who was Kathleen. But much work as came to them was done perfectly, and Mr. Willard may well feel proud of his support.

In the last act when the curtains rise to disclose Kathleen asleep there was never a prettier little tableau than was shown last night with Miss Harland in the part. She is a beautiful woman, and with her "make-up" she reminded one of Mahomet's description of the houris who were kept within a pearl, ever young, always delightful—the reward of those who died in and for the faith and reached heaven.

Tonight the play is "Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde," a play made celebrated by Richard Mansfield, and one that is certainly "a thriller."
